I could not help but realize how preposterous it would sound in the telling. Mr. Gorman could hardly be blamed for believing that my mind had been inflamed by witnessing too many movie thrillers. Yet I had proof. There were the entries in my great-uncle's diary that I could show. I had the anonymous notes. My story of the strange whispers, if need be, could be confirmed by the old laundress, by Barbara Bradford, yes, and by Claire, too. That is, if the reason Claire had given to account for her presence in my room was the true one. It sounded logical, and yet I did not place the confidence in her that I did in Barbara.

But what I relied on most of all to convince Gorman of the truth of my preposterous tale was his own knowledge of who the telephone girl was. Just when I had reached the deduction that the band plotting against us must have a coadjutor in the building, he had come forward with the knowledge that pointed toward the person most apt to be involved.

"She Shouldn't Have Gone to Your Room. That's Just Like Her, Though."

I was pondering it all over in my mind as I left the house to meet Barbara. I was out on the street and just turning the corner when I remembered that I had spent most of the money in my pocket the night before. Retracing my steps, I returned to my apartment and took some bills from their hiding-place in the bookcase. As I emerged into the street again, I became aware that across the street was a man whose appearance seemed vaguely familiar. As I once more turned the corner, walking briskly, I glanced back for a second look at him and was surpised to see him coming in my direction.

Then all at once my subconscious mind came to my rescue. I realized when it was that I had seen him before and what made his appearance so familiar. As I left the house not ten minutes ago that very same man had been standing across the street. As I had turned back at the corner he had been coming in my direction just as he was now.

He must be following me, trailing me, shadowing me. I determined to test out my theory. At the next corner I turned sharply, glancing quickly back as I did so. He was still following me, though on the other side of the street and perhaps half a block away. I went a few steps out of sight and then stopped as if to look in a shop window. He came hurrying around the corner an instant later, slowing down as soon as he spotted me again and walked on slowly past me as if not noticing me. I waited until he was some distance beyond and retracing my steps quickly to the avenue again stopped in the shelter of a building to light a cigar, purposely wasting a number of matches. In hardly ten seconds he was back, covertly watching me from the other side of the street.

There was no question about it. He was trailing me. But who could be having me shadowed? Certainly he was not in the employ of the Bradfords or of Detective Gorman. Either he must be one of the band of plotters, or—I hated to voice my suspicion, but somehow the thought of my great-uncle Rufus kept obtruding itself. It would be just like the suspicious old miser, if it was he who had planned all this deviment, to put me in a position of trust and then to have me watched night and day.

Whoever it was that inspired this pursuit, I determined to lead my shadow a merry chase. Jumping into a taxi I bade the driver take me to a department store. Looking back I saw the shadow hastily entering another cab. Arrived at my destination I thrust fare and tip into the driver's hand and hurrying inside managed to catch an elevator just ascending. One flight up I got out and redescended to the main floor by a staircase at the rear, emerging thence on to a side street. A second taxi took me to the Twenty-eighth street subway station, and there, with no sign of my pursuer, I took a train to Times square and went to the Astor to meet Barbara Bradford, arriving on the dot of one. She was there awaiting me and we quickly found a secluded table in one of the less conspicuous rooms.

"I've told Claire everything," she said as soon as we were seated. "I hope you're not angry with me."

"Of course not. You had to tell her. I am sorry to have frightened her."

"She shouldn't have gone to your room. That's just like her, though. She always acts on the spur of the moment. She's awfully worried, too, poor girl."

"We can save her," I said.

"Why," she asked quickly, "what have you learned?"

"I was convinced that they must have someone in the house aiding them. I've found out who it is. It's the telephone girl—Nellie Kelly is the name she goes by."

"I can't believe it," cried the girl, shocked at my statement. "She's only a girl like myself. I have talked to her lots of times. I'm certain there's nothing wicked or wrong about her."

"I'm afraid there is," I explained. "I took her out to dinner last night, to the White Room. The house detective, while she was off telephoning, practically ordered me out of the place because I was with her. She's notorious. Her husband is Lefty Moore, a well-known burglar. He's in Sing Sing now. Detective Gorman arrested him. He ought to know."

"Oh, the poor girl," exclaimed Miss Bradford, tears welling up in her eyes. "I'm so sorry for her."

"But think of your sister. Think what they are trying to do with Miss Kelly's aid."

"But how do you know she's aiding them?"

"I don't know it. But I do know that nobody could pull off all the things that have been happening in the Granddeck without some one there helping them. We've found someone used to helping criminals—a criminal's wife. Isn't that enough? All we need to do now is to watch her closely and fasten the thing on her."

"How are you going to do that?"

"That's why I insisted on your coming here today. I am to meet Detective Gorman at three. I feel that he could aid us, and I think we ought to tell him everything."

"Tell the police!" Her face grew white at the thought. "Wouldn't that mean a scandal—the newspapers and all that sort of thing?"

I shook my head decisively.

"Gorman's not with the police now. He is employed as a hotel detective. But he is just the man we need to help us. He knows all about criminals and how to track them. With his aid we can quickly clear the whole thing up."

"Will you have to tell him everything—about Claire's marriage?"

"We've either got to tell him everything or nothing."

"Oh, how I wish we did not have to. The more people there are who know about things the more likely they are to become public."

"Yet you trusted me with your sister's secret."

She gave me a quick glance of confidence.

"You're different."

"I'm afraid most people would not agree with you. They would regard me as a worthless, discredited young fellow out of a job."

"But it's not your fault."

"The point is," I went on, "that we have reached a place where we need expert advice. Gorman has fortuitously turned up to give it. The only way is to tell him everything."

For a moment she debated the matter silently, her pretty forehead puckered in thought.

"Yes," she said at last, "I suppose it is the only way. But won't he want a lot of money for his services?"

"I'll attend to that," I answered. "I'll make my great-uncle reward him handsomely for recovering the Gaston jewels."

"If he does."

"He must. We've got to get them back."

From her hand-bag she produced the anonymous letters she had received and handed them to me.

"Will you want to show the detective these?"

"Yes, I think I had better. The whole tale sounds so preposterous that I need every bit of corroborative evidence we can muster."

For half an hour we lingered over the table, discussing all the aspects of the case. Eventually I think I persuaded Miss Bradford that the evidence pointed most damningly to the telephone girl as one of the conspirators or at least one of their aides. She was eager to know what plan of action Gorman would advise and as we parted we arranged to be at our adjoining windows at ten that evening in order that we might have another chat.

I found Gorman waiting for me at the place he had mentioned.

"I told you that girl was a bad one," was his greeting.

"What do you mean?" I cried. "What have you learned about her?"

"Nothing except that the address she gave you last night was phony. The number she gave is the hospital grounds"—he pronounced it "horspital."

"Where does she live, then?"

"She's keeping that under cover. She shook the taxi at Fifty-ninth and Third."

Detective Gorman to the rescue.

CALOMEL DANGER TOLD BY DODSON

Says You Cannot Gripe, Sicken, or Salivate Yourself if You Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone, which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.—Adv.

YOUNGSTER MADE WORD GOOD

Though, as It Turned Out, It Was at the Cost of Some Personal Discomfort.

Marshall, who is five, lives in a flat building. He is a real boy and although he has a rear yard and a sand pile in which to play, his mother has more or less trouble keeping him off the streets. A neighbor saw him across the street one morning and the next day called his attention to the fact that he was out of the zone mapped for him. He was one of the busy ones about a vegetable wagon. "Yes," he said, "I had to get some sings" The next morning he asked his mother for the market basket. He immediately disappeared and soon returned, accompanied by the vegetable man. In the basket were three pounds of potatoes, a box of berries and two cantaloupes. Mother had to settle whether she needed the goods or not. At any rate, Marshall made his word good with the neighbor that he had to get "some sings." When questioned by the same neighbor about his shopping expedition he said: "Yes, and mother spanked me, too."

POET'S WORD GOOD ENOUGH

Student Was Absolutely Satisfied Without the Necessity of Seeing Any Proofs.

A good story is going the rounds of Princeton about Prof. Alfred Noyes, the English poet.

Professor Noyes, it is well known, likes very much to read his works aloud to his friends, and at Princeton, with so many young men under him, he is usually able to gratify this liking to the full.

The other day Professor Noyes said to a junior, who had called about an examination:

"Wait a moment. Don't go yet. I want to show you the proofs of my new book of poems."

But the junior made for the door frantically.

"No, no," he said, "I don't need proofs. Your word is enough for me, professor."

Rich Find in an Old Dress.

When the personal effects of the once-famous dancer, "Rigolboche," who died recently in Paris at the age of eighty, were sold at auction, an old silk dress was knocked down to a second-hand clothes dealer for a mere song. On examining the garment the purchaser found concealed in the lining a bundle of French bank notes to the value of $1,060.

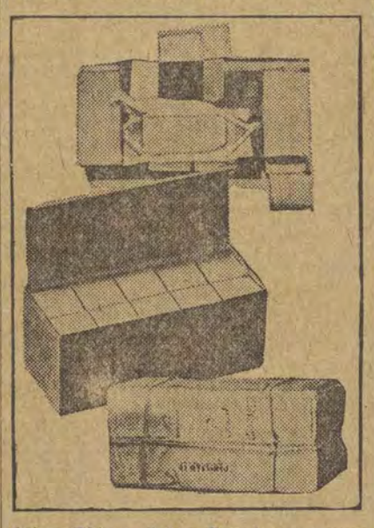
PACKAGES HELP TO SELL GOODS

Desirability of Packing Products in Clean, Sound Containers Is Emphasized.



RECENT INSTANCE IS CITED

Farmer, Who Shipped Large Amount of Butter in Dark, Unattractive Barrels Suffers Loss of 8 Cents a Pound on Shipment.

The desirability of packing farm products in clean, sound containers is again emphasized by the loss of $350 recently suffered by a producer in connection with a single shipment of butter, say specialists of the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture.

Used Dark-Colored Barrels.

This farmer shipped in barrels unsalted butter that scored 89 points. Because of the dark gray color of the barrels, which suggested packing stock butter, the receiver was unable to interest buyers in the commodity. Realizing that he would be unable to sell it at all in that condition, he salted and reworked the butter and then packed it in butter tubs. Although the butter had deteriorated in quality by this time, the appearance of the packages commanded the attention of buyers and the butter was promptly sold. The loss to the shipper was practically 8 cents a pound, or over $350 on the entire shipment—a loss that would have been avoided in the first place had the shipper packed the butter properly, and a loss that would have been greater had not the receiver done so.

The same principle applies to eggs, beans, or any other commodity, say the bureau's experts. If the packages present an inviting appearance, the sale is half made; for good-looking packages suggest contents of high quality.

Another Illustration.

Another illustration given by the bureau of markets is that of a country creamery that forwarded a five-tub sample shipment of butter to a commission firm and received an offer for future shipments. In the next shipment the creamery used second-hand tubs instead of bright, new, clean, attractive packages, such as were used in the five-tub sample. Although the butter shipped was uniform in quality and scored 92 points, the commission firm was unable to dispose of it as "extras," and the shipper was compelled to take a loss of 2 cents a pound on the shipment.

STRIPED CUCUMBER BEETLES

Clean Garden of All Forms of Vegetation in Fall and Burn It to Destroy Harmful Pests.

The best way to handle the striped cucumber beetle is by cleaning the garden in the fall of all forms of vegetation and making a bonfire of it. The adjacent plots to the garden should also be raked and the rubbish burned. In this way many species of insects will be killed that would otherwise live through the winter. Many small gardeners leave the garden cleaning until spring and then wonder at the numerous forms of insect life. One day of cleaning and burning in the fall saves several days of insect picking during the spring and the loss of a number of plants. Some observers make the statement that one day in the fall is equal to ten days of fighting the young in the spring. Among the birds that have been seen eating the cucumber beetle on several occasions are the quail, English sparrow, wren, grosbeck and oriole.

HINTS FOR SUMMER WEATHER

Extra Care Should Be Taken to See That Young Chicks Are Not Injured by Hot Sun.

In hot weather, special care is necessary to prevent chicks from being overheated by exposure to the sun, confinement where ventilation is bad, or overcrowding. The brooder should be under shelter, with good circulation of air around it, and the number of chicks should not be greater than it will accommodate comfortably under hot weather conditions.

PLAN TO MAKE YARD FOR POULTRY FLOCK

South Side of Building Is Favored by Experts.

Height of Fences Will Need to Be Regulated by the Variety of Fowls—Hexagonal Wire Netting Is Not Expensive.

If convenient, it is well to have double yards, for then one may rotate green crops. Small yards may be sown to oats, wheat, rye, rapeseed, etc., but if large yards are available they can be kept in a permanent sod of bluegrass, alfalfa, or clover. While the fowls are using one yard the green feed in the other is getting a fresh start.

If the yards are to be on only one side of the house, they should be on the south side in order that the fowls may have the benefit of the first dry ground in early spring. It not infrequently happens that in localities where snow is abundant the ground on the south side is dry many days before that on the north side.

If the yards are to be in permanent sod and are to furnish green feed for the fowls, 70 to 80 square feet should be allowed for each bird. If part of the green feed is to be provided for otherwise, and the yards used mainly for exercise grounds, 35 to 40 square feet for each bird will be sufficient, poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture say.

Hexagonal wire netting, 2-inch mesh, is suitable for fencing and can be bought cheaply. Where several runs are adjoining, the fences may be boarded up at the bottom to a height of 2 to 2½ feet, or 1-inch mesh wire can be used in place of these boards, to prevent the males fighting one another. Height of fences will need to be regulated by the variety of fowls. The heaviest breeds, like the Brahmas, may be restrained by a 4-foot fence, while most of the other breeds can be kept in by a 6-foot fence. Some of the Hamburgs and leghorns, however, need a 7 or 8 foot fence. By clipping the flight feathers on one wing they can be kept in without much trouble. Gates should be provided in order to permit access from one yard to the next.

Shade of some kind should be provided, and this can often be advantageously furnished by planting fruit trees (such as pear, plum, peach, cherry and apple) in the yard.

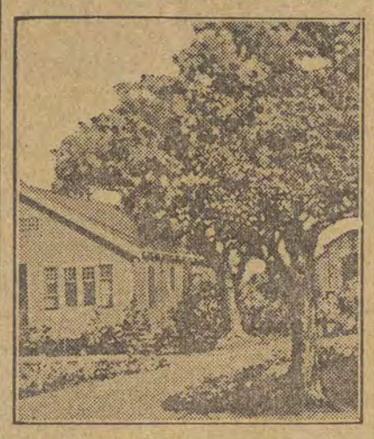
VEGETABLES GROWN IN FALL

Some of Pickling and Canning Stock Missed in Spring or Summer Can Be Produced.

After the hot summer weather is passed, when the autumn rains have begun one should plan for the fall garden. There are many vegetables that will mature in a short time that are welcome additions to the bill of fare, and some of the pickling and canning stock that we failed to get in the spring or summer can yet be produced.

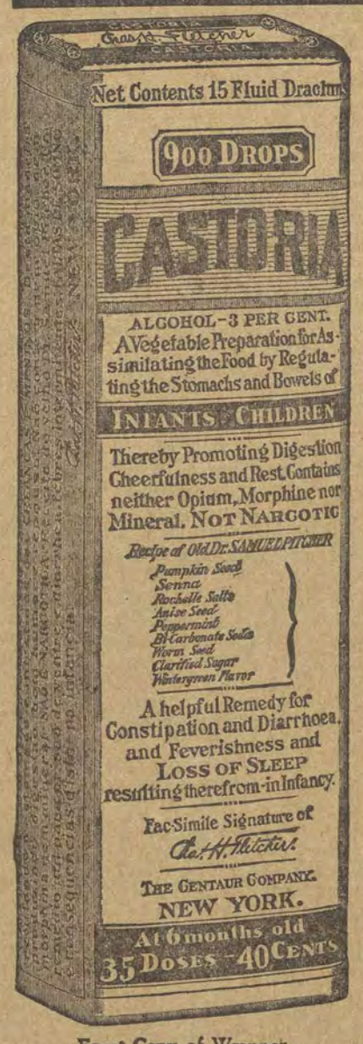
WELL SELECTED CORN SEED

Supply Should Be Set Aside at Time Crop Is Being Husked—Store In Dry Place.



The corn for seed should be selected and saved when it is being husked. Save no ears for seed which are not of medium size, fair, rows straight, even and of the standard color and borne at least two on the stalk. Seed corn should be spread out in the granary or on the top floor of the barn where it will keep dry.

FALL GREEN BEANS FAVORED



Superior Vegetable for Canning or Pickling—Red Valentine Is Always Tender.

Fall green beans are just the thing for canning or pickling as the continued cool weather is less apt to cause them to spoil. The Red Valentine is a favorite variety for fall planting as they come quick, are always tender and stringless, and yield heavily.

LOCATION OF FARM HOME

When planning to build a farm home, say specialists of the United States department of agriculture, select a location near good trees, so that their shade may be used and enjoyed by the family every day during the summer. It takes so long to grow good trees that existing ones should be cherished and utilized to the fullest extent.

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:—It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

They seldom crowd the roads in northern Minnesota, but on our last tour, when we headed into a tamarack swamp and had to take our top off because of the low-hanging trees, we did feel a trifle uncertain about the route.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Political Speakers Lock Horns at Columbiana

Reynolds and Longshore Make it So Hot That "Fritz" Couldn't Stand the Racket. He Fled From the Scene at the First Chance.

The opening gun of the present political campaign in Alabama and the Fourth Congressional District was fired last Saturday, when Judge L. H. Reynolds, Republican candidate for the United States Senate and Judge A. P. Longshore, Republican candidate for Congress from the Fourth Congressional District, engaged in a joint debate with Hon. Fritz Thompson of Centerville, who served in the role of the Democratic offering on the altar of political sacrifice. A large amount of citizens of Shelby county were present to witness the contest, and they were given a feast of thorough political discussion.

Judge Reynolds opened the discussion with a speech of forty-five minutes, in which he took up the old empty carcass of the solid Democratic south and fairly beat it to a frazzle. He poured out such a flood of bitter condemnation upon the manner in which the Democratic party has treated the South, and the blindness with which the southern Democrats have followed the empty promises of the Democratic party that the whole mess looked hopeless for defense when he had finished with it.

The main points of his speech were directed toward pointing out wherein the South has never got any recognition from the Democratic party administrations because it has been a foregone conculsion that the South would vote the ticket solid no matter what happened. And on the other hand he showed instances of the past few years where the politically doubtful states have demanded many things of the Democratic administration and got what they asked for simply because they were recognized as doubtful, and liable to vote against the Democrats if they did not give them what they asked for. These two points were very forcibly illustrated by the occurrences of 1914 and 1915, in which years the government suffered the southern farmers to be robbed of their cotton crop, and protected the western wheat manufacturers in the guarantee to them of the prices they demanded for their wheat.

The Democratic party in our own State of Alabama came in for its just desserts at the hands of Judge Reynolds. He pointed out the unfair practices that are tolerated in the school system of the state under Democratic administrations, which allow children of some of the counties as much as $33 per capita for public schools, and allot only $4 to $5 to children in other counties of the state.

Brief reference was made to the management of the affairs of this country during the war under Democratic rule which concluded with the denunciation of the iron rule of President Wilson and his sullen efforts at the domination of Congress in making such wanton and wasteful appropriations of the peoples money.

Mr. Wilson was thoroughly arraigned for his efforts to force the Senate and Congress, and the country as a whole to accept the league of nations without the dotting of an "i" or the crossing of a "t".

Judge Reynolds was followed by Hon. Fritz Thompson, who was to represent the Democratic side of the argument, which he did in true Democratic style. He began by saying that he was a Democrat because he believed he ought to vote just like his daddy shot in 1861. His speech was predicated by the sole and only foundation that a Democrat can think of for his political justification, i. e., those old worn out and flimsy prejudices that were engendered in the hearts and minds of the people during the war between the states and reconstruction following.

It was a bit surprising to hear a man of the intelligence of Fritz Thompson get up in these latter days of broad thinking and sound judgment and wave the bloody shirt of the Confederacy. It seems that his effort fell with the greatest emptiness of any speech ever attempted by a Democrat before. Mr. Thompson may not know it, but it is just such speeches as his last Saturday that is disgusting the people of the country with modern Democracy. While such reputed leaders as he are making their flowery and animated arguments based on Civil War prejudices, the people who demand some economic relief and assistance of the government for present day problems that mean meat and bread to them and clothing for their backs, are leaving the old ship of Democracy in utter disgust.

Then after disgusting his hearers with his Civil War speech, Mr. Thompson completed his baby act by laying all the negro equality charges he could rake and scrape at the door of the Republicans. He did not choose to defend the Wilson administration for its neglect of the vital things that concern the people, but stayed close by those old issues that once divided our country asunder, but which sound empty and void now to all men who are accustomed to think of our country and our government in terms of what it means to the life and living of the present and future generations.

But no one who listened to his speech knew any better than did Mr. Thompson, of the utter ridiculousness of the arguments he made. He thoroughly realized that what he had said would not stand the fire of Judge Longshore who was to follow him and consequently as soon as he had finished his remarks he left the court house and in true Democratic style, betook himself to the tall uncut timber of the wilderness. He knew that his old prejudices would be roasted to a nice brown by the able and vindictive tongue of Judge Longshore.

After Judge Longshore had given his friend Thompson a few broad sides everyone could see where Fritz was wise in getting out when he did. He was not only roasted to a nice brown, but he was burnt to charcoal in most places. And while Longshore was skinning Thompson and the Democratic party in general the audience roared in a long peal of continuous jubilant applause.

The curtain of Civil War prejudices which Fritz had put up to defend himself and the Democrats from the darts of Judge Reynolds was swept away by the first blast from Longshore, and with the foe left open in a barren waste, the speaker began hurling his big shells into their ranks to the complete disorder and obliteration of every vestige of defense that Thompson had prepared.

It was amusing to see what a fool Thompson has acted in his charging the Republicans with playing politics with the negro, when Judge Longshore produced records and newspaper clippings that told of how President Wilson had only last year carried the negro Moton from Tuskeegee with him to Versailles to frame the league of nations; of how he had appointed Emmett J. Scott, another Alabama negro, as Assistant Secretary of War to Mr. Baker; and numerous other instances where Mr. Wilson and other Democratic politicians had given federal appointments to negroes in recent years only in the hopes of getting their support in the elections. Mr. Longshore did not deny that Republicans had sought the negro vote and had appointed negroes to office; but he did denounce such practices. He showed Mr. Thompson up in a mighty bad light as trying to lay that kind of stuff on the Repubicans when the Democrats are as deep in the mud as the Republicans are in the mire.

After Judge Longshore had finished Mr. Thompson up good and proper on his Civil War and negro bunk, he then proceeded to deal at length with some of the fallacies of modern Democracy as portrayed and perpetrated on the country under the regime of Wilsonism. The league of nations and Mr. Wilson's trip to Europe in the interest of same was held up to his hearers as the mightiest piece of political indiscretion, and the most monstrous governmental blunder that this country had ever witnessed.

It may be truly said that when Mr. Longshore had finished with his great speech there was not enough of Fritz Thompson's old hide-bound political prejudices left to be worthy of mention. He made a speech the like of which he alone can make. It was a characteristic speech; it was a timely speech; it was an able speech; and more than all it was a speech that met the approval of his hearers because they realized that it was the real unadulterated gospel truth about Alabama and the South and the United States so far is politics is concerned.

This meeting and speech-making was, as stated in the beginning, the opening of the campaign of Judge Reynolds for the United States Senate, and of Judge Longshore for Congressman from the Fourth District of Alabama. They will continue the fight throughout the state and the District, and the voters will this year have a chance of viewing the sensible side of politics in Alabama and the United States as well as the old dry and empty skeleton of the Democratic side. This campaign is going to be an eye-opener for the people of Alabama. It is going to wake up such fellows as Fritz Thompson, who are deceiving themselves by the idea that the people will forever follow them in their blind prejudices and vote the Democratic ticket and place Democrats in power at Washington only to be answered back, "Depart from me, I know ye not," when they ask the government for anything that they need.

While Nero fiddled Rome burned to the ground. And in like manner while Fritz and other Democratic leaders of Alabama and the South are fiddling their time away, some of these times, and not far away, the old Ship of Solid Democracy will go on the rocks, and be beaten to pieces by the great flood of growing Republican sentiment throughout this the fairest portion of our great country.

SHELBY COUNTY CITIZEN TELLS OPINION OF COX AND THE LEAGUE.

In 1916 Woodrow Wilson said vote for me and I will keep you out of the war. In less than eight months after his election we were thrown into one of the greatest wars ever known to mankind. But Mr. Wilson was playing politics then; he wanted to be re-elected, and was, on that promise, "I will keep you out of war." Now the candidate, Mr. Jas. Cox, says, "We must have the League of Nations as presented to us by the father, Woodrow Wilson, and forever have peace and quietude."

Yes, we have peace now and 16,000 of our American boys are across the seas to-day guarding the interests of those whom we had to fight with all the adverse circumstances to maintain their republic.

Yes, Jimmy, as he is called, is a new doctor, but he has the same old remedy that the father, Woodrow, had, the League of Notions, a document that will forever destroy, if accepted with Article X, the sovereignty of this great Republic.

Now with all the oppression by the autocrats of the old world mess, Mr. Wilson and Jimmy Cox say that we must link our precious union to those of the old world, and be ready at all times to to defend and protect the political integrity and territorial boundaries of the great empires of the world. Article X guarantees this and the Congress of the United States nor the President have anything to say or do, other than as members of the league. Vote against the sending of our boys over there, and America has one vote against 32 of the empires of the world. Wake up mothers, and fathers and young men, look and see what you are about to have thrust upon you, that is, if the Democratic party should be placed in power again this fall. Cox says we must have the League as Woodrow Wilson brought it to us, and if you vote for Cox it means a vote for the League of Natioins, which will continually be sending your boys across the briny deep to fight for the greedy and autocratic empires from now, henceforth and forever. Would you sacrifice your blood-bought liberties to satisfy the fancy dream of world dominion in the mind of a man like Woodrow Wilson, who has spent a great part of his term as President of the United States, in foreign countries dining with kings, queens and princes?

Now Mr. Cox says vote for me and I will bring peace to the country by harnessing the league of nations upon you—a peace that will be lasting and satisfying. God forbid that such league with its iron hand of opression should ever be placed upon the heads of the liberty-loving people of this the only free and independent nation on the face of the earth. We are not alarmed. The fathers and mothers of this country, who love God and believe in the promotion of Christianinty, will never give their approval to such a move that is destined to destroy the foundation of our civil liberties.

This question is one that should receive more thoughtful consideration than anything that has ever confronted our country. It simply means, if put upon us, the destruction of the only free nation left upon the face of the earth, and joining it to the greedy empires of the earth who are controlled by the Catholic church. To join this league as presented by Woodrow Wilson is placing our future destiny in the hands of the Catholic church, and we know that the Catholic church is the greatest destroyer of human liberty that has ever been loosed upon the face of the earth. To join them in the league of nations, we will be subject to their call, for they will vote a majority in the league. What could be a better scheme for the Catholics to get control of the world? It plays exactly into their hands.

What will the liberty-loving people of America think of Wilson and Cox for advocating such a combination as will mean such utter destruction to every principle of American integrity? By their love of humanity and the rights guaranteed us under our constitution, they will bury Wilson and Cox so deep that they will not emerge by resurrection day.

Talk about tying the future posterity of this Christian nation to the Catholic church, which says to you that the public schools of this country turn out thieves and robbers and that they are not Anglo Saxons, but Anglo Maniacs. If you were to put them in power they would destroy every church and schoolhouse in this country, and they would force you to attend the Catholic church, and a refusal would mean that your freedom to live outside of a penitentiary will cease right there, and your place henceforth would be behind prison walls.

Bind yourself to the dominant figure in the league of nations, the Catholic church, which will tell you that if you are not maried by a priest, you are living in adultery, and that your children are illegitimate? If you are in favor of this condition, vote for Cox. That is what it means. Not a matter of whethtr you want a Democrat or Republican for President, but a matter of whether you want the League and Catholic dominion or not.

If you will vote for that stalwart American, Warren G. Harding, you will forever be protected from such imposition, and your liberties will be safeguarded. He has done this in the Senate. He helped to keep that infamous imposition from being adopted by the Senate, and thereby helped to save the blood-bought liberties of the people of America. And he promises that he will continue to defend the civil and religious liberties of our people from foreign encroachment if he is elected to the position of our Chief Executive.

Harding is a member of the Baptist church of this country, that has no tinge of the dominant figure of the league. He is a Baptist, but no better than a Methodist, Presbyterian or any other Protestant because he is a Baptist; but you can be assured that he is in all things American, and ready to defend every tradition of Americanism that has been handed down to the sons and daughters of this country from fathers who stained the hillsides and valleys with their blood fighting for these liberties.

Harding stands for the flag. Cox says he stands for Wilson and the League of Nations. Harding is a true American, one who is not afraid, and he has the courage of his convictions.

Next November the people of this country will either further preserve their liberties by electing Harding and Coolidge, or surrender those liberties to the autocratic empires of the old world through the league of nations by voting for Cox.

Miss Alpha Ratliff, the little daughter of Wess Ratliff, has been released from the Clanton Infirmary and has returned to her home after a long but successful fight against the great odds of a very severe attack of appendicitis. When Drs. But the skillful minds of these two faithful doctors, and the careful attention of the nurse brought the patient to a seemingly most miraclous recovery. Even the doctors say they don't hardly see how it was done, but it was.

Workers in all the towns in Upper Silesia have struck in protest against the war between Russia and Poland. A crowd at Kattowitz attacked a detachment of French cavalry, killing one trooper, whereupon the French opened fire with machine guns and grenades, killing nine and wounding twenty-six.

French troops clashed with the inhabitants of the town of Kattowitz, an important mining town of Upper Silesia, eleven persons being killed and twenty-six wounded. Polish troops attempted to break up a mass meeting at Rybnik, about twenty-five miles southwest of Kattowitz, and in the resulting disorder one person was killed

Uninterrupted rifle fire and hand-grenade explosions are reported to be proceeding at Kattowitz, Upper Silesia, where serious fighting occurred between French troops and civilians who struck in protest against the Russo-Polish war and demanded disarmament of the occupational troops. The French officer commanding at the office of the inter-allied commission is said to be directing negotiations with the crowd and it is alleged held out the prospect of the soldiers' arms being surrendered.

Reports of Polish military successes have reached Warsaw. The population is eagerly awaiting news from Minsk, where the Polish peace delegates are to negotiate with the representatives of the Russian Soviet government.

The strike fever is said to be spreading all over the island of Jamaica, which is due, according to economist, to the increased cost of living. The civil government, becoming scared, has called out the police to assist the military contingent.

A successful counter offensive is reported to have ben launched on the Warsaw front under the leadership of the Polish commander-in-chief. The Russians are reported to be retreating at several points.

In the fighting in the region of Radzymin, a chaplain was killed while leading the attacking forces clad in his church habit and with a crucifix in his hand. Five Polish oficers also are reported to have been killed.

Poland's army is rapidly following up the retreating enemy northeast and east of Warsaw, and further successes for the Poles are reported. The recapture of Sokolow, Drohiczyn and Biala, with thousands of prisoners and great amounts of war material, is reported in an official communique. At Siedloe the Poles captured armed volunteer Jewish detachments composed of local communists.

To the northwest of Warsaw the Bolsheviki attacked Plock in a drive designed to carry them across the Vistula, where there is a pontoon bridge, but a Polish counter stroke broke the attack. In this operation the poles were aided by civilians who fought side by side with the infantrymen.

Another tragic chapter of the series of Arab risings against the British in Mesopotamia has been received at Bombay. The message says that Mr. Drigley, a political officer; Brandfield, commandant of the levies; Mr. Buchanan, an irrigation oficer, and two British non-commissioned officers were killed at Shas Raba, Mesopotamia.

Cabled reports from Tokio that a plot to "hold" the party of American congressmen now visiting the far east when it arrived in Korea had been unearthed, were characterized by Kiusic Kimm, chairman of the Korean commission, who is in Washington, as "another groundless Japanese fabrication." "No sane or even insane Korean would dream of holding the American congressional party," Mr. Kimm declared.

A contribution from Secretary Daniels started on its way around the world a unique collection box which will be sent to every Marine post and station on the map to raise funds for the erection of a memorial tablet in the Belleau wood cemetery, France, to the Marines who lost their lives in that battle. The fund is being raised by the Belleaun Wood chapter, American Legion, composed of 308 women who enlisted in the Marine corps reserve during the war.

His statement accompanied the publication of the translation of the French note which was delivered to the state department on August 14 by Prince de Bearn, the French charge.

Press advices from Seoul, Korea, allege widespread Korean plots to hold the party of American congressmen at present visiting the Far East for the purpose of creating complications between Japan and America.

The department of justice does not intend to make any effort to fix the price of coal, but it is determined, according to officials in that department, to keep the price of coal within reasonable bounds, and it is opined that the price is all out of reason.

Active steps to limit the prices charged consumers for coal in various parts of the country will be begun shortly by the department of justice, it is said by officials

Regret over his opponent's announcement that he probably will not make an address at the Ohio State Fair August 31, was expressed by Governor Cox at Columbus, Ohio, when informed. "I am very sorry Senator Harding is not going to speak," he said, "as I already have spent more than an hour preparing my speech which I hoped to deliver from the same platform. I had expected to request that I be permitted to speak first, granting the courtesy to the senator of being permitted to answer me."

Four more coal operators at Knoxville, Tenn., were held to the December federal grand jury by United States Commissioner Powers following hearings on charges of making excess profits in coal deals in violation of the Lever law. Those bound over were A. M. Stewart of the Clearfield Jellico Coal company, and T. P. Witherspoon, Emery B. Davis and G. G. Crowley of the Blue Diamond Sales company. Bond in each instance was fixed at $1,000.

It will be necessary for 500 persons to sign the petition before his name can be placed on the ballot.

Three unknown negro highwaymen entered the general merchandise store of I. Shinfield in Atlanta, Ga., at night and, with drawn guns, forced him to elevate his hands above his head. Mrs. Shinfield appeared on the scene and, with an empty sodawater bottle, knocked one of the robbers out of the store. She seized an empty ten-pound lard can and threw it at another and the third fled for his life.

Arthur T. Walker, former clerk, is having quite a run on the front pages of the New York newspapers. Walker recently was left a fifty million dollar residuary estate, Edward B. Searles being his benefactor, and New York is unable to understand how it happens that a man with an income of around ten thousand dollars a day should continue to live in a two-room flat in Brooklyn and go to work every morning at nine o'clock. That, it appears, is what Walker does.

A band of New York City river pirates attempted to loot a North river pier where $500,000 worth of liquor was stored, and were driven off by a watchman in a pistol battle. Several of them, who jumped overboard from a launch in which they drew up to the pier, are thought by the police to have been drowned.

REPUBLICANS TO FACE HARD TASK

Extravagance of Administration Responsible for Much of Enormous Debt.

COUNTRY CALLS FOR RELIEF

With the G. O. P. in Power Tax Burdens Will Be Lifted From Shoulders of the People as Was Case After the Civil War.

The next president to assume control of the nation will have a mighty task to his hand. Only a part of it will be the consideration of its Brobdingnagian tax bill. That word is used to indicate that the bill is a whopper. Its Gargantuan size is as unfamiliar to many as the only terms in which it may be fittingly expressed. Preliminary figures compiled by the bureau of internal revenue show that during the fiscal year ending June 30 the people of the United States paid into the federal treasury the staggering total of $5,410,284,875 in taxes. It is the greatest annual tax bill ever assessed against any nation; it is nearly 75 per cent more than the taxes paid during 1918 or 1919, when war expenses were at the peak.

Estimating the population of the United States at 120,000,000, the taxes paid last year amount to an average of $45 per capita. It is a sum no other nation on earth could stand. The total represents about 2 per cent of the aggregate wealth of the country. Much of this enormous debt was saddled on the country by the waste and extravagance of the administration, particularly during war, but still continuing. The revenue derived from income and excess profits taxes during the fiscal year amounted to $3,944,555,737. This was a heavy handicap to place upon industry struggling to reach a normal status.

The American people never again should be called upon to pay such a tax bill and much of it could have been avoided this time by the administration which is asking the people for a new lease of life. With the reasonable economy promised by its opposing party it should be possible to reduce the tax burden from year to year as that party reduced them after the Civil war. To see that it is done Senator Harding has pledged his brains, his strength and his sacred honor.

Senator Harding does not believe in wielding a club to make members of any legislative vote for any question. That is the Democratic method.

Democratic View of Coolidge.

In an editorial in which it speaks of Governor Coolidge donning the working garb of his forefathers and toiling, as they did, in the fields, the New York Times, Democratic, says of the Republican candidate for vice president: "In putting it on Governor Coolidge honors a vanished race of clear-headed, ironical, independent and most desirable citizens. He has their courage, their honesty, their shrewdness, their capacity for hard work, their public spirit. There is no political masquerading about him. He has gone back to the old place. It has interested him to don his grandfather's working clothes. His granfather's virtues he doesn't have to don or borrow. They are his by inheritance and nature."

Let the Country Know.

The wish of Franklin D. Roosevelt that every American citizen might have witnessed the meeting that Sunday morning of those two great men is echoed by all of us. Two men shaking hands doesn't interest us but the citizenry would have liked to have been with them then to inquire what were those secret obligations Mr. Wilson entered into in Paris with Great Britain and Japan which Mr. Cox without explaining said: "What he promised, I shall, if elected, endeavor with all my strength to give."

"The laboring man who seeks a square deal from a political party will get it from the Republican party."—Senator Harding.

Heavy Going for Democrats.

With the president pulling one way and the congressional committee pulling another, and the deague organization making heavy weather in Europe, what wonder that the Democratic presidential nominee and his manager are having their difficulties with the ratification issue?

Their troubles are the greater, too, because the Republicans, realizing their position, are openly expressing a determination to hold their opponents to the casus belli selected with noise and fury at San Francisco.

Coolidge Commands Confidence.

It is certain that whatever public responsibility comes to Governor Coolidge, the country will be able to tell where he stands and what to expect from him. He will build no smoke screens to hide his policies; he will indulge in no evasions and no vagueness. More than ever, Senator Harding ought to be well satisfied with the running mate the convention gave him, and more than ever the public ought to have confidence in the soundness and good balance of the Republican national ticket.

MAN KILLED BY PUNCH ON JAW

Controversy Over Responsibility for Automobile Accident Ends Fatally.

NECK BROKEN BY BLOW

Man Is Hit When He Makes Uncomplimentary Remark About Woman and Is Dead Before He Hits the Ground—Four Arrested.

Greeley, Colo.—A punch which landed on the jaw killed William Swint of Denver. The blow broke Swint's neck and he was dead before his body hit the ground.

Four men, members of an automobile tourist party en route from Denver to Wyoming, are under arrest as witnesses to the killing of Swint. One of the men, R. H. Blackburn of Wichita, Kan., is said to have struck the blow that killed Swint. The four men with two women, wives of members of the party, left Denver in two automobiles bound for Wyoming, where they intended to look up some homesteads.

Cars in Collision.

Swint and his friend, H. Farrington, also left Denver about the same time intending to do some fishing in the northern part of the state.

The Swint machine overtook the homestead seekers just south of Fort Lupton, and in trying to pass one of their cars, collided with the one driven by Blackburn. After inspecting the damage Swint agreed to drive to Fort Lupton where he said he would make a money settlement. When they arrived there a controversy arose as to who was to blame for the accident.

Swint, it is alleged, made some uncomplimentary remarks concerning one of the women of the party, whereupon Blackburn struck him a powerful blow on the jaw with his clenched fist, knocking him down.

Caught by Deputies.

The homestead seekers then quickly re-entered their car and drove rapidly northward leaving Swint lying on the ground. Harrington at first thought his friend had been knocked unconscious and it was some time before he realized that he was dead.

Harrington stopped some passing automobiles and asked them to send him assistance, which they did. When it was found that Swint was dead, a telephone message was sent to the sheriff at Greeley, who immediately sent deputy sheriffs in different directions looking for the Blackburn party. They were found north of Evans and placed under arrest.

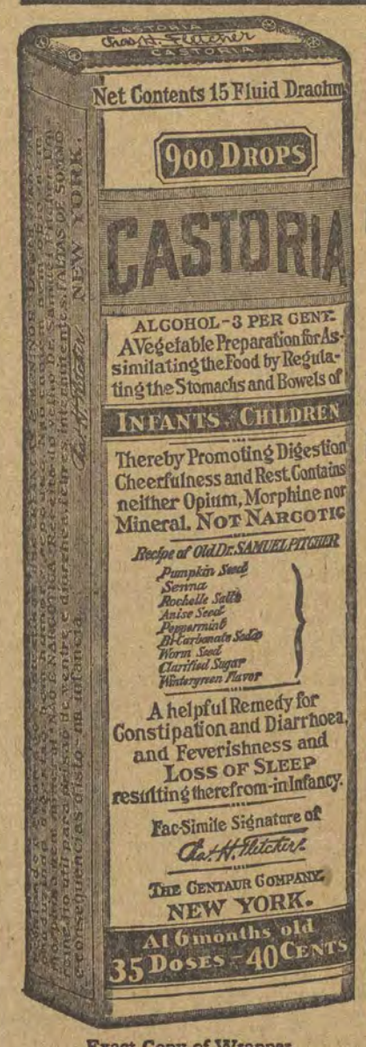
Child's Illness Made Father Seek Woman Whom He Saw Only One Day a Week.

Chicago.—Because his child was seriously ill, U. C. Hatfield, appealed to the authorities to help him locate his wife, whom he sees on Sundays only.

The separation of the couple was due, not to trouble, the man declared, but to the fact that "she wanted to work, so she started out to find a job and a furnished room. She didn't give me her address. We were together every Sunday though."



Hatfield wanted his wife to see their baby before threatened death came.

FAMOUS OLD BOSTON ABODE

Province House, Once One of the Most Famous Colonial Mansions, Has Been Partially Preserved.

There stands today on Bossworth court in Boston but a portion of the old Province house, a most interesting relic of Colonial days; and the rest of the court is lined with modern office buildings. But in 1820 it was considered a very genteel part of town. Oliver Wendell Holmes lived in the old Province house for 18 years.

At the farther end of the court stands an iron-wrought archway, decorative of design, which was used in the early part of the nineteenth century as an entrance to the governor's garden, a part of the Province house grounds. This has been carefully preserved, as have the stone steps which lead to the lower level. The Province house was immortalized by Hawthorne in his "Twice-Told Tales."

The historic staircase now is gone, and only a portion of the exterior of the house if left. It was built in 1697 by Peter Sargent, a wealthy London merchant, and was considered one of the handsomest residences in town. During the days of its popularity the governor gave many balls there.

MISTAKEN IN HIS SURMISE

Mr. Brown Somewhat Hasty in Blaming the Gramophone for Those Unearthly Sounds.

Perfect peace reigned in the Brown's household. The head of the family, his day's work over, was reading, in blissful anticipation of the evening meal which Mrs. Brown was busy preparing in the kitchen.

The gentle stillness was suddenly broken by eerie sounds, apparently coming from the next house—a weird moaning, developing into heart-rending wails and harrowing shrieks.

Mr. Brown jumped up.

"It's Mrs. Wood's confounded gramophone playing Tosti's 'Good-by'" he cried. "Lizzie"—to his oldest daughter—"go and implore her to stop it! Tell her I'm ill—tell her we're all ill, anything you like, only make her leave off!"

The child obediently hurried out, and two minutes later came rushing back.

"It's not Mrs. Wood's gramophone, dad," she said. "It's the Murphys down the street opening a tin of corned beef!"

The House of Whispers

By WILLIAM JOHNSTON

Copyright by Little, Brown & Co.

A SECRET PASSAGE.

Synopsis.—Spalding Nelson is occupying the apartments of his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. The Gastons, leaving on a trip, tell him about mysterious noises and "whispers" that have scared them. He becomes acquainted with Barbara Bradford, who lives in the same big building. He instinctively dislikes and distrusts the superintendent, Wick. The mysteries in his apartments begin with the disappearance of the Gaston pearls from the wall safe. He decides not to call in the police, but to do his own investigating. It is soon evident that someone has access to his rooms. Becoming friendly with Barbara, he learns that her apartments are equally mysterious. She tells him that several years before her sister Claire, who lives with her, had made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson takes Miss Kelly, the telephone girl, to dinner with the idea of pumping her. Gorman, a hotel detective, recognizes her as the wife of Lefty Moore, a noted burglar. Nelson tells his story to Gorman.

"And the number she called up—the private number—did you find out about that?"

"Sure, that was easy. It's one of the apartments in the Granddeck—Henry Kent's. Who's he?"

"I never heard of him. I'll try to find out, though."

"I would, but be careful how you go asking questions around the place. The Moore woman may have a pal. They generally work in pairs."

The ease and celerity with which Gorman had learned all these things about the girl impressed me greatly, and I said as much. He received my compliments with a deprecating wave of the hand.

"Nothing to it, boy, when you know the ropes. But last night you told me you had taken the girl out to try to pump something out of her. What was it? What's doing?"

From beginning to end I told him the whole story in all of its perplexing details, starting with the day that I had received my great-uncle Rufus' note that had led to the chance meeting with Miss Bradford, bringing in my discharge and the disappearance of the Gaston pearls, and explaining what made me think these facts were in some way involved with the attempt to blackmail the Bradfords.

"What do you make of it?" I asked as I ended my narrative. "Who do you think is at he bottom of it?"

"I don't think," he retorted. "In our business it does not pay to think too quick. You're apt to convict the wrong party."

"But you must think something," I protested.

"I think," he said slowly and meditatively, "that there's a lot of crooked work going on—I'll say that much. And you and Miss Bradford's pretty close to being the center of it."

"What can we do about it?"

"There's a way I learned from a lawyer that ain't bad. He'd take his client and put him in the center of a big circle with lines running in all directions — alibi, insanity, mistaken identity, no proof of guilt, lack of jurisdiction, escape on legal technicality—he'd mark out every possible defense. Then he'd follow each line out and see where it led and what plan the opposing lawyers would be likely to spring on him. Generally he got his man off."

"I don't quite see how that applies."

"You don't, eh?"

He traced an imaginary circle with his forefinger on the table in the little back room where we were sitting.

"Here's you and Miss Bradford in the center, surrounded by a lot of mysterious deviltry. We'll make two circles. This inside one is the things that have happened to both of you—the wall safes opened, the papers stolen, the pearls gone, the anonymous notes, the blackmail threats, the loss of your job, the voices you've heard. Now on this outer circle we'll mark down all the people who might be mixed up in these things—mind ye, I say only might be. First, there's Lefty Moore's woman—we know she's a crook. Then who do we know that knows her? There's at least two—Mr. Wick, the superintendent that hired her, and this Mr. Henry Kent, whose apartment she telephoned to. Then there's all the rest of the help in the house. Any one of them might be her pal. Then there's the flighty Bradford girl——"

"You don't suspect her, do you?" I cried, horrified at the prospect of his investigation taking this turn.

"Be easy," he retorted. "I'm not suspecting anyone. I'm only putting them down. There's the Bradford girl and her ex-husband. He's a bigamist and that makes him a crook. Those two men you saw in the park, one of them with a scar on his face—we'll run them down. You know a safe the scar-faced man goes to, so that's a start. There's the man who shadowed you—would you know him again if you saw him?"

I shook my head doubtfully.

"I'm afraid not," I admitted, "you see—"

"Don't bother to explain. You either would or wouldn't, and that's all we need to know now. There's old Mr. Gaston and his wife. It's queer about their ducking out so suddenly and leaving no address, but maybe they're only scared. Let's see who else is there—the Bradford servants and the old man's, the old washerwoman—and the families who live in the house. We've got the circle pretty well covered, haven't we?"

More and more I had begun to appreciate how valuable the services of an experienced detective would be likely to be in helping to solve the mystery.

"Look here, Gorman," I said, "why can't you take charge of this case for us?"

"What's in it?" he asked.

My face fell, and my enthusiasm died a sudden death. Once more I was confronted by the specter of my poverty. Of what use my talking to a high-priced investigator like Gorman when all the money I had in the world was less than two hundred dollars, out of which I had to live until I found employment. Yet I must serve Barbara Bradford.

"If you clear up this case," I announced, "I'll give you every cent I've got in the world."

He shook his head.

"It ain't enough. If I take this case, it won't be for the money that's in it. For that matter I can get all I want from old Gaston for getting his pearls back. That'll be enough."

"Then you will take the case," I cried jubilantly.

"On one condition. That you'll promise to keep everything away from the police."

"I'll promise that for myself and Miss Bradford, too. That was the one reason she advanced against my telling you about things. She was afraid you'd call in the police."

"Never fear about that. There's nothing I'd like better than to put it over that bunch of young reformers they've got down in Center street. This hotel work don't suit me, anyhow. I've been thinking of opening up an office of my own. The recovery of the Gaston pearls would be a nice feather in my cap to start with."

"I see," I replied, "but you'll need money for expenses and that sort of thing, won't you? I have—"

"Leave that part of it to me," he retorted with a quizzical smile. "After all the years I was on the police force I ain't exactly broke by a long shot. All you've got to do is to keep your eyes open and let me know all that goes on in the apartment house. I'll attend to the rest. Don't do anything, though, without consulting me first."

"I'll gladly promise that."

"Good enough. We'd better arrange then to meet here every day at three sharp. It's as good a place as any."

"I'll be here."

"And look out you're not trailed. They may try shadowing you again."

"Who do you mean by they?" I asked eagerly.

"Them that trailed you yesterday," replied Gorman with a grin. "If you don't know, I don't know either—yet."

From his manner I was confident that he already had a shrewd suspicion as to the identity of some of the miscreants. The maze in the center of which he had placed Miss Bradford and myself meant far more to him, undoubtedly, than it did to me. More than likely his vast knowledge of the methods of criminals and his acquaintanceship with others like Lefty Moore had given him clues enough as to where to look for the plotters. I realized that it would be useless to question him further. He would admit suspecting no one until he was sure of their guilt, a quality I admired greatly.

"You can count on me," I repeated. "I'll be here at three tomorrow."

Yet how foolish it was for any of us to predict what we will be doing or where we will be twenty-four hours from now. Seldom do things happen in the routine of our lives as we had anticipated. I was not there the next day at the time appointed. By no possibility could I have been there, however much I might have wished to. Many things had happened in quick succession.

How it came about that my promise to meet Gorman went unfulfilled can best be explained by narrating the events of the evening after I returned to the Granddeck. It was nearly five when I left the detective. I strolled leisurely down town and had dinner in the cafe where on one occasion I had seen the scar-faced man. I lingered there for a long time over my coffee hoping in vain that he might appear. I even ventured to cautiously question the waiter and head waiter, describing the man as best I could, but both of them insisted that they never had seen any such person. As I walked home I kept a wary eye out to make sure I was not being followed, but apparently no one was now shadowing me.

It was nine-thirty when I reached home. It had been arranged that Barbara about ten would signal me that we might have a chat from our respective windows. As I sat in my room waiting for the time to come, I was reviewing the case in all its aspects. Indeed there was hardly a waking moment that I was not thinking of the many mysteries about us. I was wondering if, when the case was cleared up the mysterious whispers that we all had heard would also be explained. I recalled Claire Bradford's unexpected visit to my apartment the evening before and her confusion when I had captured her. I wondered if the explanations she had offered had been the truth. Was she really trying to locate the source of the whispers? I looked interestedly up at the section of the wall that I had found her inspecting. What had she hoped to discover there?

I decided to make a close inspection of both sides of the wall. As I lighted up the sitting room and hall for this purpose, something unusual came to my notice that had hitherto escaped me enturely.

THE INNER WALL OF MY ROOM—the one running along the hall of the apartment—HAD THE APPEARANCE OF BEING AT LEAST FOUR FEET THICK.

It seemed so absurd that I refused to believe the evidence my eyes had given me. In these modern days of steel construction there was no reason for a wall being of medieval proportions. I sprang to my great-aunt's work basket and began rummaging to see if I could find a tape measure, and luckily my search was quickly rewarded.

I sketched a rough diagram of the rear rooms, and began measuring them off, carefully checking my figures as I went along. I found myself growing wildly excited as the tape measure confirmed what my eyes already had told me. The inner wall was at least four feet thick.

With thrills at the thought of the possibility of a secret passage there, I climbed up on a chair just as Claire Bradford had done, and began inspecting the wall inch by inch. Even as I did so I could not help laughing at myself. The idea that a modern apartment building might contain a secret passage was utterly ridiculous, yet as I pounded lightly on the wall it gave forth a hollow souad, vastly different from any other part of the room. I was convinced that between my room and the hall there was space enough at least for a passageway in which a man might walk.

As I, Trembling All Over at the Thought of the Peril She Had Been In, Put My Arms About Her and Helped Her In.

I surveyed with growing interest the wooden paneling that in my room ran clear up to the ceiling. In the other rooms there was no paneling. Mounting the chair again I pressed sharply against the wood at the point from which the sound had seemed to come. It seemed to me it gave a little to my touch. I struck one of the sections a sharp blow. It dropped back a full half-inch, leaving what looked like a doorway—a space three feet wide by five feet high. The bottom of the opening was hardly two feet from the floor. If there was a passageway here, this panel certainly would explain how my rooms had been surreptitiously visited.

Feverishly I worked at the panel trying to push it further back. If there was a passageway there in the wall I was determined to see whither it led. My efforts to move the panel further seemed hopeless. As I worked at it I heard a tapping on my window sill.

It must be Barbara. In my excitement over the find I had forgotten all about the time. I sprang from the chair and rushed to the window. I found her peering out, trying to ascertain why I had not answered her signal.

"Oh," she breathed with relief, as my head appeared "you were there. Did you see the detective?"

"Yes," I replied, speaking as low as my excited state would permit me, "but just now I discovered something vastly more important."

"What is it?"

"A secret passageway leading into my room. It seems to run along the hall. The wall there is at least four feet thick—room for a man to walk. There is a panel in the wall in my room leading into it. I was just prying it open when you signaled."

"Oh, how I wish I could see it!"

"Why can't you? Slip out of your front door, and I'll be at my door to admit you."

"I can't do that. Mother and Claire are in the front part of the house playing bridge with some guests. They will be sure to hear me going out."

"Come in tomorrow morning, then," I suggested.

She did not answer, and before I realized what she was doing, Barbara was out on the ledge making her perilous way across to my window.

"If Claire can do this, I can," she announced triumphantly, as I, trembling all over at the thought of the peril she had been in, put my arms about her and helped her in.

"Darling," I cried, still holding her in my arms, "don't ever do that again. It's too dangerous. Promise me, Barbara, dear, you'll never again try that."

With her pretty face flushed at the terms of endearment that had unwittingly escaped me, she laughingly released herself from my arms.

"That was nothing," she said in a tense whisper. "Where's the panel?"

Relieved to find that she was not angered by my presumption, I hastened to turn up the light and pointed at the hole in the wall. As I had done, she sprang up on the chair and endeavored to push the panel further back, but was unable to budge it. Quicker witted than I, she then tried sliding it along. At the slightest touch it slid back in a groove, revealing the opening—leading into what?

Striking a match, we both of us peered in. The space between the walls was certainly high enough and side enough for a man to walk there in comfort. So far as the flickering light of the match enabled us to judge, it ran the length of the hall, and near its further end there appeared to be some steps.

"Come," cried the intrepid Barbara, "let's explore it."

"No," I said firmly. "We must do nothing until I have seen the detective. We have put the case in his hands."

"But we must find out about it," protested the girl.

"Tomorrow," I said. "We know where it is. We know where the voices and whispers come from now."

"I wonder," she said thoughtfully, "if there is the same sort of a passageway in our apartment?"

"Promise me that if you find there is one, you will not attempt to explore it alone."

As we argued about it we both stopped short and with blanching faces listened. From somewhere—it sounded as if it was right below us—we heard sounds as if two people were struggling. Then came a woman's shriek, a wild scream with the death terror in it. The sound seemed close at hand. It seemed to come right up from the opening in the panel by which we were standing.

Once more there came an awful scream—a scream stopped off short as if some brutal hand had throttled the woman's throat.

"What is it?" cried Barbara.

"Listen," I commanded. "It seems to come from the floor below."

Holding our breaths we strained our ears for further sounds. Suddenly a shot rang out, and there was a thud as if a body had fallen to the floor. Then all was silence.

With terror in our faces we turned to each other, seeking an explanation which neither could give.

"Mother—Claire!" cried Barbara. "They'll be alarmed. I must go back to them at once."

"She's been murdered. Get the police quick."

Taught Chinese Lacemaking.

The art of lacemaking was first taught to the Chinese of the Chefoo district by foreigh missionaries about twenty-five years ago. They believed that by teaching lacemaking the women and girls would find profitable employment within their own homes, and the subsequent spread of the industry has fully justified their efforts. Although first taught in Chefoo, Chi Hsia Hsien was the first district in which lace was extensively made.

Time Measured by Candles.

The Chinese, besides using water clocks, also invented joss-sticks, which burned uniformly. The joss-stick is somewhat similar to what good old King Alfred of England is said to have used way back in the eight hundreds. He was a great educator, and discovered that tallow candles could be used for dividing the time which he allowed his nobles in which to make complaints against each other Mobile.—Carrying the first cargo of the manganese ore brought here from Brazil by the steamship Santa Rosalia for the United States Steel Corporation, the steamboat Clio left for Birmingport, according to information from the local office of the Mississippi - Warrior system. The Santa Rosalia brought the first of what ies said to be a series of shipments of this ore through the port of Mobile for the mills of the United States Steel Corporation in the Birmingham district, where it will be converted into steel of a very high quality. Because of inadequate river shipping facilities, a condition the state harbor board is seeking to remedy through an amendment to the state constitution to provide state aid for the improvement of harbors and river traffic, a large amount of the ore will have to be shipped by rail, it is stated. The cargo of the Santa Rosalia was 7,800 tons, the largest importation of manganese ore to come into this port.

SWOPE COMES THROUGH

Congressman King Swope of Kentucky had the distinction of opening the debate on the soldiers bonus bill which passed the House of Representatives in the closing days of the last Congress. Mr. Swope takes a special pride in his record on legislation for the benefit of world war veterans as well as those of former wars. Some of the measures which received his hearty support were the so-called "Sweet bill" increasing the compensation of disabled soldiers, a bill to reform courts-martial practice, bills to increase the pensions of Spanish, Civil, and Mexican war veterans, and the soldiers' bonus measure.

Capt. Swope was a cracker jack officer in the army. The editor of the Union-Banner was a "buck" under his command and we know that he can hold a tight line. Mr. Swope seems to be holding his own in Congress just as he did in the army, and we wish him every success.

COX'S FATAL BLUNDER

It becomes more apparent every day that the recent pilgrimage of Gov. Cox to the Wilson shrine at Washington, and his solemn avowal of devotion to the policies of the President, have split the ranks of Democracy. Those who nominated Gov. Cox at San Francisco thought they were naming a man with some independence of mind, and the courage to reach and upholdhis own decesious. When Cox was nominated he should have become convinced that he was a bigger man than Wilson in his party councils. The Wilson candidate had been defeated at the convention and Mr. Cox had won out. Instead of hastening to Washington to receive his instructions from the president, Democrats feel that Gov. Cox should have written Mr. Wilson outlining his interpretation of the party platform and defining what his stand would be on the league of nations issue. Instead of that they have witntssed two cringing candidates soliciting an audience with the deposed head of their party, and emerging from the conference palpably awestruck by the words of wisdom they had heard, adopting as their own the policies of the repudiated boss. It was a sickening sight to those who thought they had picked upstanding men for candidates.

WHO EXALTETH HIMSELF SHALL BE ABASED

Wahington, August 24.—That Cox uses the language of the Pharisee and places the brand of insincerity upon his own utterances, is the assertion of the Republican Publicity Association in a statement given out today. The statement says:

No man familiar with scripturt will fail to observe the striking similarity between the Cox declaraton in the opening paragraph of his speech of acceptance that he thanks God that he is free and unfettered and the declaration of the Pharisee that "I thank God that I am not as other men." If Cox's statement is true, it is the first time in history that Tammany Hall has given its support in the convention to a candidate without knowing pretty dtfinitely what he would do if nominated and elected. The haste of Mr. Cox to deny obligations with which he has not been charged and the well known customs of Tammany leaders combine to cast doubt upon the sicerity f his statement.

But the truthfulness of his assertion of freedom need not be left to inference or suspicion. Mr. Cox has already given the lit to his declaration that he is unfettered by promists. On July 18, at the close of his conference at the White House, he declared that whatever Mr. Wilson had promised, he would put forth his best effort to give.

It is notorioos that President Wilson made promises which he concealed from the American people even in violation of his express agreement that the promise should be disclosed. In the treaty alliance with France and Gerat Britain, for instance, it was agreed that that treaty should be submitted to the Senate at the same time as the treaty with Versaillts. Despite that agreement, President Wilson neither submitted the treaty of this withholding of information concerning his agreement, yet tht Democratic nominee for the presidency has bound himself to perform all the promises Mr. Wilson may have made.

Mr. Cox not only does not take up the standard of Democracy free from promises but has made the most amazing and subservient promise ever known in American politics. If Mr. Cox would sacrifice his intellectual independence by making a promise in blank as he did on July 18, after he had secured the nomination, how can he expect anyone to believe his claim that he had made no promises in order to secure the coveted place at the head of the ticket?

By the long list of broken pledges the Democratic party forfeited the confidence of the country. By opening his speech of acceptance with sacrilegious protestations of political virtue, Mr. Cox invites the suspicion that he is a great hypocrite as his party or the historic Pharisee whose language he saw fit to appropriate. The nation has just suffered more than seven years of a holier-than- thou executive and is not likely to subject itself to another.

KINKS IN THE LION,S TAIL

The expansion policy, closely followed by England for over a century, is precisely that which the league of nations must adopt if its principles are to be carried out. It is the theory of the league to dominate the world, and to carry that theory into execution it must follow closely the methods adopted by England in extending the British dominions. But the people of England are chafing under a foreign policy that forces them into almost continuous military campaigns in various parts of the world. Not only are Britons generally calling for a change, but some of the leading minds of the Empire are condemning further expenditures for territorial expansion.

In the first place it is felt that England has taken upon herself too many mandates, and she has on her shoulders half a dozen foreign countries, in addition, all of which are in a state of revolution. Palestine, Armenia, Turkey, Persia, East Africa, and Mesopotamia are alldiscontented, and active rebellions are in progress in Ireland and India. Mr. Asquith, Lord Robert Cecil, Lord Rothermore, and others, all favor a more consertive policy, which would include withdrawal from Mesopotamia, Persia, and other sources or irritation. It is even questioned in high circles if India is worth keeping.

If the people of England are protesting against a system which admittedly was adopted for British aggrandizement alone, what would the people of the United Staes say if they ere compelled to support a similar policy, not for their own benefit but for the welfare of the old world? Yet such would be the precise effect were the league covenant to be adopted by America. We ould have saddled upon us all the costs and sacrifices of a world-wide imperialism, with not a single compensating advantage.

Commissioner T. J. Dorminey was here on business Monday.

Heard so much about the New Medicine, wanted to try it, and now he is glad that he did.

"I had heard so much about this new medicine Dreco, I was anxious to try it, and after two days I was convinctd that it was grand medicine," stated Mr. R. B. Gordon, a well known farmer of York, Ala.

"I have suffered all my life from stomach trouble, indigestion, constipation, and a sluggish liver. I've taken medicine after medicine, but none ever did more than temporary good, but I am convinced that Dreco is different from the others. It seemed to be the vtry thing my stomach needed, and the indigestion ceased almost immediately; my bowels began acting regularly and in a smooth natural manner. My liver got active and the billiousness passed off. My appetite increased and my nerves btcame calm so that I sleep like a boby. Dreco is a great medicine and I think every one should be told about it."

All druggists now sell Dreco and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Company.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.
SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The Company, The Public, The Employees

Adequate and efficient telephone service is essential to the continued prosperity of all commercial enterprises, and a telephone in the home for social intercourse is as necessary as a telephone in the place of business.

No telephone company can furnish this service without the full support of the public it serves. This is true because the interests of the public, the telephone company and its employees are identical; each must co-operate and neither can permanently profit at the expense of the other.

The Company furnishes the Plant and receives Profits.

The Employees furnish the Effort and receive Wages.

The Public furnishes the Revenue and receives Service.

The telephone situation is as much the concern of the public as it is of the Company and its employees. The sound support of the public should be based upon a knowledge of the facts.

The telephone industry in Alabama faces a crisis unparalleled during its entire history, the cumulative effect of conditions during the past four years; conditions which this Company was powerless to influence or control.

It is the purpose of this Company to fully inform the public of the facts of this situation.

This is the first of a series of advertisements to place before the public all the facts of the telephone industry in the State of Alabama.

It is the duty of all who have need for telephone service now, and in the future, to carefully read and consider these facts and, if convincing, to give a quick, direct and cordial support to the Company.

If any statements are questioned, they can be verified.

Our whole claim for your support is based upon established facts.

The next advertisement will give a detailed statement of the Company's investment, expenses and revenues for the years 1916, 1917, 1918 and 1919.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

MONEY TO LOAN

I have succeeded in arranging with one of the largest Fire Insurance Companies in America, with millions and millions of capital and surplus, for the above amount —and more if needed, to be loaned to farmers of this section, with which to insure their property, including Jemison, Thorsby, Clanton, Coopers, Verbena, and surrounding territory.

The loans will be made in this way: We inspect and estimate your property, including dwelling and contents, barn and contents, smoke house, feed stuff, mules and cattle, and insure you for three fourths value against fire, lightning and wind storms, figuring you up for five years for only four and one-half years premiums, you paying one-fifth cash and the other four-fifths in four annual installments, without interest.

This strictly applies to farmers and good risk. If you will insure your home, we will also carry your tenant houses for you.

If interested, please write, phone or call on me, and I will be glad to consider your application. I also write old line Life Insurance and sell Singer Sewing Machines.

Now listen, people! You do not owe me one cent, neither do you owe my company anything, but you do owe yourself and your wife and children protection against Fires, Lightning, Wind Storms and Death.

Judge Reynolds and son Omar, M. D. Foshee, J. L. Easterling and W. M. Wyatt went over to Columbiana last Saturday, where Judge Reynolds made a speech in a joint political discussion with Fritz Thompson. We have been around over the state quite a bit with Judge Reynolds in his campaign for the senate and it looks like he is going to poll a record vote in November.

Mr. Wiley Foshee urges the farmers of Chilton County to be here at the court house on next Saturday to select delegates to the American cotton Association. He says if the farmer doesn't look after his business no one else will do it for him. This is true, and at this time the farmers' interests are very valuable and should be safe-guarded in every way possible.

FARMERS CALLED TO MEET AT CLANTON NEXT SATURDAY, 28

The Farmers of Chilton County are requested to meet at the court house in Clanton next Saturday, August 28, at ten o'clock, a.m. for the purpose of selecting two delegates or more from Chilton County to go to the American Cotton Association which is to be held in Montgomery on September 1st and 2nd.

All farmers are urged to attend this meeting as it is important that our county be represnted at the Cotton Association.

Black-Draught "has no equal for headache, sour stomach, torpid liver and feverish colds . ." declares Mrs. Annie Whitmore, of Gate City, Va. "It is easy to take and does not gripe, as a lot of medicines do," she adds. "It is good to take in a hot tea for colds, or can be taken in a dry powder. I can't say enough for Black-Draught and the sickness it has saved us."

Films Help to Foreign Trade

Motion Pictures a Silent Partner of Uncle Sam in His Export Trade.

CREATES DEMAND FOR GOODS

Latin People Disposed to Pattern After What They See on Screen That Pleases Them—Aids Live Stock Introduction.

Washington.—Uncle Sam has as a silent partner in his export trade the motion pictures.

How the "movies" are developing trade and spreading confidence in American goods and American methods, and creating an Americanized atmosphere which should prove the strongest possible asset toward permanency of trade in South America, is told by Dr. Julius Klein, commercial attache at the American embassy, Buenos Aires, who was formerly chief of the Latin American division, bureau of foreign and domestic commerce.

The Latin people, he points out, are disposed to pattern after what they see in the motion pictures that appeals to them. Thus the films have made them familiar with the appearance of American automobiles and of what they can do. The movies have created a demand for American-made office furniture by showing the fittings of a business magnate's office, which the South American merchants in their prosperity are eager to copy.

As regards ready-made clothing—the South Americans, particularly in Cuba, have gotten into the habit of ordering a suit of clothes like their favorite hero wore in a certain film. Thus the merchants have come to stock up with good lines of ready-made clothing, which are very popular. The movies have had a like effect on industrial development.

All this, Doctor Klein emphasizes, has happened naturally and has not been forced as trade propaganda.

Boom to U. S. Trade.

The more use that can be made of educational films introducing industries comparable with their own industries—such as agriculture, cattle-raising, mining—the more benefits to American commerce will result. Such films can and should carry a romantic scenario, such as appeals most strongly to the Latin temperament, with cutins on our methods in industries similar to theirs. As we show them a new and better method their confidence in us and the output of our industries grows cumulatively.

Germans and Italians particularly have been thus endeavoring to ingratiate themselves in South American countries, Doctor Klein says, and the influence of the Italians in the South American markets from an economic and commercial viewpoint must be reckoned with.

American manufacturers of farm machinery are now co-operating with the Philippine department of agriculture and natural resources, in an endeavor to arouse in the farmers of those islands a true appreciation of the possibilities by using such machinery. Motion pictures are being prepared to show the most approved methods of cultivation, preparation of seed, use of farm machinery, harvesting and storing crops, and methods of packing and handling where these processes are involved.

Aids Live Stock Introduction.

Introduction of American breeds of live stock and poultry into South America, particularly Argentina, is to be aided by the use of motion picture films, prepared for this purpose by the United States department of agriculture. These films also will show American methods of breeding live stock and handling it in its many phases from the farm to the home table. The Argentine government has shown special interest in the introduction of American methods of handling live stock, as it has indeed in the agricultural practices of the northern half of the continent generally.

As evidence of this, the Argentine embassy in Washington has already purchased ten films on these subjects for educational use in Argentina and has frequently had United States department bulletins translated into Spanish for home consumption.

The Buenos Aires & Pacific railway has also been a heavy purchaser of such films for use along its system. Its representative in this country was recently negotiating with the United States department of agriculture for films showing the swine industry in the United States, and in making arrangements for the introduction of American swine in Argentina.

It is planned to show important swine-breeding farms, the work in the big Chicago packing houses and the preparation of the product for the table. Pictures will be made of the various types of American hogs, and an effort will be made to give some idea of the vastness of the industry in this country.

National Anthem Turned Policemen Into Statues

Boston, Mass. — By playing "The Star Spangled Banner" over and over an Italian band kept two policemen, who ordered them to stop, standing at salute in the Fells reservation, near here, until their arms dropped numb and helpless. A few Italian women and children, who were along for an outing cheered and applauded in great glee. Then the bandsmen fled.

Soon after the tumultuous strains had begun resounding through the woods Policemen Jordan Frost and Roberts appeared and informed them they must stop, as they were in the state reservation. The leader at once ordered "The Star Spangled Banner" played.

CATTLE RUSTLERS USE AUTOS

Cattle Are Now Taken Across the International Boundary by New Method.

Regina, Sask.—The motorcar, it seems, has achieved another success by winning its advent into the cattle rustling business. The old and well-known practice of cattle rustlers, when they used to drive their stolen herds before them, is now a thing of the past. A few days ago three calves were stolen from herds near Bengough and spirited across the international border by two motorcars. Three of the rustlers were arrested on this side of the line and two others in Montana and are now awaiting trial.

Adrianople Is a Beautiful City

Airman Describes Romantic Charm of Mosques and Gardened Homes.

DECADENCE OF CITY GOES ON

Strangers Treated Kindly in an Atmosphere of Friendship—City Endures Its Shabby Gentility With Pride and Calm.

Adrianople, Thrace.—The decadence of two centuries, present political and economic disintegration, wars without end, and an uncertain future, have been unable to destroy the ineffable charm the Turks originally gave to this city of eighty-odd thousand souls. Adrianople is still a holy city in faith and in appearance. Romance still abides here.

"The Orient is the only place left to Europe where cities seen at close range are beautiful," remarked Jules Sebotin, a French aviator, while visiting the most beautiful of all mosques, Sinan's masterpiece here, the mosque of a thousand windows but one, erected at the order of Sultan Selim II., in the sixteenth century.

The first impression of the city has been one of infinite beauty. Arriving from across the lofty Balkans in an airplane, the city had been seen with a rush, a place of spires, and slate domes and red roofs, planted at the intersection of three rivers. It had been a welcome sight. It had come at the end of a four-hours' ride, and it was the journey's end to a tired aviator.

Charming Aloft or Afoot.

Seen from aloft, the city, surrounded by poplars at its outer rim, its house gardens within the city showing green vines and flowers, its outlying fields bare, aroused memories of Mardin on mountains, Diarbekr by the Tigris and hosts of other Turkish cities, always sleeping in beauty, whether visited by sunshine or moonlight.

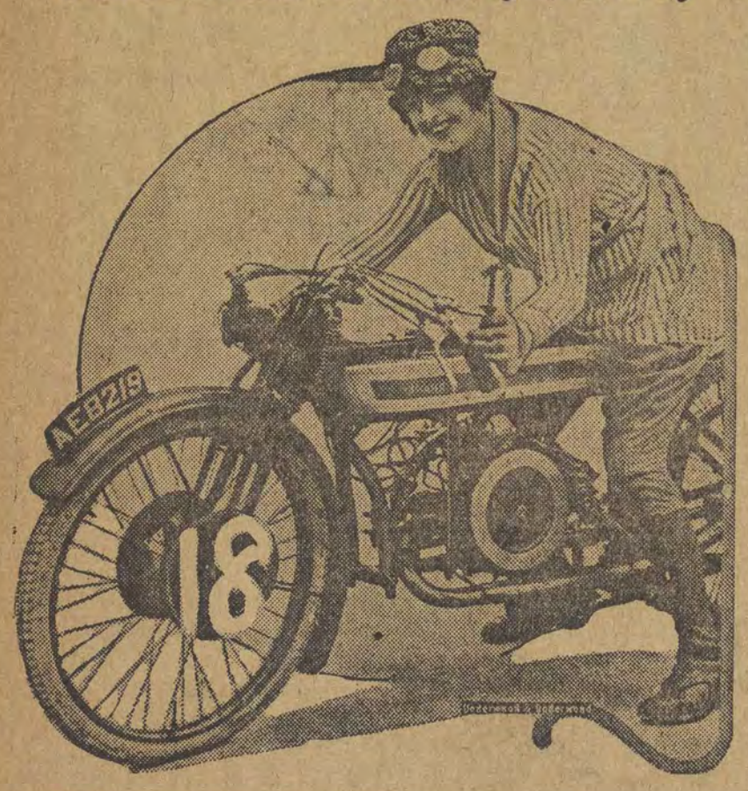
The longer the stay in Adrianople the more the charm of its beauty grows, a charm that is as great afoot as aloft.

Adrianople is a city that has the tone of country friendship about it, not unlike a county seat of the South. The center of the agricultural exchange business of Eastern and Western Thrace, it is frequented by peasants and traders of Turkish, Greek, Bulgarian, Jewish and Armenian nationalities. There is record of but one American ever having done business in the city, and he came here from Paris and bought up all the brooms.

While no day knows what the next day may bring forth in the way of political strife and crime, today the city preserves this tone of friendship and order. Strangers as they go along the streets or visit the shops are treated with kindly concern. The Turkish officers salute courteously and there is no glint of hostility in the eyes of the Turkish soldiers carrying their new rifles, recently distributed to them by Col. Djefer Tayar Bey.

The decadence of Adrianople goes at a dignified pace. There is little or none of the seething squalor and dirt and noise and poverty of Constantinople. There is none of the clamor of Constantinople's street cars and automobiles.

Pride in Shabby Gentility.



There are a few ragged beggar children who beslege the stranger, but for the most part Adrianople endures its shabby gentility with pride and calm. Here there are none of the fallen houses and dusty streets which characterize the majority of the cities of Asia Minor.

Prayers are called from the minarets as of old; also the old and new bazaars do a slender business in selling American and European calicoes and homespun cloths and Turkish silver mounted pipes and cigarette holders, rugs, junk, to passing peasant customers; or else when these are lacking they swap with each other, after the happy manner of all the Orient.

Decadence seems to have heightened the beauty of the majestic old mosque of Sultan Bayzid. The windows are broken in, the locks are rusted in the doors, the grass is growing up between the flagstones, the fountain in the court no longer splashes its water in the sunshine, and the interior of the mosque itself is slowly deteriorating.

Few worshipers come here, but on the drowsy Friday afternoons, the Mussulman's day of worship, come a devoted band of musicians and singers. The avitor stumbled upon this group and one of the red-fezed band saluted with the simplicity of the Turk and said, "Allah esmarladik."—"May God abide with you."

GRAFTS OWN FLESH ON BODY OF WIFE

Chicago Surgeon Explains Operation to Students as He Dexterously Wields Knife.

Chicago.—With steady hand and nerve, and calmly going about his business as if he were performing the simplest operation, Dr. Orlando P. Scott, a surgeon of Chicago, cut strip after strip of flesh from his own thigh and grafted them on his wife's foot and ankle as he rested on a portable table at her bedside. The entire operation was performed without a single administration of anaesthetics and in the presence of a number of doctors and nurses. Sobs came from different parts of the room as Doctor Scott, without so much as a wince of pain, drove the surgeon's knife into his flesh and then speedily grafted the strips upon his wife's foot.

A fellow physician stood by him to dress his wounds. Several times, as Doctor Scott drove the knife into his flesh, he turned to the assembled student doctors, explaining technical points of the operation to them.

Doctor Scott performed the operation to save his wife from disfigurement and possible loss of her right leg. Mrs. Scott was injured in an automobile accident and gangrene had set in.

Hoodoo on This Farm Holds Bad Luck Record

West Chester, Pa. — Last week was one of misfortune for William Fryer of near Kimberton, Chester county. On Monday, while harvesting hay, one of his horses was stung by an insect and is still in a serious condition. Mr. Fryer then fell from the floor of a straw mow, and was badly cut and bruised. During the afternoon, Mrs. Fryer fell from a cherry tree and was injured severely.

All moved along quietly on the farm until Saturday. In the morning a cow gave birth to twin calves, but all three animals died later. During the night, another of his horses became entangled in the strap of a halter, fell and broke its neck.

PET CAT ATTACKS TEACHER

Feline Bites Woman Because One of Her Kittens Had Been Taken Away.

New York.—Miss Maude E. Ross, a school teacher, living at 312 Decatur street, Brooklyn, is at home suffering from wounds inflicted by a pet cat which sprang at her without warning.

The cat escaped twice, and efforts are being made to recapture it for examination by the board of health.

Miss Ross was in her home when the cat, a large one of the tiger variety, entered. It had been a household pet for a number of years. Ten weeks ago it gave birth to two kittens, one of which was taken away from it a week ago. Miss Ross was about to greet tabby when it suddenly sprang at her.

Miss Ross screamed, but the cat continued its attacks and sank its teeth into her right leg.

SCORNS FINE; GOES TO JAIL

Brooklyn Woman Declares Sentence for Speeding Unjust and Takes a Cell.

New York.—Given the alternative of paying a $25 fine or passing two days in jail, Mrs. Eloise B. Farhurst of Brooklyn flatly refused to pay and announced her intention of serving the time. She actually did pass an hour in jail, but at the end of that time her mother paid the fine and she went home.

Mrs. Farhurst was sentenced by Magistrate Fish in the Brooklyn Traffic court, who explained she could pay the fine under protest and then appeal. She refused such a compromise.

"I will not pay the fine," Mrs. Farhurst said. "I will serve the jail sentence because I know I am innocent of speeding. I was hardly moving when the officer stopped me."

THE POPULAR BANANA.

For those who have nervous indigestion and a too acid stomach, the banana is the popular breakfast fruit because of its lack of acid in its composition. To combine with cooked or uncooked breakfast foods it is held in high esteem. Bananas for serving uncooked, should be well ripened to be wholesome, especially for children.

Moulded Cereal with Bananas.—Turn any leftover cereal into cups rinsed with cold water, half filling the cups. When cold, scoop out the centers and fill the open spaces with sliced bananas; turn into a buttered pan, fruit side down and set into a hot oven to become very hot. Remove with a cake turner to the cereal dishes and serve with sugar and cream.

Porto Rican Baked Bananas.—Select underripe bananas; put them without removing the skins into a very hot oven to bake until the skins burst. Send to the table in a folded napkin and do not remove the skins until the moment of eating. Serve with plenty of butter.

Banana Croquettes.—Remove the skin and coarse threads from five bananas, cut the banana in halves, trimming the ends; brush with beaten egg which has been mixed with a tablespoonful of water, then roll in crumbs and fry in deep fat. Serve with lamb chops or with roast lamb. Currant jelly sauce may be served with them prepared as follows:

Melt half a glass of jelly in a scant cup of boiling water, add half a cupful of sugar, and a teaspoonful of corn starch mixed with a little cold water, let cook five minutes, then add a tablespoonful of butter and a teaspoonful of lemon juice.

Bananas With Cherries.—Stew a pint of cherries with five or six of the meats from the stones, add water to the juice to make a cupful; sweeten to taste, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and set aside to cool. Pour over sliced bananas and serve. Other fruits like strawberries, currants and pineapple may be used. Serve with sponge cake as a dessert.

Have you the wealth of a sound mind, a strong body, and a pure soul? What great possessions are yours! May the gold within you be a blessing to all the world—you cannot be too lavish with it; keep giving it away; put it out at intervals and it will double its value in a short time.

DESSERTS, SUITABLE FOR THE SEASON.

Fruit juices thickened with gelatin are favorite desserts for warm weather as they are both appetizing and sufficiently satisfying after a hearty meal has been eaten.

Snow Pudding.—Soak one and one-fourth tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one-fourth cupful of cold water fifteen minutes, then dissolve in one cupful of boiling water, add one cupful of sugar and one-fourth cupful of lemon juice. Stir until the sugar is dissolved, then strain into a large bowl, and set in ice water to cool, stirring occasionally. Beat the whites of three eggs until stiff and when the gelatin begins to thicken add the beaten whites and beat together until very light. When stiff enough to mold pour into a mold which has been rinsed with cold water. Make a boiled custard, using the yolks of the eggs well beaten, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a pint of hot milk; cook until smooth and flavor when cool with vanilla. Unmold the pudding, pour the sauce around it and serve.

Gateau de Princess.—Bake a sponge cake in two jelly cake tins. Cut the center from one cake, leaving a rim one and one-half inches wide. Cover the cake with jelly, jam, fresh berries sweetened or with sliced fruit. Place the rim over the cake and frost the rim if desired or decorate with whipped cream.

Orange Ice.—Make a sirup, using four cupfuls of water to two of sugar, boiling twenty minutes, add two cupfuls of orange juice, one-fourth cupful of lemon juice and the grated rind of two oranges; cool, strain and freeze.

When using only a small mount in the freezer the ice need not fill the freezer, only come well above the mixture in the can.

Emergency Salad.—Take two parts of cabbage and one part tart apple, run through a meat chopper, season with salt, pepper, minced green onion, celery or green pepper.

Spanish Bean Soup.—Press two cupfuls of canned beans or leftover baked beans through a sieve. Add two cupfuls of strained tomato or boiling water and catsup, season well and serve hot

Be firm! whatever tempts thy soul
To loiter 'ere it reach its goal,
Whatever siren voice would draw
Thy heart from duty and its law,
Oh! that distrust. Go bravely on,
And, till the victor-crown be won,
Be firm.

THE DELECTABLE CHICKEN.

Chicken is a favorite meat with people the world over and no matter how served, if well cooked, it is always popular.

Maryland Chicken.—Dress and cut up a chicken, sprinkle with salt and pepper, dip in flour, egg and crumbs, place in a well-greased dripping pan and bake in a hot oven, basting with one-third of a cupful of butter. Arrange on a platter and pour over two cupfuls of cream sauce.

Chicken Curry.—Singe and cut the chicken at the joints in pieces for serving. Cover with boiling water, add two teaspoonfuls of salt and a half saltspoonful of pepper. Simmer for half an hour or longer if not tender, drain, dredge with seasoned flour and brown lightly with a tablespoonful of butter. Fry one large onion in the same fat, mix one tablespoonful of flour, one teaspoonful of sugar and one tablespoonful of curry powder and brown. Add one cupful of water or stock, one cupful of tomato or one sour apple chopped with salt and pepper to taste. Pour this sauce over the chicken and simmer until tender. Add one cupful of hot cream and serve with boiled rice.

Jellied Chicken.—Bring to the boiling point two cupfuls of chicken stock from which the fat has been removed, add to it one tablespoonful of gelatin which has been soaked in four tablespoonfuls of cold water. Press into a mold four cupfuls of seasoned cooked chicken, pour over the stock, put under a weight and chill until firm. Any other meat may be served in the same way.

Chicken Pie.—Dress and cut up one chicken as for frying; cook until tender. Season when nearly cooked. Lay the pieces in a baking dish, add one pint of stock thickened with two tablespoonfuls of flour, and pour over the chicken. Add a slice of onion. Make a biscuit dough, cut out as a biscuit and cover the top of the dish of chicken. Add cream or rich milk and bake until the biscuits are brown. Serve from the baking dish.

If not to fly, why has the robin wings,
While the green desert dares him to be free;
Why does he yearn to reach remotest things,
The mountain's rim—if it were not to be?

SEASONABLE DISHES.

We really do not know how to cook vegetables unless we can make them both edible and attractive; not unless we can conserve every fraction of their food value and are so familiar with their composition that we can develop it by cookery. The really efficient cook wastes nothing—neither the vegetable itself, the water in which it is cooked, nor even the parings or tops. So says the expert dietician, Ida Bailey Allen.

Scalloped Beans.—Butter a baking dish and add two cupfuls of white sauce or a tomato sauce to four cupfuls of cooked string beans, with one small chopped onion. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Braised New Cabbage.—Melt one-fourth cupful of sweet fat in a saucepan, add two green apples and two onions finely chopped; cook gently for three minutes, then turn in one good sized cabbage, shredded, three cloves, one-half cupful of vinegar, one tablespoonful of salt, one-fourth teaspoonful of pepper. Cover tightly and simmer for two and one-half hours.

Coconut Sponge.—Scant half an envelope of granulated gelatin in one-fourth of a cupful of cold water. Make a custard of two cupfuls of milk, three eggs, one-third of a cupful of sugar; cook until smooth and thick, remove from the heat and add the gelatin. When the mixture begins to set add one cupful of shredded coconut, a few grains of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Use just the yolks in the custard, beat the whites stiff and fold in at the last. Line a mold with sections of orange, pour in and chill.

Corn Custards.—Mix one cupful of grated corn with three slightly beaten eggs; add one and one-half cupfuls of milk, one-half teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of onion juice and a few dashes of paprika. Put into small molds and steam, covered with greased paper. After 20 minutes remove and serve with white or tomato sauce.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

LESSON FOR AUGUST 29

BEGINNING OF SOLOMON'S REIGN

LESSON TEXT—I Kings 1:5; 3:13.

GOLDEN TEXT—The fear of the Lord, that is wisdom: and to depart from evil is understanding.—Job 28:28.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Solomon's Choice.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Solomon's Wise Beginning.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Choosing the Best Things.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—True Wisdom and How to Get It.

I. Solomon Anointed King (1: 5-40).

David had hitherto failed to show the people who should be king after him (v. 20). He is now stirred to action by the combined appeals of Bathsheba and Nathan. He immediately sent for the faithful three, Zadok, Nathan and Benaiah, and bade them to anoint Solomon king. They speedily executed their commission and soon the people shouted "God save king Solomon!"

II. Solomon's Acts to Establish His Kingdom (1: 41-2: 46).

Coming to the kingdom at such a time as this, he noted certain dangerous elements, which, if allowed to develop, would weaken if not destroy his rule.

1. Adonijah placed under surveillance (vv. 41-53). Though he had attempted to usurp the kingdom, Solomon placed him on good behavior. In this treatment, Solomon displayed both clemency and dignity, which are praiseworthy in a ruler.

2. Adonijah executed (2: 13-25). Solomon ordered him executed because he made an underhanded effort to become king.

3. Abiathar removed from the priesthood (2:26, 27). This man had joined Adonijah in his plot of usurpation. Solomon removed him from office and appointed Zadok in his stead.

4. Joab executed (2:28-35). Joab, too, was a party in Adonijah's rebellion. Beside this he had treacherously murdered his rivals in the army. He was succeeded in the generalship by Benaiah.

5. Shimei executed (2:36-46). Shimei had deserted David and joined his enemies, even bitterly cursed him. Solomon first paroled him and confined him to Jerusalem, but when he broke his parole he had him executed.

III. God's Gracious Offer to Solomon (3:4, 5).

Solomon made a lavish sacrifice to the Lord. It was not that the Lord cared for the number of animals, but the attitude of the man's heart toward him. "Ask what I shall give thee" placed very wide possibilities before the king. God, as it were, signed blank checks and turned them over to Solomon to fill in any amount that his heart desired.

IV. Solomon's Wise Choice (3:6-9).

The Lord's gracious offer brought the king face to face with the responsibility of making a choice. God so deals with his children that a choice must be made by everyone. Solomon was keenly sensible of the difficulty and the responsibility of his position. David was a great king. For a young man to take up the work of an illustrious father and push it to completion is a most difficult task. Besides all this, the disturbing elements set in motion by the usurper, Adonijah, were to be dealt with. In his reply to God he pleads that he was not king as a result of his own choosing, but because of God's loving kindness. All who have been called of God to fill positions of honor and trust can truly exercise that same boldness of faith. When called to positions of honor and trust we should not become high-minded and vain, but humbly present ourselves before God for help.

V. God's Unstinted Gift to Solomon (3:10-15).

Solomon's speech pleased the Lord. The Lord is always pleased when we place ourselves before him in such attitude. Solomon got more than he asked for. Because he put wisdom first, God saw that he could be trusted with material good, also. Christ taught the same thing when he said, "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6:33. He that puts God and spiritual things first in time and importance can be trusted with temporal things. That which God promised him above what he asked was riches, honor and length of days. All who feel the lack of wisdom can go to God with confidence (James 1:5). God blessed Solomon with a singularly comprehensive mind (I Kings 4:29-34). He was a botanist, zoologist, architect, poet, and a moral philosopher. When we ask what God wills, we shall surely get what we ask.

To Cheer Thee on Thy Way.

Common Sense.

Common sense is, of all kinds, the most uncommon. It implies good judgment, sound discretion and true and practical wisdom.—Tyron Edwards.

LEOPARD CANNOT CHANGE SPOTS

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Tells the Treachery of Calomel.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

Don't take calomel! It can not be trusted any more than a leopard or a wild-cat. Take Dodson's Liver Tone which straightens you right up and makes you feel fine. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and doesn't gripe.—Adv.

Those Wags.

"You say the revolver you bought had six chambers?"

"Six chambers and a seller."

Speedy Relief From Habitual Constipation

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

Facts for Sick Women

Reliable Information

All American women know of the great success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in restoring to health women who suffered from ailments peculiar to their sex, yet there are some who are skeptical and do not realize that all that is claimed for it is absolutely true—if they did, our laboratory would not be half large enough to supply the demand, though today it is the largest in the country used for the manufacture of one particular medicine.

The Facts contained in the following two letters should prove of benefit to many women:

Buffalo, N. Y.—"I suffered with organic inflammation and displacement. When lifting I had such pain and bearing down that I was not able to stand up, and it hurt me to walk or go up or down stairs. I was going to a doctor without any results and he said the safest thing would be to have an operation. I met a lady who told me she had three operations and was not well until she took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

I felt relief after taking two bottles of Vegetable Compound and I kept on with it until I was cured. I always use Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and they are fine. Everything used to turn sour on my stomach and the Liver Pills relieved that."—Mrs. A. Rogers, 593 Fargo Avenue, Buffalo, N. Y.

Sacramento, Calif.—"I had organic trouble and had such terrible pain and swelling in the lower part of my side that I could not stand on my feet or even let the bed clothes touch my side. I gave up my work thinking I would not be able to go back for months. My mother advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had saved her life at one time, and it put me in a wonderful condition in a couple of weeks, so I can keep on working. I work in a department store and have to stand on my feet all day and I do not have any more pains. I surely recommend your Vegetable Compound to all my friends and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Bertha J. Parker, 3320 M St., Sacramento, Calif.

Father and Daughter Get Relief by Eatonic

R. J. Powell, Sweetwater, Texas, says, "Eatonic helped me at once, but it was my daughter who got the marvelous benefits. She could not even take a drink of water without awful misery, but it relieved her; she is feeling much better. All this from one box, so send me four more at once."

Hundreds of people now take eatonic; one or two tablets after each meal keeps them in good health, feeling fine, full of pep. Eatonic simply takes up the excess acidity and poisons and carries them right out of the system. Of course, when the cause of the misery is removed, the sufferer cannot help but get well.

You will find it a quick, sure relief for heartburn, indigestion, sour, acid, gassy, bloated stomach. It costs but a trifle and your druggist will supply you. If you don't feel well, you give eatonic a test. Adv.

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT

Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it.

Womens' complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease.

If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.

Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.

Don't delay starting treatment. Dr Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.

Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

CLEANS OUT TONES UP WHOLE SYSTEM

When you're clogged up by CONSTIPATION, jaundiced by a torpid LIVER, devitalized by poor BLOOD or soured by DYSPEPSIA your case calls for Dr. Thacher's Liver and Blood Syrup—an old physician's famous prescription, in successful use for 68 years as an all-around family medicine.

"From His Heart"

Mr. B. J. Hatcher, of Shell Bluff, Ga. says: "I am going to give you a testimonial that is from my heart. I would not be without DR. THACHER'S LIVER AND BLOOD SYRUP in my home and will try my very best to get it into every home in my locality. I take it and my wife and children take it whenever we see even the least indication of a coated tongue, since we know that the tongue is the thermometer of the stomach."

FRIENDSHIP BAPTIST CHURCH

The regular monthly services were held at the Friendship Baptist Church, just north of town, last Sunday and Sunday night. Rev. W. P. Lowery, the pastor, conducted the services, both of which were well attended.

During the revival at Friendship a month ago, the church put on new life, and is now doing better work than it has ever done before. This is due to a great extent, to the inspiring efforts put forth by the wide awake pastor, Rev. Lowery. He is a splendid preacher and this church, which is yet young, is right with him in trying to do something for the cause of Christ. At the service last Sunday night one new member was added, a young Mr. Thomas, who will be baptistd at ten o'clock the Fourth Sunday in September at the Church baptising pool.

Prayer meeting is held at this place every Sunday night, which is truly an inspiration. Very reasonable numbers attend these prayer meetings, and everybody takes part in the work. We invite all in reach to come out next Sunday night, and any other Sunday night that you can. We will be glad to have you.

Which Wagon?—

The One that Fits the Road—or the One that Rides the Ridge

Recommended by the Government. The standardized wagon fits the prevailing track made by automobiles and is the wagon you will want to buy.

This Wagon is Out of Date. This 60" wide track wagon no longer fits the roads when they are muddy and soft.

THE EASTERN STATES HAVE ADOPTED THE 56" AUTO TRACK WAGON

WOULDN'T you rather buy the style of wagon recommended by your Government, especially when it is designed to pull easier, ride smoother, and last longer — the wagon that fits the roads and does not ride the ridge?

The Standardized Weber "Auto-track" Wagon saves wear on itself, other wagons, automobiles, and rubber tires.

The Weber fifth wheel and swivel coupling wagon is either sold at a price much too low or most other wagons are sold at prices much too high, quality considered. Compare and draw your own conclusion.

To date the leading wagon manufacturers of America have sold at the most conservative estimate 100,000 standardized auto-track wagons. From this introduction it is but a step to universal use of this type of wagon. Wouldn't you rather be identified with progress and recognized as an up-to-date farmer by doing your hauling with such a wagon than to be classed as an unprogressive "back number" by buying a 60-inch wide-track wagon, thereby helping some manufacturer and dealer to "unload" an obsolete type? Think it over — and then come and see us about a standardized auto-track Weber.

THOMPSON AND REYNOLDS TO HAVE JOINT DEBATES

Hon. Fritz Thompson of Centerville has promised to engage in joint discussion of the political issues of the present campaign with Judge Reynolds at Clanton in the near future. If Mr. Thompson don't get cold feet and "renig" this will be an interesting event. Just as soon as details can be arranged and the date set, we will make full announcement in the Union-Banner. All people who want to see a Democrat get a political skinning should be on hand if this bout is formally staged.

Following is the wording of a letter sent to Mr. Thompson by Judge Reynolds:

Clanton, Ala., Aug. 23, 1920.
Hon. J. F. Thompson,
Centerville, Ala.

I find that our people here will be delighted to hear you and me on a joint debate discussion of the political issues of the day. As we have agreed for two meetings, one at Centerville and one at Clanton, I am writing to ask you if Saturday, September 4th will suit you to come to Clanton. We will try and get you a good crowd out and advertise the meeting the best we can.

I have promised to go to Ashland at that time but if you will meet me here I will get some one to fill my appointment for me at Ashland.

I shall be ready to go to Centerville any day that suits you, if you will let me know in advance so that I can arrange to not have conflicting appointments. Please let me hear from you right away. With best wishes to you, I am,

Yours Very Truly,

Don't Continue to Suffer Because of Wrong Treatment.

Impurities in the blood cause millions of tiny disease germs to set up their attack on the surface of the skin, and in the form of pimples, boils, scaly eruptions and itchy, burning irritations, begin their disfiguring and destructive work.

These disease germs can be reached only through the blood, and local applications have no effect whatever. That is why salves ointments, lotions, washes and other remedies applied to the skin can do no more than give mere temporary relief.

If you want genuine relief from the tortures of skin diseases, lose no time in discarding all local remedies, and begin taking S. S. S.

THE ALL DAY SINGING AT PROVIDENCE, BEAT NO. 16

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

On Monday night last a very unanimous meeting of the building committee was held and further steps taken for the erection of the new church building. Bids for the building have now been properly advertised for and it is fully expecetd to let the contract by the 30th of September, for construction to begin the first of November. In the event that this is possible, it will give us two good months in which to do most if not all of the outside work. In order to let the contract it is essential that the pledges be paid soon as possible, and the same can be paid in person to the First National Bank where it will be deposited to the credit of the building fund and used expressly and only for that purpose. All checks paid out are carefully safeguarded and countersigned by two members of the committee.

The services of this church will be held next Sunday as usual—morning at 11 a.m. and evening at 7:45 p.m. Please note the change of time for the evening service. At the night service the subject wil be "The Meanest Man in Town" and will be illustrated with interesting stereopticon views. This will be a pleasant and profitable evening to all who attend. The Sunbeam Band meets at 2:30 p.m., the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m., and the Senior B. Y. P. U. at 7 p.m. We will appreciate the cooperation of the parents in making these organizations a success by encouraging their young people to attend. Loyalty in attendance at the church services has much to do with a really successful church. With the splendid future outlook of the church every member who is able should stand by their church and attend its services regularly every week.

We cordially invite everybody to all of our services.

The farmers meeting at the court house last Saturday seemed to be a bit at "logger heads" with the ginners. The farmers pledged themselves not to pay more for ginning this year than they did last year, and the ginners said they would have to have a raise in the price this year if they ginned the cotton. Now dang it all; what do you think about that?

THOMPSON CAN'T COME HERE

We regret to inform our readers that Hon. J. Fritz Thompson of Bibb County, that brilliant exponent of modern Democracy, cannot come to Clanton to engage in joint discussion with Judge Reynolds. He has replied to Judge Reynolds' letter of last week and eased out of the challenge by saying that he cannot engage in political discusions that are not authorized by his party committee, or some sort of a committee he seeks to hide behind.

We have a lingering suspicion that Fritz recollects how near he came to losing every speck of his political hide over at Columbiana a few weeks ago; and now he is wise to see that he does not run across Reynolds and Longshore again.

Honest John, now Fritz, we don't blame you. If a fellow should do us like they did you at Columbiana we would be inclined to sever diplomatic relations with him too.

Miss Leona Pipes left Monday for a visit to friends in Birmingham. While there she will attend the Pan-Hellenic dance.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Pipes will leave shortly for a visit to relatives in Kentucky, before returning home they will visit their son, Hoke, in Virginia.

Mrs. Amzi Gowan and children returned home Friday after a few weeks visit to relatives here.

Mrs. R. E. Luckie and children, Mrs. J. Watts Moore, spent the week end with Mrs. E. S. Parrish in the City of Birmingham.

DIVIDENDS FROM THE GARDEN

Showing Made This Year Should Make All Resolve to Have Their Own, if Possible.

Home gardens are declaring dividends, regular, extra and midsummer specials all being included in the distribution. These profits have been coming to the home gardener from the time the first lettuce, the first radish, the first green onion was ready for the table. The variety of dividends is limited only by the wisdom of the man who planted the garden. The earlier dividends are accompanied now by others more seasonable, the entire distribution increasing the pleasures of those who taste and enjoy.

The man who prepared the garden plot, who made the soil ready, who laid it out, planted the seed, put out the plants and gave care and thought and attention each day, has already had his investment back in greater health, to say nothing of the pleasures that have been his in helping and studying the productive forces of nature. Now he gets the special dividends in delicious table offerings, everything tasting better because of the toil and thought he gave it. And he can laugh and grow merry over some high prices quoted, because the little back-yard garden spot, to which he gave time and toil, has helped him solve the high cost of living in part. What is there that pays so much for the work as the back-yard garden?—Ohio State Journal.

BEAUTIFY THE WASTE SPOTS

Unsightly Places May Be Given an Attractive Appearance if Paid a Little Attention.

Borders in the garden and yard are like frames that lend beauty to the picture. In many gardens and lawns there seems to be no space that can be spared for flowers, yet there are walks of cement, brick or cinders, waste spaces along the alley, or around small buildings which if bordered with some flowers would change the entire appearance of the place.

China astors, old fashioned pinks, English daisies, forget-me-nots, sweet alyssum, candy tuft, and verbenas are good varieties for almost any soil or climate. In places where a taller border would bring out the picture, use sweet William, Oriental poppies, or the stately hollyhock. Then find a high place for a bird house, or plant some shrubs for nest places.

The true home picture is lacking without the birds and flowers. —The Thrift Magazine.

Town and Country.

I wonder when ambitious cities will learn that it is a dangerous business to be everlastingly campaigning for a greater population. Nearly every town and city in the United States had one slogan, "More population in 1920." This has been going on for the last fifty years until we see our farm population decreased to the danger point. The 1920 census will show five million less people living on the farms in this country now than there were in 1910. It will show an increase of population for the nation of twenty millions. This means twenty-five million more people in the towns and cities and five million less people to feed them. Unless these city folks can find a substitute for bread, meat and potatoes, something serious is going to happen.—John A. Simpson, Farmer.

The Small Towns.

It has been figured up that there are about 12,000 small towns in the United States, half of them with populations of 500 or less. It is these small towns that the rural people are intimately associated with. They sell their produce there, buy the things they need; in fact, these are a part of the rural community. Some of these small towns will become cities, but a very large per cent of them will remain as they are. It is no disgrace to live in a small town, but the rule is that these people are waiting until next year, or some future year to improve their schools, put in sidewalks, a water system, or a sewer system to safeguard the health of the people, or before taking any steps to improve the social and living conditions of the children.—The Thrift Magazine.

Billboards Indicted.

Not alone because they are a blot on the landscape, boardings are considered an evil in more tangible ways. When they are not strongly supported there is always danger of their falling over in storms. Unless they are of fireproof material they are easily inflammable and often serve to carry fire from one building to another. If the boards are not raised several feet from the ground the space back of them almost invariably becomes a dump for refuse and a convenient place for criminals to hide.

Signboards nearly always shut out sunlight and air. To prevent this as much as possible, some cities limit the height and width of the board. The importance of breathing space around a building is recognized by a number of millionaires.

Acts on the Liver, Regulates Kidneys, Purifies the Blood

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in the back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

CARING FOR BREEDING DUCKS

If Not Kept for Production of Market Eggs Fowls Should Be Given Grass Range.

Breeding ducks, if not kept for the production of market eggs, should have a grass range, if possible, after the hatching season is over and be fed sparingly on a mash of 1 part, by weight, corn meal, 2 parts bran, 1 part low-grade wheat flour, 1 part green feed, 8 per cent beef scrap and 3 per cent grit, given once or twice daily, with one feed of mixed grains; or the mash may be made of 3 parts, by measure, corn meal, 4 parts bran, 2 parts low-grade wheat flour, three-fourths part beef scrap, and 2 parts of green feed, with a small amount of grit and shell or mineral matter.

Feed Pekin ducks for eggs, beginning about December 1, on 1 pound of corn meal, 1 pound of low-grade flour or middlings, 1 pound of bran, 15 per cent of beef scrap, 15 per cent of vegetables or green feed, and some grit, feeding this mash twice daily, in the morning and at night; also giving 1 quart of mixed corn and wheat to every 30 ducks at noon when they are laying heavily. These laying rations should be fed throughout the year to Indian Runners or to any breed of ducks kept principally for the production of market eggs, poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture say. If the Indian Runner ducks are not laying, they should be fed sparingly. All rations are by weight unless otherwise stated. Thirty laying ducks (Pekins) will eat about 10 quarts of moist mash at each meal.

FEEDING FOWLS FOR PROFIT

Early Hatched Chick Will Reach Laying Maturity Before Commencement of Cold Season.

The first rule for getting a good profit from poultry is to get the chicks hatched early, and the next is to keep them growing so that they will reach laying maturity before the commencement of cold weather. There is no profit in keeping a chicken just alive, whether it is intended for laying stock or for the market. One reason why more care should be exercised in feeding fowls is that the chicks know less about what is good for them than do the fowls. The healthy chick is a hungry thing and will eat what is given it; the digestive organs being weak are less able to dispose of objectionable feed than are those of older fowls.

Young chicks should be fed a little at a time and often, poultry specialists in United States department of agriculture say. They should be fed early in the morning and just before going to bed at night, and not less than three times in the intervening period. For the first two weeks they may be fed three meals of soft feed and two of hard, and after that age two of soft and three of hard, less soft feed being fed as they grow older. No more moistened soft feed should be given at one time than they will eat up clean.

OBJECTS IN CULLING FLOCK

Insures Feed for Best Layers and Saves Fowls Best Suited for Breeding Purposes.

Culling of the flock serves two purposes: First, it insures that the feed will be consumed by the better-producing hens, thereby increasing the profit. Second, it makes it possible to save those best suited for breeders, both on account of their better production and on account of their superior strength and vitality—qualities so essential to layers if they are to stand up under the severe strain of heavy laying. Weeding out the poor hens gives those left more room and a better chance.

ESSENTIAL FOR YARDED HENS

Charcoal, Grit and Oyster Shells Should Be Kept Before Fowls All the Time.

Where the chickens are kept in small bare yards, fine charcoal, grit and oyster shells should be kept before them all of the time, and cracked or ground bone may be fed. The bone is not necessary for chickens that have a good range

PE-RU-NA

THE REMEDY FOR EVERYDAY ILLS

"I have used Pe-ru-na for years in cases of colds and catarrh. The results have been good, in fact, more than you claimed. Have also taken Lacupia and can easily say it is one of the best blood purifiers I have ever used."

Mr. J. F. Arendt

For Catarrh and Catarrhal Conditions

The evidence of one man like Mr. Arendt is more convincing proof to you of the merits of Pe-ru-na than any written words of ours. For fifty years Pe-ru-na has been the standby of the American family for diseases due to catarrhal inflammation of the mucous membranes lining the organs of the body. Thousands, like Mr. Arendt, have proved the effectiveness of Pe-ru-na for coughs, colds, nasal catarrh, stomach, bowel and liver disorders or any disease characterized by a catarrhal condition.

If your suffering is the result of a catarrhal disorder try Pe-ru-na. It is a true, tried medicine.

SHE KNEW WHAT WAS IN IT

Little Eve Fairly Well Acquainted With the Varied Contents of the Family Bible.

Bishop Hoss said at a Nashville picnic:

"The religious knowledge of too many adults resembles, I am afraid, the religious knowledge of little Eve.

"'So you attend Sunday school regularly?' the minister said to little Eve.

"'Oh, yes, sir,' said she.

"'And you know your Bible?'

"'Oh, yes, sir.'

"'Could you, perhaps, tell me something that is in it?'

"'I could tell you everything that's in it.'

"'Indeed!' And the minister smiled. 'Do tell me, then.'

"'Sister's beau's photo is in it,' said little Eve promptly 'and ma's recipe for vanishin' cream is in it, and a lock of my hair cut off when I was a baby is in it, and the ticket for pa's watch is in it.'"

Forgiven.

"Can you help me out, sir?" said the seedy looking stranger. "I've had some hard luck."

"I suppose you've seen better days?" replied Mr. Twobble.

"Oh, yes, sir. I once got $75 a week for playing in a jazz orchestra."

"Well," said Mr. Twobble, as he thoughtfully thrust his hand into his pocket, "I'm a humane man and I won't hold that against you. Here's a quarter."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

WAS NOT MATTER OF LOVE

Other and More Cogent Reasons Induced the Old Gentleman to Hold His Wife's Hands.

As the Londoner sat in the village inn, drinking a modest pint and chatting with the local residents, he got on the subject of married life. He advanced the opinion that true happiness was more often to be found in the peaceful country than amid the turmoil of a town.

"Well, I ain't so sure about that," said one old chap. "But I do know as I sat here last night and held my old woman's hands for two hours by the clock."

"There!" said the visitor in triumph. "That upholds my argument, and shows how much you love her!"

"Love her!" gasped the old chap. "Why, if I'd 'a' let go she'd 'ave scratched my bloomin' eyes out!"—London Answers.

ESCAPED AN OPERATION

By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Many Such Cases.

Cairo, Ill.—"Sometime ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and every one told me the same but I kept fighting to keep from having the operation. I had read so many times of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped my sister so I began taking it. I have never felt better than I have since then and I keep house and am able to do all my work. The Vegetable Compound is certainly one grand medicine."—Mrs. J. R. MATTHEWS, 3311 Sycamore Street, Cairo, Ill.

Of course there are many serious cases that only a surgical operation will relieve. We freely acknowledge this, but the above letter, and many others like it, amply prove that many operations are recommended when medicine in many cases is all that is needed.

Something New in List of Accessories

WE ARE more allured by lovely accessories of dress than by essential clothing, and these furbelows provide us a continuous, pleasing performance. Something new claims attention all the time, and spices up our work-a-day world of dress. It is the daintiness and freshness of neckwear, or the richness of brocades in hats and bags or nosegays of ribbon flowers, or flowers of organdie or artificial fruits of yarn and numberless accessories made of ribbon that keep the mind occupied and the pocketbook busy just now.

Among the newest ornaments there are chokers (collars) of ribbon with full rosettes, to be worn close up around the neck. They are made of rather narrow ribbon and the rosettes have, as a rule, several short banging ends. Just ahead of the autumn leaves are new blouses that show neck finishing resembling that perennial favorite, the frothy jabot, but the surest indication for fall seems to be the plaited upstanding ruff of ribbon drawn close to the throat with a narrow ribbon tie.

Another item that we may be sure of is the shopping bag of handsome ribbon. There is a new line of these ready for presentation to fall shoppers, and some of them have hats to match. Tops of the bags reveal new designs, and there are many handsome tassels used for finishing them. The soft draped crowns popular in fall hats lend themselves to the hat-and-bag-to-match idea. A handsome set appears in the illustration in which a narrow brimmed shape of plain velvet has a crown of brocaded ribbon draped so that it terminates in two points at the side. Of course these two points exist merely to support two handsome tassels that dangle from them and brush the shoulder. The shopping bag to match is pictured mounted on a metal ring with round top which probably holds a mirror on the reverse side. One may lay a safe wager that it contains a small ribbon covered box that carries compact face powder and a lip stick.

AND NOW THEY TALK OF SUITS

THE first hats and the first suits for fall have made their entry. They almost reconcile one to the passing of summer and succeed in making fall welcome. Women are remarking of the suits, their straight but chic lines, their trim fastenings up the front, their high necks and with all this their lack of severity. For these suits are embellished with embroideries, needlework, used with much discriminating reticence. Handsome composition buttons, sparingly used where buttons are needed, match the cloths in color. Coats are somewhat longer, skirts are sufficiently full for comfort and remain plain, belts are narrow and sometimes long, but often they lap across the front and fasten with a button at each side. Fur is much in evidence in high collars and occasionally in large patch pockets and in cuffs. There is no indication anywhere that women will favor very short skirts—in fact good sense and good taste govern the styles thus far presented. It is a matter for rejoicing—the first things are nearly always the best, and these new suits have caused great enthusiasm among well informed and well dressed women.

Two of the earliest models are pictured here and they include one that has a plaited skirt and a jacket with vest of brocaded ribbon. On the pockets at the sides there is a pretty arrangement of narrow braid, and this also finishes the long sleeves. This model is made of serge. The most liked cloths are those on the order of duvetyn, that is, having a velvety surface, of which there are several varieties with names of their own. A suit of this kind is shown at the right with wide collar of fur.

DODSON WARNS CALOMEL USERS

You Cannot Gripe, Sicken, or Salivate Yourself if You Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition, and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.—Adv.

Felt Fagged Out

South Carolina Man Says Ziron Helped Make Him Feel Stronger.—"A Good Builder."

"I HAVE been taking Ziron and found it to be a splendid tonic, a good builder, and a help to me," says Mr. D. B. Brunson, of New Brookland, S. C. Mr. Brunson explains that he was in a run-down condition, "and when I would get up in the mornings," he says, "I would be so tired, and felt fagged out. I had indigestion, also.

"I decided to use Ziron and see what it would do. I found it just as recommended. It made me feel stronger, and did away with the tired feeling."

ZIRON, of which Mr. Brunson speaks, is a scientific compound, prepared from pure, soluble iron salts, with other tonic ingredients, forming a valuable, building medicine for pale, weak people.

Ziron helps to enrich the blood with iron and tone up the general system.

Many people have been benefited by taking Ziron. Why not try it and see what it will do for you? It may help you. If it doesn't, take the empty bottle back to the druggist's, where you bought the Ziron, and get your money back. This offer applies to the first bottle of Ziron that you take, and is good at any drug store.

Insist on Ziron. Accept no substitute.

THE MEETING OF THE FARMERS AT COURT HOUSE SATURDAY

Pursuant to the call issued in last week's Union-Banner, a large number of Chilton County farmers met at the court house in Clanton last Saturday for the purpose of considering the present situation that confronts growers of cotton, and to elect county representatives to the Cotton Association in Montgomery.

Rev. W. S. Cox was elected chairman of the meeting and W. T. Bean elected Secretary.

The purpose of the meeting was stated as follows: To try to formulate plans whereby the farmers would be in a position to demand more than 30 cents per pound for their cotton and more than $30 per ton for their seed. Various speakers discussed the proposition from every angle, but no definite action was taken on any matter, except the election of W. S. Cox, W. T. Bean and J. D. Collins as delegates to the American Cotton Association.

The meeting adjourned to meet at the coort house in Clanton again on next Saturday, September 4th, at 10 o'clock, a.m. to hear the reports of the delegates from the American Cotton Association, and to take any action that may be deemed proper on any matter that may help to better the condition of the formers.

Every cotton grower in Chilton County is urged to attend this meeting next Saturday. Don't fail to come, as the time is at hand when something must be done to save the day for the cotton growers.

YOUNG MAN SHOT SATURDAY

Robert Turner, a young man 21 or 22 years old, was accidentally shot last Saturday afternoon at his home on the Monkey Wrench Wilson place just north of Clanton. It is said that the accident happened while the young man was engaged in cleaning his pistol. The bullet entered the stomach, plowed its way through the bowels and lodged just under the skin in his back.

Turner was rushed to a hospital in Birmingham and the latest report from him was more favorable than was expected, as it was thought at first that the wound would prove fatal.

The young man was a soldier in the recent war, going all through the conflict in France without a wound. It seems strange that he should get by all the big whizz bangs of the Boches, and come home to become the victim of a little old rusty pistol in his own hands.

FIRST WOMAN TO REGISTER IN CHILTON COUNTY

The first woman to qualify as a legal voter in Chilton County under the provisions of the Susan B. Anthony Amendment to the Constitution of the United Staes was Mrs. Mollie Murrah Sessions, the clerk in the County Tax Office. She was issued her certificate of Registration last Friday, August 27th, by County Registrar, J. R. Parnell. In discussing the incident of her registration Mith Mrs. Sessions, the matter of politics was of course mentioned, whereupon Mrs. Session pledged her loyalty and allegiance to the Republican party.

You can hear it in our store

—the phonograph that is featured in Vaudeville's strangest act

Perhaps you've seen it—Signor Friscoe's "Magic" Xylophone Act.

It's the hit of vaudeville's "Big-Time."

Signor Friscoe's "magic" is an Official Laboratory Model of the New Edison. We have one exactly like it.

Signor Friscoe's instrument is an exact duplicate of the original Official Laboratory Model, which cost Mr. Edison three million dollars to perfect. Our instrument is also an exact duplicate of this famous three million dollar original. We guarantee it to be able to give the same marvelous RE-CREATIONS of music, which Signor Friscoe's Official Laboratory Model gives in vaudeville.

Come in and test the astonishing realism of this instrument for yourself—in Mr. Edison's Realism Test.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

You've read how the New Edison has proved its perfect realism. Four thousand tests have been given, in which more than 50 different artists compared their art with its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. Leading newspapers conceded that there was no difference between the two.

Has any one suggested to you that these comparison tests are "faked"— that the artist imitates the New Edison?

Signor Friscoe's performance makes such an assertion positively ridiculous. Every week, 20,000 people see his hammers ripple over the xylophone keys. Suddenly he holds them aloft—still.

The rippling music continues.

Slowly, the gorgeous curtains of the back-drop part. The audience gasps. The New Edison stands revealed. It has taken up Signor Friscoe's performance, and is now RE-CREATING it alone. The effect of this extraordinary magic can rest upon only one fact: No one can distinguish any difference between Signor Friscoe's performance and its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. Signor Friscoe could not possibly imitate the New Edison, because the xylophone can not be made to imitate any other instrument, so as to deceive its hearers

Signor Friscoe's act is not an Edison enterprise. He has simply been clever enough to use the New Edison for what it is worth. Why don't you?

PRICES

The price of the New Edison has increased less than 15% since 1914. This includes the War Tax.

Mr. Edison has staved off price advances by personally absorbing more than half of the increased cost of manufacture.

Because of the exceptionally high quality of materials and workmanship demanded by the Edison Laboratories, and the continued scarcity of both, it may be necessary to advance prices. But rest assured that this will not occur, unless Mr. Edison is forced to it.

Our Budget Plan—the thrift way of spending—will help you buy now. Let us tell you about it.

The Economy of Using Goodyear Small Car Tires

So-called bargain tires, made up for sensational sales and offered at ridiculously low prices, do not attract careful buyers.

They are far more concerned with what they get than with what they pay because they know that in the end it is performance and not price that delivers actual tire economy.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30 x 3-, 30 x 3½- and 31 x 4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they deliver exceptional mileage at exceedingly low cost.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires and Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes.

30x3½ Goodyear Double-Cure Fabric, All-Weather Tread..... $23.50

30x3½ Goodyear Single-Cure Fabric, Anti-Skid Tread..... $21.50

Goodyear Heavy Tourist Tubes cost no more than the price you are asked to pay for tubes of less merit—why risk costly casings when such sure protection is available? 30x3½ size in waterproof bag..... $4.50

Missouri Lady Suffered Until She Tried Cardui.—Says "Result Was Surprising."—Got Along Fine, Became Normal and Healthy.

Springfield Mo.—"My back was so weak I could hardly stand up, and I would have bearing-down pains and was not well at any time," says Mrs. D. V. Williams, wife of a well-known farmer on Route 6, this place. "I kept getting headaches and having to go to bed," continues Mrs. Williams describing the troubles from which she obtained relief through the use of Cardui. "My husband, having heard of Cardui, proposed getting it for me.

"I saw after taking some Cardui . . . that I was improving. The result was surprising. I felt like a different person.

"Later I suffered from weakness and weak back, and felt all run-down. I did not rest well at night, I was so nervous and cross. My husband said he would get me some Cardui, which he did. It strengthened me . . . My doctor said I got along fine. I was in good healthy condition. I cannot say too much for it."

Thousands of women have suffered as Mrs. Williams describes, until they found relief from the use of Cardui. Since it has helped so many, you should not hesitate to try Cardui if troubled with womanly ailments.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

Is Your Skin Ablaze With Fiery Itchings?

Don't Continue to Suffer Because of Wrong Treatment.

Impurities in the blood cause millions of tiny disease germs to set up their attack on the surface of the skin, and in the form of pimples, boils, scaly eruptions and itchy, burning irritations, begin their disfiguring and destructive work.

These disease germs can be reached only through the blood, and local applications have no effect whatever. That is why salves, ointments, lotions, washes and other remedies applied to the skin can do no more than give mere temporary relief.

If you want genuine relief from the tortures of skin diseases, lose no time in discarding all local remedies, and begin taking S. S. S.

OUR GREAT INCENTIVE TO DEVELOP THE WATERWAYS

ALABAMA HAS MORE NAVIGABLE RIVERS THAN ANY OTHER STATE
1570 MILES OF WATERWAYS OPEN TO STEAM NAVIGATION.

Water Transportation for Freight is the Cheapest Transportation on Earth

But the freight carrying capacity of the rivers can not develop beyond the freight handling capacity of the seaport.

The rivers can no more rise higher than their source than River Traffic can exceed the facilities for handling this traffic at the rivers' outlet, the port.

Congestion of the Port is Death to River Transportation!

Those who would kill the rivers, first strangle the seaport, and the deed is done.

To preserve water transportation to the use of the people, Alabama must own and control the terminals at the state's only seaport—Mobile.

This can be done without cost to the taxpayers, by lending the credit of the state for the construction of wharves, cotton warehouses, grain elevators and modern freight handling devices at the seaport.

These terminal facilities will pay for themselves. They will be owned and controlled by the state. They will keep the rivers and seaport free from monopoly. They will result in lower freight rates.

The voters of Alabama can help to achieve this Transportation Independence by voting for the SEAPORT AMENDMENT at the general election, November 2nd.

For 17 years Louisiana has backed its port, making New Orleans the second seaport of the United States. Alabama can do no less.

"WHO SHOT HER?"

Synopsis.—Spalding Nelson is occupying the apartments of his great-uncle, Rufus Gaston. The Gastons, leaving on a trip, tell him about mysterious noises and "whispers" that have scared them. He becomes acquainted with Barbara Bradford, who lives in the same big building. He instinctively dislikes and distrusts the superintendent, Wick. The mysteries in his apartments begin with the disappearance of the Gaston pearls from the wall safe. He decides not to call in the police, but to do his own investigating. It is soon evident that someone has access to his rooms. Becoming friendly with Barbara, he learns that her apartments are equally mysterious. She tells him that several years before her sister Claire, who lives with her, had made a run-away marriage with an adventurer, from whom she was soon parted, and the marriage had been annulled. Claire is engaged to be married and someone has stolen documents concerning the affair from the Bradford apartment and is attempting to blackmail the Bradfords. Nelson takes Miss Kelly, the telephone girl, to dinner with the idea of pumping her. Gorman, a hotel detective, recognizes her as the wife of Lefty Moore, a noted burglar. Nelson tells his story to Gorman and puts the case in his hands. Nelson finds a secret passage, with a panel door in his room. He realizes he loves Barbara. He and Barbara hear a shot in the building.

I sprang after her, but she moved so quickly that she was out of the window and safely home before I could stop her. Only waiting to see her off the ledge I turned back and hastily pulling the panel into place I dashed for the front of the house. The screams and the shots I was sure had come from the apartment directly below mine. I was certain that there had been murder done there, and my mind was made up to investigate it at once. If I moved quickly there might be an opportunity to catch the murderer red-handed. I let myself out and dashed down the one flight of stairs. As I arrived there, the ascending elevator stopped, and Mr. Wick burst out, followed by an excited elevator runner. Wick was carrying a revolver in his hand.

"Did you hear anything?" he asked excitedly.

"I heard a woman screaming in this apartment and then a shot."

"I heard it, too. In which apartment was it?"

"Right here," I said, pointing to the door.

"Miss Lutan's," he said. "Let's go in. Here's my pass-key. You open the door. I'll be right behind you with my revolver."

CHAPTER VIII.

Inserting the key Mr. Wick handed me, I turned it sharply and flung the door wide. It revealed a luxuriously furnished apartment, the front rooms of which were extravagantly ablaze with light.

For a moment the three of us, Mr. Wick, the elevator boy and myself, stood there with our ears alert for any sound from the apartment. While I do not admit to being a coward, the unknown has its terrors for all of us, and I must confess that the knowledge that Mr. Wick had his revolver drawn was indeed comforting. All was silence in the place.

"John," said Wick to the elevator boy, "you stand here right by the door and keep your eye on the elevator. If anybody tries to sneak past you, you holler for us."

"She Has Been Murdered," I Cried; "Get the Police at Once."

"'Deed I will, Mr. Wick," said the boy, with chattering teeth. "I'll holler, all right."

"Go ahead, Mr. Nelson," said the superintendent, "I'm right behind you with the revolver."

Without waiting to explore the front rooms, I turned at once and ran down the long hall to the sitting room. If, as I suspected, murder had been done here, I was confident that the scene of the tragedy would be the room directly under mine. The screams I had heard—and the shot—had seemed to come from under my very feet.

Although the lights in the front of the hall were burning, the sitting room was in darkness. As I reached the door, my fingers sought the button, and as the flare of light illuminated the room I looked hastily about me. There was no one there, but my one quick glance showed me that the door of the wall safe, located similarly to the one in the apartment above, was standing wide open, Quirkly I sprang to inspect the room corresponding to mine, a room, it will be recalled, opening off the sitting room. Here, too, was darkness, and as I turned on the lights, I stood aghast with horror.

On the floor, close up to the inner wall, lay the contorted body of a beautiful young woman. Her eyes were wide open and staring. One arm was twisted under her, and the other hand was clutching at the front of her bodice, where a blotch of ghastly red indicated the path of the shot that I had heard.

"It's Miss Lutan," said Mr. Wick's voice behind me.

"She's been murdered," I cried; "get the police at once."

As I bent over her to see if there was any evidence of life, I saw imprinted in her tender white throat the marks of her assailant's brutal fingers.

"Come," I said, "help me lift her on to this couch, and then telephone at once for a doctor."

Mr. Wick had been all the while standing there, staring at the body as if stupefied by the tragedy, but he obeyed my directions, and with him at her feet and I at her head we laid her down on the couch, where I proceeded to loosen her gown and to try by artificial respiration to restore her blood to circulation.

"Get the doctor at once," I commanded again, "and 'phone for the police."

"John," called out Mr. Wick, "go to the 'phone and tell Miss Kelly to send for Doctor Hunt to come at once."

"Tell her to get the police, too," I insisted.

"And let the burglar escape while we're doing it," objected Mr. Wick. "Come on, let's look through the apartment. He may be hiding somewhere still."

Together, while the boy was 'phoning, we went from room to room, peering into closets and under beds. There was no one there and no traces of the murderer's presence. Even the servants' quarters were untenanted. Only one thing happened that struck me as peculiar. As I started up the hall to search the bedrooms, I looked back and caught Mr. Wick furtively closing the wall safe. His action in surreptitiously closing this without saying anything to me made me suddenly suspicious of him. I recalled that Detective Gorman had put Mr. Wick into his circle of suspects along with the burglar's wife. Could it be possible that the superintendent of the building himself was in connivance with the band of criminals who had been harassing the Bradfords and me? I determined to watch his every move.

"There's no one here," I said, as we completed our round of the various rooms. "The murderer has made his escape. Hasn't that boy 'phoned for the police yet?"

Mr. Wick seemed so averse to carrying out my suggestion about the police that I think he must have sensed the suspicion in my voice.

"I think I had better ask Mr. Kent about it first," he said nervously.

"Who's Mr. Kent?" I demanded.

My thoughts were so taken up with the unexpected tragedy that the name at first meant nothing to me. Suddenly I remembered. It was to the apartment of Mr. Henry Kent that Miss Kelly had 'phoned last night when she was dining with me. I recalled, too, that Gorman had charged me to find out all I could about him.

"Who's Mr. Kent?" I repeated sharply. "What's he got to do with it?"

"He's the owner of the building," explained Mr. Wick. "He doesn't like the Granddeck to be mentioned in the papers. He says any notoriety is bad for its exclusiveness. I don't believe he'd want the police called in. In fact, sir, I'm sure he wouldn't."

"Whether he wants it or not," I said firmly, "it's got to be done. You can't keep murders out of the paper. Either you call the police right away or else I will."

My threat forced him to telephone against his will. I could quite understand his employer's aversion to having a crime in the Granddeck made public. But there was no help for it. There had been a dastardly crime committed, and the police must be informed. Yet it was not to the police that Mr. Wick was telephoning. It evidently was to Mr. Kent's apartment in the building.

"Miss Lutan's been shot by a burglar in her apartment," I heard him say. "Mr. Nelson and me just discovered her body. What's that, sir?"

Just what Mr. Kent's reply on hearing the shocking news had been I had, of course, no means of knowing, but whatever it was, over the superintendent's face came an expression of incredulity and amazement.

"What do you think," said Mr. Wick, turning to me; "he says for me to call up Headquarters at once."

"Of course," I said, "it is the only thing to do."

Nevertheless, as Mr. Wick waited for the number, he kept shaking his head and muttering under his breath something that sounded like:

"To think of his telling me to call in the police!"

With the doctor summoned and the police sent for, there seemed to be little else for us to do but wait, so Wick and I sat down together in the rear sitting room with the elevator boy still on guard at the door.

"Who was Miss Lutan?" I asked.

"Why, Daisy Lutan, the actress," said Mr. Wick in surprise. "I supposed every one knew her."

"I've heard about her," I hastened to say, "but I had no idea that she lived in the Granddeck. Did she live here alone?"

"She keeps a maid, an old woman that has been with her for years."

"Where's the maid tonight?"

"Out to the movies, I s'pose. That's where she goes every night when Miss Lutan isn't playing. When she is, she goes to the theater with her."

"Then Miss Lutan is not playing now?"

"Not for the last month."

"Had there been any one here with her tonight?'

"I'll ask the elevator boy."

"John says she came in alone about fifteen minutes ago," said Mr. Wick when he came back. "She went out about seven. Her own chauffeur was driving her then, but when she came back she was in a hired taxi. That's something I can't understand."

"Women of Her Type Always Have a Lot of Men Friends."

"How do you suppose the murderer escaped?"

I was trying every avenue of questioning to see if I could not surprise Wick into some damaging admission. I was beginning to suspect that he knew far more about Miss Lutan's murderer than he was telling. I felt somehow that his whole search for the man who had killed Miss Lutan had been entirely perfunctory, a bluff to deceive me. In my growing dislike for the man, I felt that it would not be beyond the range of probability for Wick to have been standing guard at the door while a confederate rifled the apartment.

"I'm no detective," he answered noncommittally. "All I know is that he has gone. He certainly ain't here in the apartment."

It was on the tip of my tongue to suggest that we look in the secret passageway. I felt that the shock it would be to Wick to learn that I knew about this might lead him to open his lips. I felt certain that it was by way of a similar passageway to the one I had discovered in my room that the murderer had escaped. But before I could make up my mind to speak the doctor arrived.

He made a hasty inspection and then said tersely:

"There's nothing here for me to do. This woman has been dead for some time."

"How long?" I asked.

"It is impossible for me to judge—maybe twenty minutes, perhaps an hour. I should say that death was practically instantaneous. She was killed by a bullet penetrating the heart. Who shot her?"

He looked sharply from me to Mr. Wick, as if suspecting that it might have been one of us.

"A burglar got her just a few minutes ago," Mr. Wick explained. "Mr. Nelson and me heard a scream and a shot. We let ourselves in here with my pass key and found her here. It must have been a burglar that she surprised when she entered the apartment."

"It looks like it," assented the physician. "There are marks on her throat where he tried to strangle her screams. Have you notified the police?"

"Yes," said Mr. Wick.

"There's nothing more that I can do, then," said the doctor, making his preparations to depart.

"Would you not wait until the police come?" suggested the superintendent. "They'll be here any minute and probably they'll want a statement from you."

"Very well," said the doctor, "I'll wait."

As we waited the three of us chatted about the crime and about the dead actress. From the conversation I learned that at the height of her meteoric career on Broadway Daisy Lutan had become the wife of the young son of a very rich family. His parents insisted that she had trapped him into matrimony and after long legal wrangling she had been divorced about a year ago. She had received a large sum in settlement, and this with her earnings as an actress enabled her to live in luxury.

"Hadn't she a sweetheart now?" I asked.

"Better make it plural," sneered the doctor, "Women of her type always have a lot of men friends."

"No men ever came to see her here. I'm positive of that," said Mr. Wick.

"Of course not," said the roctor sarcastically. "The reputation of the Granddeck apartments must be protected at all costs."

As we talked two detectives in plain clothes arrived. They viewed the body and proceeded to question the doctor.

"How was this woman killed?"

"By a revolver shot right through the heart."

"Who is she?"

"Daisy Lutan, the actress."

"Who did it?"

"It must have been a burglar," interjected Mr. Wick. "My theory is that she came in unexpectedly and found him at work."

"Who found her?"

"These gentlemen," said the doctor, including both Mr. Wick and me with a wave of his hand.

The detectives turned to Mr. Wick first.

"Tell us about it," one of them directed.

"My name is James Wick," he began as if he was reciting a familiar lesson. "I am the superintendent of the Granddeck apartments. I was in the elevator about half an hour ago when I heard a woman screaming and then the sound of the shot. I took out my revolver and got off at this floor to investigate. At the door I found Mr. Nelson. He, too, had heard the screams and the shot and thought they came from this apartment. I took out my pass key and we went in."

"Were there any signs of the burglar?" asked the other man.

"No, we looked all through the apartment and found no one."

"Was anything missing?"

I waited with bated breath to hear if Wick would tell of having found the wall safe open. If he did not I felt it would be conclusive evidence that there was something he was trying to conceal.

"I didn't notice anything missing," he said glibly. "I wouldn't know, anyhow. I don't know what stuff she had here."

"Who would know?"

"Her maid might. She's out now. Generally she's home by eleven o'clock."

"Did she keep only the one servant?"

"Only the maid and a chauffeur."

"Then she was all alone in the apartment?"

"Yes. She'd gone out all dressed up about seven in her own car. She came home unexpectedly in a hired taxi not more than half an hour ago."

"Did she come home alone?"

"Sure she was alone. At least the hall boys told me so. I did not see her come in, myself."

More and more I was convinced that Wick was lying. I was sure he knew far more about affairs than he was admitting. Why did he keep harping on the fact that Miss Lutan had come in "unexpectedly?" What means had he of knowing what time she was expected home? Furthermore he said he was in the elevator when he heard the screams and the shot. I did not believe it would have been possible for the sounds to have carried that far. The walls were all deadened, and the room where the tragedy had taken place was at the back of the house many feet distant from the elevators. I wondered if the burglar had not been in the place with Mr. Wick's connivance, while he stood guard outside. As he heard me coming he might have taken refuge in the elevator. And why did he have his revolver so conveniently ready?

The detective who had been questioning Wick turned to me.

"Who are you?"

"Spalding Nelson."

"What do you do? Where do you work?"

"I'm a clerk."

"A clerk living at the Granddeck apartments," he sneered. "You must have a good job."

"I haven't any at present," I replied. "I'm living here in Mr. Gaston's apartment, taking care of it while he and his wife are away."

I could see that my statement that I was only a clerk and was not at present employed had not made a favorable impression on the detective.

"Will you explain what you were doing at the door of this apartment when the superintendent arrived?" he demanded with a growing suspicion in his tones.

"That's easy to explain," I retorted. "I was in my apartment directly over this one. I heard her scream and then the shot. It seemed to come from the floor right below me, so I ran down to investigate."

"Is that right?" he asked, turning to Mr. Wick.

The net about Nelson is drawn closer.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

Having a purpose in life is essential to right living. Unless a man is now living to a purpose, he has either not yet begun to live, or he has got through living; and in either case he is out of place in the world.

COLD MEAT COOKERY.

So often a few slices of some choice roast, steak or stew is allowed to waste because the family is tired of it, when a little different way of serving the meat, a new sauce, would make it a most attractive and appetizing dish.

Roulade de Boeuf.—Take a pound of cold roast beef, free it from skin, bone and gristle, and put it through the meat grinder with a third of a pound or less of ham or bacon, lean and fat together. Season highly with salt and pepper, add a teaspoonful of finely minced olives, a few drops of tabasco, a teaspoonful of minced parsley, a little lemon peel and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix all together and add a half cupful of cooked macaroni, cut in one-inch lengths and tossed in butter. Add the well-beaten yolks of two eggs, and the whites beaten to a stiff froth. Mix well, roll and cover with a greased paper and bake in a well-greased baking pan in a moderate oven one-half hour. Serve with the following sauces: Add salt and pepper to a pint of tomatoes which have been put through a sieve. Add a teaspoonful of sugar, a tablespoonful of vinegar, a teaspoonful of onion juice, or a half clove of garlic minced. Cook until reduced slightly in bulk.

Cannelon a la Royale.—Take a pound of cold roast veal, free it from skin and fat and grind it twice through the meat chopper. Add to it a quarter of a pound of ham also minced. Add salt, pepper, minced parsley, half a teaspoonful of minced shallot, a little grated lemon rind and a pinch of nutmeg. Mix well, add two well-beaten eggs, shape in a roll, cover with buttered paper and bake a half hour.

Mutton Reheated.—Underdone mutton can be turned into a very nice dish. Cut a sufficient number of slices from a leg of mutton; cut in rounds or squares. Place a tablespoonful of butter in a plate. Add to it a tablespoonful of Worcestershire sauce and salt to taste. Have ready well-browned toast, place a piece of mutton on each, place in a hot oven and bake ten minutes.

Because in a day of my days to come
There waiteth a grief to be,
Shall my heart grow faint, and my lips be dumb
In this day that is bright for me?

Because of a subtle sense of pain,
Like a pulse-beat threaded through
The bliss of my thought, shall dare refrain
From delight in the pure and true?

REFRESHING FROZEN DISHES.

One may have such a variety of frozen dishes with the foundation prepared like the usual vanilla ice cream. Various sauces, fruits, nuts, all add to the attractiveness and lend variety.

Banana Sherbet.—Put three cupfuls of water and one and one-half cupfuls of sugar in a saucepan; boil five minutes. Add the juice of one lemon and two oranges, with a little of the grated rind of each and one cupful of banana pulp. Scrape off the stringy portion of the bananas before putting through a sieve. Beat the sirup and fruit mixture till cold, then stir in three cupfuls of whipped cream, measured after whipping, or the whites of three eggs beaten stiff. Freeze until soft like mush. Serve in frappe glasses.

Banana Jelly.—Take one pint of banana pulp, the juice of one lemon, one-fourth cupful of orange juice or any good fruit juice, one-half cup of sugar, one-third of a package of gelatin, one-third of a cupful of cold water. Soak the gelatin in cold water, put the bananas through a sieve, add the sugar, the juice and let stand until the gelatin is softened and dissolved over hot water. Mix all together thoroughly and turn into a mold. Let stand in a cold place to become firm. Serve with cream or a custard.

Honey Taffy.—Boil (270 degrees Fahrenheit) one cupful of sugar, one cupful of water together until it makes a hard ball when dropped in cold water. Add vanilla or other flavoring, pour into a buttered dish and cool until it can be handled, then pull.

Honey Hermits.—Take one cupful of shortening, one and one-half cupfuls of honey, one teaspoonful of soda, three eggs, five cupfuls of sifted flour, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of cinnamon, two and one-fourth cupfuls of raisins, chopped, two and one-fourth cupfuls of nut meats, chopped. Dissolve the soda in the honey, warmed, add the shortening and cream together. Beat the eggs well, add the flour, salt and cinnamon, and lastly the raisins and nuts. Sift until stiff and drop from teaspoon on a buttered sheet. Bake in a moderate oven.

Eggs aux Tomatoes.—Put a half pint of tomato pulp well seasoned into a well-buttered baking dish. Add a tablespoonful of butter, set into a hot oven for ten minutes then remove and add four eggs, added carefully to poach. Cook from three to four minutes and serve from the dish.

If thou hast friends give them thy best endeavor,
Thy warmest impulse and thy purest thought,
Keeping in mind and word and action ever—
The time is short.

GOOD DISHES FOR THE FAMILY.

If there is one article of our diet which more than another needs careful cooking it is vegetables. The vegetables prepared by the ordinary cook are a byword for all that is tasteless and unappetizing. The mineral salts which we need to keep up the body functions are largely thrown down the kitchen sink when draining the vegetables. Boiling any vegetable in water is not the best method, for its nutriment is largely wasted in the water in which it is cooked. Steaming, cooking in casserole or paper bag does away with this waste.

Irish Stew.—Cut up two or three pounds of mutton into serving-sized pieces, leaving very little fat. Season well with salt and pepper and add six good-sized onions peeled and finely chopped, two pounds of potatoes peeled and sliced thin. Add a bunch of herbs, parsley, savory or any combination liked. Add a cupful of hot water and bake in a covered casserole for an hour or longer.

Eggs a la Bechamel.—Cook four eggs in the shell until hard. Drop them into cold water, shell and cut them in halves. Butter a baking dish, add the eggs with a half cupful of cream, pepper and salt to taste with a tiny dust of powdered mace. Bake in a hot oven ten minutes.

Chicken a la Reine.—Clean, dress and truss a fowl as for roasting. Rub it well with a cut onion. Place it in a baking pan with a half cupful of good stock, add a sprig of parsley, a bay leaf, a blade of mace and three spring onions tied together. Add a half cupful of cooked rice and let it cook slowly in a moderate oven until the fowl is cooked. Remove the herbs and onions and serve with the broth slightly thickened.

Days for deeds are few, my brother,
Then today fulfill your vow;
If you mean to help another,
Do not dream it—do it now.

A FEW VEGETABLE DISHES.

A steam cooker, or, lacking that, an old-fashioned steamer which fits the top of a kettle is an invaluable utensil for cooking. Vegetables which are steamed contain all the valuable mineral salts, the soluble nutritive materials which are thrown away when the vegetables are boiled and the water thrown away. It takes about a third longer to steam vegetables, but it takes little fuel to keep the steamer in operation when once started. A whole dinner from vegetables to meat, fish and dessert, may be cooked together.

Summer Squash en Casserole.—Take two and one-half cupfuls of cooked squash, add three-fourths of a cupful of thick, stewed tomatoes, two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, one tablespoonful of grated onion, one-half cupful of chopped meat, fish, or nuts, mix well and cover with three-fourths cupful of buttered crumbs. Bake in a hot oven until well browned. Egg plant or carrots may be served in this dish in place of squash.

Roast Beef With Mexican Sauce.—Reheat cold roast beef cut in thin slices in the following sauce: Cook one onion finely chopped in two tablespoonfuls of butter, five minutes. Add one red and one green pepper chopped, one clove of garlic also chopped, and two tomatoes cut in pieces. Cook fifteen minutes. Add one teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce, one-fourth teaspoonful of celery salt and salt to taste.

Banana Ice Cream.—Scald one quart of thin cream, dissolve in this one and one-half cupfuls of sugar; when cold add a pint of chilled cream and freeze. When the cream is partly frozen add one and one-half cupfuls of banana pulp put through a ricer, mixed with the juice of one and one-half lemons. Finish freezing and let stand a few hours to ripen.

Tomatoes and Onions.—Take one quart of tomatoes and one quart of onions sliced. Stew the onions until about half done in as little water as possible, then add the tomatoes. Cook until tender. Add a liberal amount of olive oil or butter, season to taste with salt, and thicken with a little flour stirred with cream.

USE MACHINES IN CUTTING CORN

The Proper Time for Cutting Corn in Order to Preserve Its Full Feeding Value Is So Short That the Saving of Time From the Use of Machinery for Harvesting Often Means More in the Farmer's Pocket Than Merely the Wages Saved.

Cutting corn with machinery does not reduce materially the cost of cutting. It does, however, enable the farmer to cut a given acreage much more quickly, and, in that way, often proves profitable. The proper time for cutting corn in order to preserve its full feeding value is so short and other work is usually so pressing that the saving of time often means a great deal more in the farmer's pocket than could any actual saving in wages and other cutting costs. This is the view taken of corn-harvesting machinery by the United States department of agriculture, as expressed in Farmers' Bulletin 992, the Use of Machinery in Cutting Corn. The saving is greater in cutting corn for silage than for fodder, the bulletin continues.

The two types of corn-harvesting machinery, the corn binder and the platform harvester, are discussed in detail. Under normal conditions, it is stated, the binder drawn by three horses will cut about seven acres in a ten-hour day. One man will be required to operate the machine and two to shock the corn. These three men working with corn knives would probably be able to cut about four acres in a ten-hour day. The binder, therefore, does nearly twice as much work as the three men could do without it.

Objection to Binder.

There are, however, limitations and objections to the use of the binder. If the corn is badly blown down, the binder may not be able to handle it and may have to stand idle through a season. The binder necessarily knocks off some of the ears, and it may be necessary to send a man over the field to pick up the ears by hand. Men at first find it harder to handle the bundles from a binder than to handle loose stalks. Some binders drop the bundles so nearly behind the machine that the horses have to walk over them on the next round, and thus considerable damage is done to the corn. However, the specialists say, these objections can be minimized even where they cannot be completely obviated.

In order to make the use of the binder worth while, the reduction in labor and the saving due to getting the work done at the proper time must more than pay for the use of the machine, the twine, and the labor of the horses.

The saving is greater when cutting for silage, for several reasons. The binder saves the labor of at least two men in cutting. Often the saving in time due to having the stalks in bundles instead of loose will enable the operator further to reduce the size of the crew. If only a small amount of silage is to be put up, a binder would not be a paying operation unless there were a large quantity of other corn to cut. The co-operative use of both binder and cutter is discussed and is recommended where the only corn cut is that for silage. Co-operative ownership and use of the binder is said to be frequently advantageous for small farmers. The use of the corn elevator in connection with the binder is discussed and both the advantages and disadvantages pointed out.

Platform Harvester Cheaper.

The platform harvester, while a cruder machine than the binder, is much less expensive to purchase, requires only one horse instead of three or four, and two men instead of three. Its day's work is about four or five acres. Generally, the equivalent of the labor of one man is saved every day the platform harvester is used. The work is harder with the platform harvester than with the binder. But the platform harvester can be used more profitably on small farms than can a binder and it can stand idle a greater part of the time or wear out sooner than a binder and still be a profitable investment. In cutting corn for silage, the platform harvester will not save as much labor as a binder.

DECREASE INDICATED IN ANIMAL PRODUCTS

Losing Ground in Value of Exports Since 1893.

World War Brought Percentage Up Suddenly to 29.4, or Almost Double What It Had Been in Preceding Five Years.

Animal products have been losing ground in relative position in the value of the agricultural exports of this country since 1893. In that year they were 29.8 per cent of the value of all domestic agricultural exports, and, by 5-year averages, they were 28.4 per cent in 1894-1898, 27.2 per cent in 1899-1903, 24.8 per cent in 1904-1908, and 16.9 per cent in 1909-1913.

Then followed the world war. This brought the percentage for animal products up to 29.4, or suddenly to a fraction almost double what it had been in the preceding five years.

The percentages for crops and crop products being complementary to those for animal products, it follows that crops gained relatively when animal products lost, and lost when they gained. It is to be remembered that values are involved and not quantities.

Steady gain in relative position in the imports of this country has been made by animal products, and the war accentuated the gain. From 1894-1898 to 1914-1918, the fraction representing these products increased from 27.5 to 39.1 per cent.

KEEPING FLIES FROM COWS

Mixtures Recommended by Dr. C. H. Eckles Applied Advantageously With Spray Pump.

The following two formulas of a reasonably priced "fly repellent" were recommended by Dr. C. H. Eckles when he was professor of the department of dairying of the Missouri university college of agriculture:

1. Fish oil 1 gallon, oil of pine tar 2 ounces, oil of pennyroyal 2 ounces, kerosene ½ pint.

2. Fish oil 1 quart, petroleum 1 quart, carbolic acid 1 ounce.

These mixtures, like the ready mixed ones, are applied most advantageously with a hand spray pump. The spray is generally applied once a day, just before the evening milking.

THE CHILTON COUNTY S. S. CONVENTION

The annual convention of the Chilton County Sunday School Association was held in Clanton August 23, 1920.

We were very glad to see so many schools represented. We are sure every one that attended was benefitted by the splendid speeches made by our state workers, Mr. J.B. Green and Miss Bean, and our people here at home, Rev. Carter, Rev. Maye and Miss Gibson. Short talks were made by others such as our county president, Mr. Flummer. They were all helpful, and we feel sure everyone went home with a determination to do more for the Master in the future than in the past.

Reports show that our county president, Mr. D. J. Flummer, Teenage Supt., Prof. J. L. Johnson, have been very busy. We regret so much that we didn't have Mr. Johnson's report made, but time was short, and it, with the report of our district president, was left off.

The best work done was not reported. The secretary's report shows about eighty schools in county; twenty-four sent in their reports; 1850 reported in Sunday School, including home department and cradle roll. If we had reports from all the schools these figure would have looked real good. We hope to make it better next year.

The county officers are: President, Prof. J. L. Johnson, Clanton; Vice President, D. J. Flummer, Thorsby; Secretary & Treasurer, Della Willitms, Verebna; Adult Supt., J. C. Patillo, Verbena; Teenage Supt., R. L. Duffey, Mt. Creek; Elementary Supt., Mrs. Maggie Boone, Verbena.

Following are district presidents: District No. 1, to be supplied; No. 2, Felix Eiland, Thorsby; No. 3, T. L. Lecroy, Maplesville; No. 4, H. A. Harris, Clanton; No. 5, W. A. Calloway, Verbena; No. 6, Howard Oden, Maplesville. Executive Committee: Chairman, Rev. P. G. Carter, Clanton; H. J. Grooms, Mulberry; Miss Bertha Littleton, Thorsby.

Following are the resolutions:

1st. Whereas, there is much misunderstanding among some of the denominations and people of Chilton County, concernig the Alabama Sunday School Association,

Therefore, be it resolved, That a strong propaganda be put on in the county through the county paper by the distribution of literature, by personal visitation, by addresses at the district meetings and the conventions, and in any other way possible setting forth the real purpose and work of the said association.

2nd. That this be done by the officers and executive committees of the county, assisted in every way possible by the headquarters for this State.

Resolved, second, That the Alabama Sunday School Association with its local officers tender their grateful thanks, first, to the County Commissioners for the use of the court house in which to hold the convention; second, to the people of Clanton who entertained the visiting delegates in their homes; third, to all other workers who have contributed in any way for the success of the convention.

Resolved third, Whereas, many schools are giving a credit of 50 per cent on the grades of such pupils who are faithful in their attendance at Sunday School and furnishes a certificate of same. Therefore, we the Alabama Sunday School Association of Chilton County, indorse such actions and respectfully petition the county officials of said county a similar privilege to the teachers and pupils of the respective schools of the county.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Investment, Expense, Revenue

The year 1917 was the best year in the history of this Company. The Company earned during that year more money in the state of Alabama than ever before, or since.

The following figures speak for themselves:

Statement of Investment, Revenue and Expense, State of Alabama.

	1916	1917	1918	1919
Investment	$7,077,758.14	$7,412,337.34	$7,800,878.83	$8,341,724.24
Gross Revenue	1,849,159.87	1,984,168.14	2,219,100.40	2,605,993.84
Total Expenses	1,607,563.36	1,722,564.25	2,059,862.59	2,411,155.47
Net Revenue	241,596.51	261,603.89	159,237.81	194,838.37
Per cent of net earnings to investment	3.41	3.53	2.06	2.34

Contrast that with the per cent of profit earned in your legal business!

This Company has never earned a profit equal to the legal rate of interest in the State of Alabama, so there were no excess earnings during the past. These figures show the actual operations in this state.

The investment shown is all physical property, and is what it originally cost the Company. There is not one dollar for franchise, "going value" or any so-called intangible property.

There is no question of stocks or bonds or capitalization of any kind involved. These figures represent the original cost of the actual physical property of the Company used by the public of Alabama, the actual expenses incurred in operating that property and the gross and net revenue received—nothing more and nothing less.

This property is worth more than the figure representing its original cost. To reproduce this property today would cost not less than 100 per cent more than it originally cost.

If the Company's net earnings were measured by today's valud of the property, they would not exceed 3 per cent.

The next advertisement will give the facts of the service situation.

Foshee has already sent out the following letter to the several members, calling their attention to the importance of the meeting, and naming some things that will come before the committee:

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 4, 1920.

Dear Sir:

You have been appointed a member of the Republican Campaign Committee of Chilton County in the coming campaign and you are requested to meet with the Committee and candidates at the court house in Clanton on next Friday, Sept. 10 at 10:00 o'clock, a.m. for the purpose of devising ways and means of successfully waging the coming campaign in this county.

We want two ladies on this committee from each Beat of the county and we expect to appoint them next Friday, and we ask that before that time you carefully consider this matter and be in a position to recommend such ladies at that meeting. Try to select ladies that can be of most service in getting the ladies of your Beat to register and vote in the November election.

We must begin at once the work of seeing that all the Republican ladies of the county register and vote, for if they do not our ticket stands a good chance of being defeated in the coming election.

All the candidates are expected to be at the meeting next Friday and we shall be greatly disappointed if you are not present. With best wishes for the success of the Republican party, I am, Your very truly,

HOWARD L. FOSHEE.

CHILTON COUNTY HIGH SCHOOL HAS SPLENDID OPENING

The Chilton County High School began the fall term Wednesday, Sept. 1st, with a very fine first day attendance, which manifests a real interest and desire of parents that their children attain the best standing possible during this scholastic year. The enrollment has reached 143 to date. There are many more who expect to enter. You are urged to enter at once as you will find some difficulty in doing your work after entering late.

The school is progressing nicely under the management of a very enthusiastic faculty who are giving all of their time and energy toward making this the strongest year in the history of the school.

Organization and classification is now about complete and as soon as students have their studies well in hand athletics, literary societies, etc., will be organized.

Parents are invited to visit the school. This is your school and you are expected to visit at your convenience to see what we are endeavoring to accomplish.

PROVIDENCE, BEAT 16

Please give me space for a few words in your paper, as I have not seen anything from here lately.

Our literary school has just closed, which was one of the most successful ones we have have ever had for its length. It was under the management of Prof. J. N. Castleberry as principal and Miss Fanny Vance as assistant. We can freely recommend these teachers to any district. Their untiring efforts will advance any school and give any reasonable person satisfaction. Their loving disposition will win any considerate heart.

I am sure I can speak the sentiment of this district and say that we miss them as badly as any school ever missed their teachers when they left. We will always welcome them in our homes and wish them the greatest success.

Our protracted meeting started last Sunday night. Our Sunday School is progressing nicely, and we are having some fine weather.

J. N. Dennis and daughter, Lillian, were in Elmore County the last of the week.

W. L. CLARK OF PHOENIX CITY WRITES TO JUDGE REYNOLDS

Following is a letter received by Judge Reynolds, from Mr. W. L. Clark, of Phoenix City, Ala. The letter will explain itself:

Phoenix City, Ala., Aug. 30, 1920.

Judge Reynolds, Clanton, Ala:

My Dear Sir:

My attention was called by a little news item in the Tri-Weekly Atlanta Journal under date of August 29th, that you had been nominated by the Republican party of our state for U. S. Senator and that you had accepted and would conduct a vigorous campaign.

I trust this news item is true, even though published in a Democrat paper. I have never had the pleasure and honor of meeting you, but I have read some few statements of yours at different times published in different newspapers of the state, giving your views politically. I have often times wished I might have the opportunity and pleasure of voting for you, and now I hope my wishes may be a reality.

The time is certainly at hand for the Republican party to do some very effective campaigning in Alabama. 90 per cent of the voters of Alabama are absolutely ignorant politically. They need to hear some good political speeches, such as I feel sure you are fully competent to make. Quite a lot of men boost of the solid democracy of the South. I admit the solidity of the South, but the solid part I regret to say is solid graft and corruption. Every time the Republican party undertakes to conduct a campaign in Alabama the democrats raise a howl about the Republican party appointing negroes to office. I challenge any democrat or any man to deny and prove that Woodrow Wilson has appointed less negroes to office than any president who has ever occupied the White House. I believe government statistics will bear me out that Wilson has appointed more negroes to office than any president before him.

It is not my desire to offer you any suggestions to conduct the campaign, but I feel sure you need a weapon to defend the party on the negro question.

Should you need anything more than my little influence and vote in Lee County in your race notify me and my assistance is at your command.

Wishing you success and assuring you of my vote and influence, I am

Very truly,
W. L. CLARK,
Phoenix City, Ala.

CANDIDATTS FOR MAYOR AND TOWN COUNCIL.

The names of Dr. V. J. Gragg and Hon. F. B. Collier have been announced as candidates for Mayor of Clanton to be voted on in the municipal election September 20th. For councilmen we have heard mentioned the names of M. L. White, Tom Kemp, Dr. T. J. Marcus, J. B. Atkinkson, J. B. Downs, Eric Hart, Dr. N. S. Johnson, V. J. Elmore and T. C. McSwain. The time is short from now till election day, but there will very probably be others to get into the race before it is finally consumated.

SHOULTS

Harvest time is here and people of this community are making good use of the fine weather.

A crowd from here attended the preaching service at Friendship church last Sunday night. Rev. Adams, who preached at Pleasant Grove some time ago is conducting a revival service there this week.

Mr. Hort Walker and Miss Myrtle McAfee, two splendid young people from this community, left Monday to attend the coming session in the Bibb county high school at Centerville. We wish them much success.

Mr. Sam Shoults and family, former residents of Selma, have moved them back again.

We are sorry to know that Miss Pearl Kelley is at this time sick with chills and fever. Hope she will soon be well again. Her mother, who fell some time ago and broke her hip, can not walk any yet. This family is having a bad time, and we do sympathize with them.

Mr. Rube Bearden and wife will leave this week for Holt, Ala., where they will make their future home.

So far the people here have not employed a teacher for the literary school, but are trying in every way to get one. Some of this community say they are going to move to some other community on account of the school conditions.

Isn't it strange that people and intelligent people will go everywhere else before they will go to church and Sunday Sshool. We are so sorry that we have men in this community who will not go to church and Sunday School and will not let their children go regulary. They will hitch up and carry their children to negro meetings miles away or to dances. What on earth do they expect their boys to be when they grow up. Children are going to be what they are trained to be. If they are trained in Sunday School and are taught pure and noble thoughts at home, they are going to be naturally without any effort Sunday School men and women, pure and noble. Because they cannot help but live what is in their hearts and what was taught them in child hood; and the main place is at home. A child who has been taught by Christian parents may stray away some times, but will sure come back and amount to something.

But we cannot expect very much of a child who has an ungodly father and mother, taught at home to curse, never to go to church, make and sell whiskey. It makes our hearts ache to think of such people, and yet we have them all over this country.

CLANTON GRAMMAR SCHOOL OPENED UP ON TUESDAY

The Clanton Grammar School opened on Tuesday with an enrollment of over three hundred pupils, the largest number in the history of the school. This record was not surpassed even in the days before the County High School was established.

The opening exercises were attended by quite a number of citizens. Speeches suitable to the occasion were made by Rev. E. C. Maye, Rev. P. G. Carter, J. J. Pickens, and others.

With this session Prof. J. L. Johnson begins as principal of the school for the fifth year. Miss Icelo Williams of Duncanville, Ala., will have the first grade; this is her third year in the Clanton School. Miss Alice Brown Selman, of Goodwater, has the beginners. Miss Irene Jones of Clanton has the second grade. Mrs. F. B. Collier has the third grade; this is her second year in the Clanton Schools. Miss Bessie Thomas of Clanton has the fourth grade; this is her third year in the Clanton school. Miss Mary Timmerman of Prattville has the fifth grade; this is her third year here.

The most promising outlook shines forth for this years work in the school, both from the fact that we have an exceptionally good faculty in charge of the school, and also that the work will not be hampered for the lack of room in the building. The new structure is especially well arranged to meet the needs of the situation. The upper story that has been added this summer makes the building a credit to our town.

Mr. Sid Plier, the contractor, did an excellent job in constructing the addition to the building. He has the thanks of all the people of Clanton for his diligent efforts in getting the bulding ready for the school on time.

All things considered, this is the most promising session the Grammar School has ever entered. Our splendid teachers, new accommodations and facilities afforded by the new building, and the confidence that exists among the patrons of the school as a result of the splendid work last year guarantees to us the very best for this session. More desks will be purchased right away to accommodate the growing attendance. An incidental fee of $1.00 is charged for each pupil. All tuition is free.

LOCAL REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN OPENS IN CHILTON COUNTY

The great gathering of people at the court house in Clanton on last Friday to hear the speeches that were programmed for the day made the occasion an auspicious one for the opening of the campaign of the Republican party in Chilton County, looking to the success of the county ticket in November. There mas a mighty sentiment of enthusiasm manifest in the people for the endorsement of those things that are being contended for among the Republican candidates and speakers.

At 10 o'clock Hon. Pope M. Long, the State Chairman of the Alabama Republican Executive Committee was introduced to the crowded house full of people who were waiting eagerly for his masterful speech on The League of Nations. They were not at all disappointed in their expectations of a masterful speech. They were treated to a most wonderful digest of the much talked of Wilson League in its relation to the United States. The conclusion made by the speaker was sound and logical enough to convince anybody that this country has no business in going into the league if we are to continue to hold to our fundamental principles of American loyalty and freedom.

Following Mr. Long, Judge S. M. Adams made a few remarks along the same line. Although Judge Adams is a Democrat, he is avowedly opposed to the League of Nations. His remarks were well directed in adding emphasis to some of the points brought out by Mr. Long.

There were quite a number of women from over the county who took advantage of the opportunity and were present to hear the speeches in preparation of themselves for casting their ballot in November. They showed great interest in the explanation of the league by the able speakers.

After noon Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby County, the Republican candidate for Congress from this District, made a speech especially for the benefit of the women of the county who would be qualified and ready to vote in November. There were a great many more women present to hear his speech than were there in the forenoon. He made a very fine speech on the subject of women voting, and his remarks on the subject will prove effectual in bringing our women to a sense of their duty to exercise their right of suffrage at every opoprtunity.

Judge Reynolds made a few scattering remarks at intervals during the day. He did not assume a place on the program to make a speech, but only looked after the general program of the meeting, such as the introduction of the speakers, making of announcements and the like.

It might be said that in addition to the large number of voters from all over the county, the Republican candidates and practically every Republican leader in every precinct was here. The campaign was well launched, and everything put in good condition for the coming campaign. In the afternoon when the speaking was finished the Executive Comittee went into the transaction of business relative to the campaign. A full report of the doings of this committee will be found elsewhere in this paper.

All in all, the day was one spent well and very apropriately concluded for the good of the Republican cause in Chilton County. The influence of this great start will be felt through all the campaign and will produce its result in November by rolling up the usual majority, if not even a bigger one, for the Republican ticket.

MOTORTRUCK IS BIG TIME-SAVER

That Is Greatest Advantage as Expressed by Farmers in Many Eastern States.

WORK STOCK NOT CUT DOWN

Majority of Owners Queried Located Considerable Distance From Market—One-Ton Trucks Meet With General Approval.

"What do you find to be the greatest advantage of owning a motortruck?"

Of 753 farm owners of motortrucks who were asked this question by the United States department of agriculture, 91 per cent said "saving time."

About 25 per cent of these men had found better markets since buying their trucks, but 50 per cent of them had not cut down the number of their work stock by as much as a single head, while less than one man in ten had cut down his work stock more than two head.

"Which merely goes to show," says a department specialist in farm power, "how difficult it is to arrive at a definite conclusion in a matter like this motortruck study we have just completed. It would certainly appear that any saving attributable to the motortruck on the farm is in time saved rather than in expense. Most of these men think that the profits accruing from the saving in time more than overbalance any extra expense entailed by the use of the motortruck. It is significant that the majority of these farmers are located a considerable distance from market, more than four-fifths of them being five miles or more from their shipping points, and the saving in time effected by their use of trucks is naturally greater than it would be on the average farm, which lies nearer to market than do most of the farms concerned in this investigation. The experience of the 753 farmers who have contributed to this study should enable the farmer himself to judge with a fair degree of accuracy as to whether the motortruck would prove advantageous under his conditions."

Of Farm Owners in Eastern States 91 Per Cent State That "Time Saving" Was Greatest Advantage Afforded by Trucks.

Investigation in Eastern States.

The investigation in question was made during the past winter and spring. Farmers in the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware and Indiana, who have motortrucks for use on their own farms, were asked to report to the department the types and sizes of their farms, the use they make of their trucks, the cost of operating them, the advantages and disadvantages of trucks for farm use, and other related information.

A study of the reports of 753 of these farmers has just been completed by the office of farm management and farm economics. The farms which these men operate are of all sizes and types, and the motortrucks are of all sizes, from one-half to five tons. The rated capacity of very few of the trucks is greater than two tons, however, and nearly half of them are of the one-ton size.

Among the important facts revealed by the investigation may be mentioned the following:

Only 18 per cent of these farms are less than five miles from market and nearly one-fourth of them are 20 miles or more from market.

Ninety-five per cent of the farmers believe that their trucks will turn out to be profitable investments.

One-ton trucks are preferred by more men than prefer any other size. About half of the owners of one-half and three-fourths ton trucks prefer sizes larger than they now own.

In the opinions of these men the principal disadvantage of a motortruck is "poor roads."

Trucks Efficient Time Savers.

As compared with horses and wagons, the trucks save from one-half to two-thirds of the time required for hauling materials to and from these farms.

These farmers have return loads for their trucks about one-fourth of the time.

A majority of them still use their horses for some road hauling.

On the majority of the farms all the hauling other than road hauling is done with horses and wagons.

About one-fourth of the men do some custom hauling with their trucks. The average amount received per year by those who do such work is $174.

On the average there are about eight weeks during the year when the roads are in such condition on account of mud, snow, etc., that these trucks cannot be used. The roads on which three-fourths of them usually travel are all or part dirt.

About one-fourth of the farmers have changed their markets for at least a part of their produce since purchasing trucks. For those who have changed markets, the average distance to the old market is seven miles, and the average distance to the new market is 20 miles.

Average Life Nearly Seven Years.

The owners estimate that, on the average, their trucks travel 3,820 miles per year and are used on 173 days per year.

The average life of the trucks is between six and one-half and seven years, and in most cases, depreciation is the largest single item of expense in connection with their operation.

Most of the owners of one-half and three-fourths ton trucks prefer pneumatic tires, the owners of one-ton trucks are about evenly divided in their preference, and most of the owners of trucks larger than one ton prefer solid tires.

Over two-thirds of the trucks had not been out of commission when needed for a single day during the year covered by the report, and nearly the same proportion of the owners stated that they had not lost any appreciable time on account of motor and tire trouble, breakage, etc., when using their trucks. However, about one truck in thirty had been out of commission ten days or more.

The average cost of operation of the one-half-ton trucks was about 8 cents per mile; of the three-fourths-ton trucks about 13 cents; of the one-ton about 12 cents; of the 1¼ and 1½-ton about 19 cents, and of the two-ton about 20 cents.

The average cost of hauling crops, including the value of the driver's time at 50 cents an hour, was about 50 cents per ton-mile with the one-half-ton trucks, 34 cents with the three-fourths-ton, 26 cents with the one-ton, 24 cents with the 1¼ and 1½-ton, and 18 cents with the two-ton trucks.

Lessen Cost of Farm Help.

About four-fifths of the men state that their trucks decrease their expense for hired help. On the average they estimate that this decrease amounts to $324 per year.

Over half of the 205 truck owners whose farms contain more than 120 crop acres own tractors. The number of work stock kept on the farms where both trucks and tractors are owned is only slightly less than the number kept on farms of corresponding size where only trucks are owned.

DRINKING WATER IN SUMMER

Fountains and Other Watering Devices Should Be Placed in Shady Places in Hot Season.

During hot weather keep drinking fountains and other watering devices for poultry in shady places. Not only does the shade keep the water cooler, but it results in less evaporation. Whether the drinking receptacle is in the shade or not may determine whether the poultry have plenty of water to drink or whether they go thirsty until the attendant notices the lack of water. Successful poultry management depends on many details of which the proper care of drinking water, according to poultry specialists of the United States department of agriculture, is one of the most important.

PROVIDE ENGINE WITH LUBRICANT

Liquid in Crank Base Sometimes Thinned Out With Gasoline and Disaster Follows.

MAKE CERTAIN OF RIGHT OIL

Old Material Should Be Drawn Out and New Supply Put in for Every 1,000 Miles of Driving—Keep Close Watch on Gauge.

The wise car owner obeys his instruction book explicitly. He fills the base of his engine with lubricant when oil is necessary, as indicated by the gauge, but the instruction book does not always advise him further regarding the oiling system. At the present high cost of lubricant more instructions are necessary.

You may have liquid in the base of your engine, but is it a lubricant? Many times this liquid is a combination of cylinder oil and gasoline. Its lubricating properties are poor and should the bearings burn out through lack of oil the owner is apt to blame the oil for the trouble. Then he immediately buys oil of another grade, without knowing the real reason for his trouble.

Make Sure of Right Oil.

The best way to make sure of having the right grade of oil is to use religiously the oil recommended by the manufacturers of the particular car you drive. Depending upon the type of engine, crank-case oil should be changed regularly. Old lubricating oil should be drawn out and new oil put in for at least every 1,000 miles of driving. In special cases it is advisable to renew the oil much oftener, but this is the usual length of time it may be left in the engine.

If the engine doesn't get a sufficient amount of oil it will run hot. If the driver does not notice that his oil gauge is failing to indicate, it is doubtful that he would know the engine was hot until it stopped and wouldn't run any more. In such a case he would probably find that one or two, perhaps all, of the bearings are burnt out.

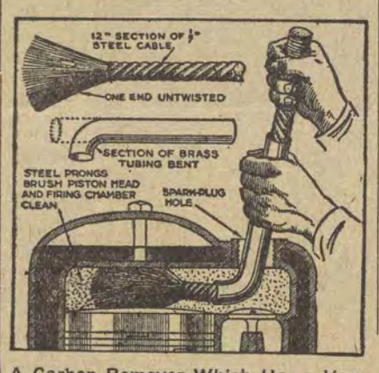
Something Wrong.

When the engine is not getting enough oil it is usually because the oil supply has been allowed to run low or there is something wrong with the circulating system—either the pump is not forcing the oil to the bearings properly or the pipes are plugged or the connections are loose or the strainer is obstructed with foreign matter.

Whenever the gauge does not function properly the trouble should be investigated at once. Make sure, first of all, that there is enough oil in the crank case. Then take a careful look at the oil pipe connections to make sure that they are not leaking. If these are tight take out the oil strainer and clean it and if the trouble is still in evidence disconnect all the oil pipes and stick wires through them or blow them out with the tire pump. Finally, a better adjustment of the oil pump may be made to cause it to pump more oil, provided indications prove it to be improperly adjusted.

STEEL TO REMOVE BUSHINGS

Tool Should Be Bent Slightly Near End and Long Enough to Pass Through Knuckle.



A tool for removing steering spindle bushings may be made from a piece of ¾-inch round steel, which should be bent slightly about two inches from the end. The tool will have to be long enough to pass through the steering knuckle and leave an inch or two sticking out, on which to hammer.

REMOVE CARBON WITH COMMON WIRE BRUSH

Ordinary Scraper Is More or Less Unsatisfactory.

Special Device for Purpose Consists of Some Stranded-Wire Cable and Brass Tubing—Illustration Explains Fully.

The ordinary carbon scraper is a more or less unsatisfactory tool, especially where the only access to the piston and cylinders is through the spark-plug hole. A special tool for the purpose consists of some stranded-wire cable and a piece of brass tubing. One end of the tube is bent slightly, as indicated in the sketch, the wire cable is placed through the pipe, and the end frayed or untwisted. The opposite end of the cable is taped and wound with twine to afford a convenient handle.

A Carbon Remover Which Has a Very Direct and Positive Action Is Made From Stranded Steel Cable.

The tool is used as illustrated; gripping the pipe with the left hand, the right hand is used to move the cable back and forth in pump fashion. The projecting prongs scour the piston head and cylinder walls.

After the carbon is pulverized, the motor is run for a few minutes with the spark plug left out, when the suction and compression of the piston blows most of the loose carbon out of the exhaust port and the plug opening. A piece of steel wire cable should be used in making this tool; soft-iron wire is not stiff enough to be effective. —Popular Mechanics Magazine.

AUTOMOBILE GOSSIP

Don't fail to keep an eye on your ammeter.

See that the oil gauge always works and that there are no oil leaks about the engine.

Attend to lubrication regularly, so the moving parts will not be dry, even for a moment.

It is remarkable what vibration will do in the way of loosening up grease cups that have gone in stiffly and apparently been absolutely secure.

After a casing has been long in use stretching sometimes results, so that it takes longer to inflate it. A stretched tire should not be pumped too tight.

The engine should never be run when the storage battery is out of the car or disconnected unless the generator has first been rendered inoperative.

Drain your engine oil every 500 to 1,000 miles. It may seem cheaper to use the old oil now that oil is higher in cost, but repairs are more costly than oil.

The starter should not be abused. If the engine does not start on the first few turns, stop and look for trouble.

The question finally came round to old Zeb Banks, noted as the ne'er-do-well of the fishing neighborhood.

"And now, Zeb, you've been keeping pretty quiet," one of them said. "Just what'd you do if you had a million dollars?"

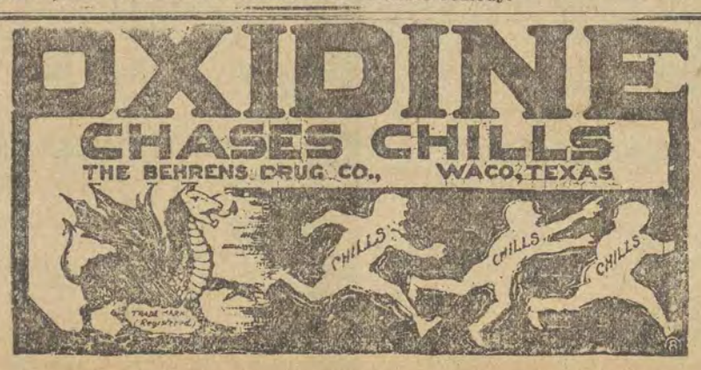
Relief for Torpid Livers and Habitual Constipation



The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25 cents, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. Keep it in the home for ready use whenever any member of the family begins to feel "out of sorts." It will prove a household friend and a valuable remedy.

FOOD VALUE OF CORN SILAGE

Crop Is More Easily Harvested and Put Into Silo Than Rye, Cowpeas or Alfalfa.

Almost any green crop can be made into silage successfully. Much care, however, must be taken to expel the air from such hollow-stemmed plants as the small cereal grains by cutting fine and packing firmly. Other crops, of which legumes are examples, are deficient in the fermentable constituents needed for palatable silage. On the other hand, a few crops, such as the saccharine sorghums, have so much sugar that unless cut at a more mature stage they have a tendency to produce sour silage.

In most parts of the United States more food material can be obtained from an acre of corn as silage than from an acre of any other crop that can be grown. Corn is more easily harvested and put into the silo than crops like rye, clover, cowpeas, or alfalfa, and when cut for silage the maximum quantity of nutrients is preserved. Experiments have shown that corn, when siloed, lost 15.6 per cent of the dry matter, against 23.8 per cent when cut for fodder and cured in the field. Moreover, there is less waste in feeding silage than in feeding fodder, since good silage properly fed is all consumed. When corn is cut for silage the land is cleared and left ready for another crop sooner than when the corn is shocked or is husked from the standing stalk. Corn can be put into the silo at a cost not above that of shocking, husking, grinding and shredding.

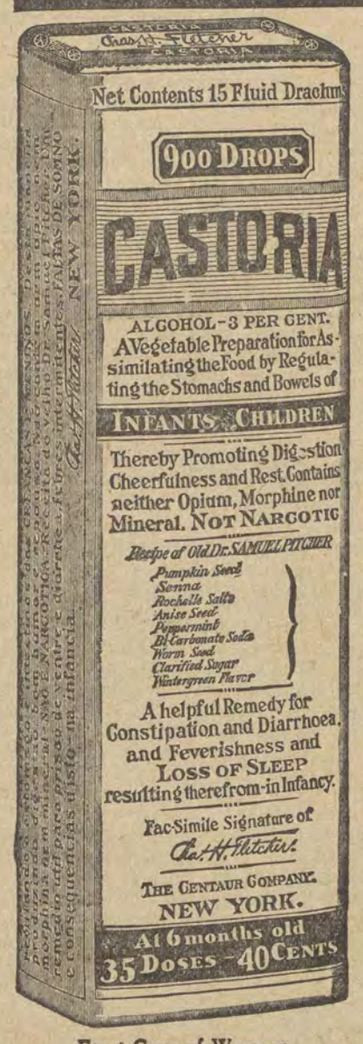
SCRUB SIRE NOT ECONOMICAL

Common and Inferior Cattle Never Bring As Much Money on Market as Better Grades.

The only reason that the average person can give for using a scrub sire in any line of live stock breeding is that they think they are making money by using a cheap animal. They do not figure into the future and see that it is the offspring of this animal which will either make or lose them money. The corn breeder does not think of selecting the nubbins with which to plant his corn field. Neither can the live stock man afford to select a sire which will not produce a better and more uniform class of stuff. A glance into the live stock market will convince one that the purebred sire with the proper individual merit will be a paying investment. When common and inferior steers are selling for nine cents, a better grade of steers in the same kind of flesh are usually selling for from 10 to 11 cents. In addition to this, the better cattle usually will put on gains more economically.

CHANGE PASTURE FOR SHEEP



For Best Results It Is Imperative That Animals Have Grass Not Too Closely Bitten.

For best results it is imperative that sheep have frequent changes of pasture, that a "fresh bite" be had, that grass may not be too closely bitten, that worms therefore will be less likely to infest them and that they may have a surer supply of mineral matter as well as organic matter in their feed. Lambs especially must have new seeding each spring. On the sheep-tainted and contaminated pastures they infest themselves with worms. On new grass they escape worms and besides that, find such grass more palatable and easily masticated and digested.

TO MEET THE EMERGENCY

Youngster Had Little Difficulty Making Up His Mind as to What He Would Do.

As the old lady strolled on the cliffs near a seaside town she came across a lad dressed in the well-known scouts' rig.

"What do they teach you in the scouts?" she asked him, with a beaming smile.

"To be manly citizens, and true to king and country," replied the lad promptly.

"And what are you going to be when you grow up, my little man?" went on his self-appointed examiner.

"A soldier, to fight for the king," was the patriotic reply.

"Very brave," applauded the old dame. "Now, suppose you saw the king's coach dashing along, with runaway horses, straight toward the edge of this cliff, what would you do?"

The youngster eyed her in disgust. Evidently she was one of those people who never imagine a boy has any sense. He determined to settle her once and for all, so he replied:

"I'd shut my eyes, and sing, 'God Save the King.'"—London Answers.

Not as She Expected.

A home town society matron of thirty-five underwent an operation this spring. On her recovery she was assured by her friends that the operation had taken ten years away from her looks. Laughingly one day she complained to the doctor: "If three hours on the operating table made me look ten years younger, why didn't you keep me there five hours and make me into a girl again?"

"Five hours there, my dear madam," soberly retorted the surgeon, "would have made you into an angel."—Indianapolis News.

Possible Explanation.

Knicker— The last census was erroneous.

The Financial Cootie.

The unsettlement of foreign exchange has bred a considerable contempt for foreign currency in the minds of certain Americans. The American father of one Yank who had stayed in France to "clean things up" had established a generous line of credit for him. Friend Son began to hit things up rather hard, and in consequence the father received a cablegram reading: "Your son's account already overdrawn 100,000."

To which he cabled back to the bankers:

"If you mean dollars, send him home; if you mean pounds tell him to be careful; if you mean those funny little things let him have all he wants."—American Legion Weekly.

Getting His Bearings.

One day as I was driving along I heard a crack in the vicinity of the rear wheel. Upon investigation I discovered all the bearings gone.

Not being able to continue, I sat down on the running board waiting for help. Before long a seedy-looking man came along in a car making so much noise that he had difficulty in hearing me.

I called out: "Hey, mister, do you know any place near here where I can get some bearings?"

The man looked around quickly, gave me a sly wink and said: "Sure, if you know enough to keep your mouth shut."—Exchange.

Too Early.

Friend wife was coming in on the 4 a. m. train and, of course, my alarm clock failed to register. It was exactly four when I woke up and, dashing out to the garage, started the engine. Still half asleep, I threw the clutch into reverse instead of first speed and whirled through the back door and part of my neighbor's yard, bringing up with a bang almost in the middle of the sleeping tent where my neighbor's family spent their nights. My wife certainly found a warm reception when she reached home. The whole neighborhood was out to welcome her following the riot.—Chicago Tribune.

ALL SET FOR THE RACE

Now that the Republican campaign in Chilton County has been formally launched by the Executive Committee; the candidates having selected their campaign manager and a county campaign committee and a further impetus having been given our cause in the great speaking and rally here last Friday, every Republican in the county should now proclaim himself ready for the fray and be prepared to march forth at any minute to carry out the plans of the campain in electing the Republican ticket all the way from Wiley Littlejohn and Charley Walker up to Harding and Coolidge.

Our campaign manager and his committee are going to have a big job in laying out all the work that is necessary to be done in this campaign. It is going to be no little task if the interests of the Republican party are properly protected and held secure. This is a crucial time in the politics of our county, the like of which none of us have ever seen. The enfranchisement of the women, however rosy it may make the path of politics look for the future, and however much it may purify the ballot box, certainly has placed a burden upon our shoulders for the present. The women must be educated in the ways of politics. It will take smooth persuasion to get many of them to assume their new privileges and obligations. Those of the women who are willing to take up the work must be enlisted so their help may be employed in enlisting the others.

The whole situation taken together is big enough to give us everyone employment from now till the November election. There is no time for side issues. The main job must be done and finished without a single leak if we are to be as secure in the future as we have been in the past.

The New York Times asserts that "there are few real differences between Republicans and Democrats relative to the league of nations." True, but these differences are not only real but vitally important. The Democrats insist upon "the" leage of nations—the Wilson league, without any effective reservations. The Democrats want no peace treaty unless it contains the league covenant. The Democrats want no international tribunal except that provided for in the Wilson league scheme. The Democrats want the United States to be bound to go to war when and where a league council may direct, and for any cause that the league council may deem sufficient. The Democrats want the United States to make the "supreme sacrifice." These are only a few items, it is true. But concerning these demands of the Democrats the Republicans reply that they desire to declare peace now, that they desire then to take up the perfection of international agrements for the preservation of peace and for disarmament, but without sacrificing the right of America to go to war or not as she may see fit from time to time as causes may justify. These are only a few differences, it is true, but they are real, as the Times admits.

Mr. Cox seems to have fairly won the distinction of being the supreme denouncer of the United States. He denounces the Senate for insisting upon the preservation of American independence. He denounces the Republican congress for not reducing taxes when his party's administration was trying to get larger appropriations than congress would grant. He denounced imaginary Republican campaign contributions although his own party, in control of the executive departments, has sent campaign publicity matter under penalty envelope free of postage at government expense and in violation of law. He denounces the Republican proposal to return to peace as quickly as a declaration of peace can be adopted and signed. He denounces child labor although states ruled by his own party have been slowest in the enactment of legislation for the promotion of child welfare. He denounces the high cost of living which his party failed to reduce in accordance with its pledges. He denounces the profiteers whose profits were enhanced by the methods adopted by an administration which his party controlled. He denounces Republican senators whose popular endorsements at the polls surpass his own fondest hopes. As an all-round denouncer Mr. Cox is in a class by himself, but he will find that the country is looking for something besides a denouncer as occupant of the white house.

Emmett C. Powell, who is now on the force of the Tuscaloosa News, was in Clanton Sunday and Monday visiting relatives and friends. Powell is one of the best printers ever graduated from the craft in the Clanton shops and he has a good position on The News as linotype operator. His wife and two boys accompanied him on his brief visit to home folks.

YES SIR, FRITZ IS A DANDY

Solicitor J. F. Thompson made a political speech in Columbiana, Shelby County, last week where he met Judge L. H. Reynolds of Chilton and Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby, both prominent republicans, where they discussed the political issues that now confront the people of the country and which will be decided at the polls in November. From what we can learn, the interest of the Democrats was well handled. Mr. Thompson is an able and convincing speaker and will probably be drafted by the national committee for speeches in other states.—Centerville Press.

If Fritz said anything about the issues that now confront the people, we failed to hear it; and we sifted every word he uttered. All we got from his "well handled interest of the Democrats" was a mess of old rot about nigger and Civil War Reconstruction, which we figger don't concern the people of the country very much now. If he is drafted to make speeches for the Democrats in other states, he will make a fine showing if he "hits and runs" like he did over in Shelby last Saturday. If he is going to other states to speak for the Democrats, why don't he come to Chilton County and speak against Judge Reynolds; or why don't he accept the challenge that has been extended him to speak against Reynolds in his own county, Bibb?

WOMEN WILL VOTE

All the argument in regard to woman suffrage has been concluded. The National Constitutional Amendment granting women the ballot has been ratified by the required number of states, Tennessee last week being the thirty-sixth state to give the proposition its legal endorsement. It now remains but to work out the details of their qualification and registration, and the women of the county will be on a par with the men in going to the ballot box and expressing their opinions about political matters.

The Governor of Alabama has called an extra session of the Legislature to convene on September 14th, for the purpose of setting out the details of how women shall be qualified in Alabama, and making our suffrage laws to conform to the National Constitutional Amendment. Already women are registering over the state. There have been quite a number to register in Chilton County.

Yea, verily, the long-talked of thing called women suffrage is now upon us, and the politicians are wondering what difference it is going to make. We will see by and by.

As for us we are willing to see the women take a hand in the afairs of government in our country. If they can improve upon what the men have done, we shall be glad. We feel confident they will not make matters any worse.

THE BAPTIST STATE PAPER

During the month of September an intensive campaign for renewals and new subscribers to the Alabama Baptist will be put on in this county. The Rev. P. G. Carter of Clanton is the organizer for Chilton County and the Unity Association. A few four minute speakers have ben appointed to cooperate with the local churches and meet with them on their regular meeting days to lay this very important matter before them. In the event that one of the speakers is not able to reach the church on that day the pastor is requested to lay the matter before his congregation and take subscribtions and renewals at that meeting. The regular subscription price is $2.00 per year but during the campaign renewals and subscriptions will be received at the club rate of $1.50.

Last fall when the simultaneous campaign was put on all over the South the Alabama Baptist added more new subscribers than any paper. If you are not reached in any other way send your name and subscription to Rev. P. G. Carter, Clanton, Ala., who will see that you are credited at the regular club rate, and receive the paper in due course.

Omar Reynolds left Monday for University of Alabama, where he will resume his studies for the coming session.

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are uppaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

SEARCH OUT THE GERMS OF RHEUMATISM

Find Out What Causes Your Suffering and Go After It.

Some forms of this disease have been found to come from tiny germs in the blood, which set up their colony in the muscles, or joints and begin to multiply by the million. You can easily understand, therefore, that the only intelligent method of treating such cases is through the blood.

S. S. S. is such a thorough blood purifier and cleanser that it can be relied upon to search out all disease germs and impurities and eliminate them from the system, and this is why it is such an excellent remedy for Rheumatism.

Go to your drug store and get a bottle of S. S. S. today, and if your case needs special attention, you can obtain medical advice free by writing fully to Chief Medical Adviser, Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Georgia.

Ride Farther on Goodyear Tires in Your Small Car

It is tire performance, not price, that decides what you really pay; hence, do not experiment with tires made to sell at sensationally low prices.

You can secure in Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, a high relative value not exceeded even in the famous Goodyear Cord Tires on the world's finest automobiles.

Goodyear experience and care are applied to their manufacture in the world's largest tire factory devoted to these sizes.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Dort, Maxwell or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires; take advantage of the opportunity to get true Goodyear mileage and economy.

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. "The only medicine I have needed has been something to aid digestion and clean the liver," writes Mr. Fred Ashby, a McKinney, Texas, farmer. "My medicine is for indigestion and stomach trouble of any kind. I have never found anything that touches the spot, like Black-Draught. I take it in broken doses after meals. For a long time I tried pills, which griped and didn't give the good results. Black-Draught liver medicine is easy to take, easy to keep, inexpensive."

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Pollyanna Club Organized.

One of the most delightful social affairs of the week was given on Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Mallie White. About twenty of the young matrons and young ladies of Clanton organized themselves into a glad club—Pollyanna—with Mrs. J. C. Jones as President.

In the spacious living room where the guests were received, tall vases of roses lent their color and fragrance to the decorations for the afternoon; also ferns were placed advantageously here and there. Late in the afternoon the guests were invited into the dining room where a tempting plate lunch was served to Mesdames Page, Barney Roberts, John Armstrong, P. T. Hinkle, Marion Gore, J. C. Jones, E. E. Upchurch, J. P. Hayes, V. J. Elmore, McDavid, Bamma Cox, Alverson, White; Misses Mabel and Bessie Thomas and Louise Orr.

Mrs Bridges Entertains for Visitor.

On last Saturday evening at the home of her parents, Judge and Mrs. L. H. Reynolds, Mrs. John M. Bridges delightfully entertained when Mrs. Peebles Morrow was the inspiration at an informal bridge party.

In the library and parlor the color scheme was most beautifully carried out with golden glow and goldenrod, while exquisite red roses in tall cut glass vases adorned the hall.

After two hours of playing the guests were served a lovely salad plate with iced tea by the hostess, assisted by her mother.

The score prize was a deck of cards which fell to Mrs. Luckie. The guest prize was a pretty box of powder.

Little Folks Party Enjoyed.

Little James Robinson entertained at a pretty birthday party Thursday at the home of his parents. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion. After playing several games the little folks were served ice cream and cake by Sarah Luckie, Margaret Robinson and Mary Marlow.

James Wade Celebrates Birthday.

On last Thursday evening James Wade celebrated his tenth birthday on the lawn of his parents'home. A number of games and contests were enjoyed, such as a three-legged foot race. Mattie Mae Fiquette won the girls prize a box of stationery, and Archie Harris won a top.

Mrs. Collier served the merry crowd ice cream and cake late in the afternoon.

Miss Gladys Speer, after spending the week-end with Mr. Clyde Jones, has returned to Birmingham.

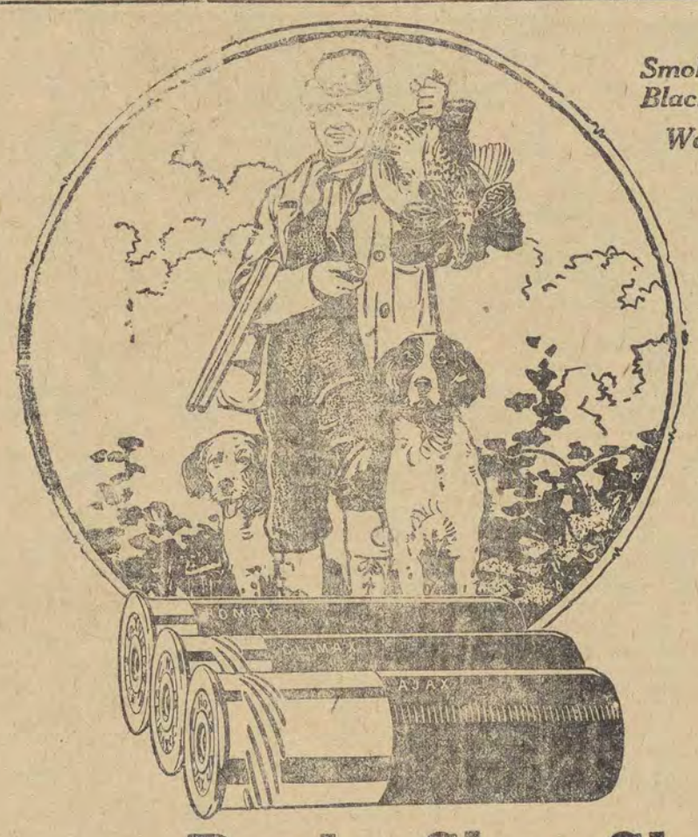
Master Joe VanDerveer was host to a number of his young friends on Thursday evening, entertaining at his sixth birthday. Punch was served throughout the evening by Mrs. Van Derveer from a prettily decorated table in the living room. The house was attractively decorated for the occasion in pink and white. The birthday cake made a beautiful decoration for the center of the table. Master VanDerveer included about twenty guests on this occasion. A very interesting feature of the afternoon's pleasure was a fish pond, while pretty favors were given to the little folks. Ice cream and cake was served late in the evening.

Mrs Hugh Jones and daughter, Mary Courtney, are visiting in Atlanta.

Dr. and Mrs. N. S. Johnson Celebrate Their Crystal Wedding.



Of the many enjoyable events of the summer, none has been more pleasant than the brilliant reception given Monday night when Dr. and Mrs. Napoleon Johnson celebrated their crystal wedding. The beauty of the decorations made an ideal setting for the evening pleasure.

The guests were received by Mrs. Arthur Johnson, Mrs. McSwain and Miss Mary Sue Mullins, and presented to the receiving line composed of Dr. and Mrs. Johnson and five handsome young daughters. After congratulations the guests registered in the bride's book presided over by Mrs. Earle Gowan, then conducted to the punch table where a most refreshing beverage was served by Misses Kathleen Mullins and Leona Pipes. The living room where the receiving line stood was attractive with quantities of golden rod and stately palms. In the dining room where also the color scheme was pronounced, the many beautiful and useful gifts were on display.

A very enjoyable feature of the eveing pleasure was the contest, "What's in a Name," and after a close cut Mrs. R. E. Luckie was presented a pretty piece of cut glass.

Mrs. Johnson never looked lovelier than on this occasion wearing a handsome costume of white crepedechine. Music for the evening was rendered on the Edison by Mrs. Macey Jones and Mrs. Frank Browder. The color scheme was further carried out in the ices and cake which was served to about 150 guests.

Mrs. Em Peebles Morrow was the weekend guest of Mrs. John M. Bridges in Clanton.

"I guess so," said Wick. "That's where his room is. He's only been here in the Granddeck a few days. I don't know much about him."

"And that's all you know about it?" said the detective, turning to me again.

I hesitated. Should I or should I not tell them of the wall safe that I had seen Mr. Wick closing? There was no way I could prove it. Undoubtedly Wick would deny having done so. It would be his word against mine. As superintendent his word would undoubtedly carry. I decided it would be best to withhold my information to a more propitious time.

"That's all I know, except what Mr. Wick has told you," I said.

"Very well," said the detective in charge. "You can go now, and you, too, Doctor."

Mr. Wick was escorting the doctor to the door. The detectives had withdrawn to the room where the body lay and were holding a whispered conference. I stepped quickly to the wall safe, and making sure that I was unobserved, tested the knob. It was securely fastened. I congratulated myself on having said nothing about it. Wick, I felt certain, would deny having shut it, and there was no proof that it had been opened when we had entered.

As I returned to my own apartment upstairs, nearing the top of the short flight of steps between the floors I was astounded to see a female figure flitting across the hall and entering the Bradford apartment. Though I had opportunity for only a brief glimpse, I recognized her at once. It was Claire Bradford.

The door of my apartment was standing wide open. I remembered that as I had run downstairs a few moments ago, I had neglected to close it after me. From the direction in which she had come, it was plain that Claire Bradford had been paying another surreptitious visit to my quarters. What could have been her purpose? There must have been some strong impelling motive to make her dare the perilous journey along the window ledge, and now, at the imminent risk of discovery, to pay me a second visit. I began seriously to doubt whether the explanation she had offered me was the true one. I was beginning to feel that there was more than a possibility that she was again in the clutches of the unscrupulous rascal who had once been her husband.

Greatly puzzled, I made a hasty survey of the apartment, but could find nothing that appeared to have been disturbed. Going back to my own room I hastened to place a handkerchief out of my window as a signal to Barbara, for I knew she would be anxious to know the meaning of the sounds we had heard below. In a very few moments I heard the tap of her riding-crop on my sill and hurried to answer.

"What was it?" she asked in an excited whisper.

"Daisy Lutan, an actress, who lived on the floor below, has been murdered—shot."

"Who did it?"

"I don't know. Mr. Wick and I went into the apartment together. There was no one there."

"How terrible!" she exclaimed.

"It is, indeed," I answered, "but it may help us."

"What do you mean?"

"With the police in the house making investigations, there'll be no more threats from the blackmailers for a while. They won't dare bother you for the present."

"Do you really think so?" she questioned with a little sigh of relief.

"I'm sure of it."

"Have the police been called in?"

"Yes; two detectives are downstairs now."

"I'm glad," she said. "With the detectives here, they won't dare molest us, will they?"

"Of course not," I answered. "Is your sister at home?"

"Yes," she answered. "Our guests have just gone. Mother has retired, and Claire is in the living room writing a note. They heard nothing, so I did not tell them anything about it."

"That was wise. They'll hear it soon enough. Has your sister been in the apartment all evening?"

"She hasn't been out all day unless she went out just to drop the letter she was writing down the mail chute in the hall. Why do you ask?"

"I was merely wondering if there was any way she could learn of the murder."

"How could she? Isn't that too terrible about Miss Lutan? But I mustn't talk any longer. Good night."

"Wait a moment," I cried. "There are some things I must discuss with you before I meet Gorman. How about meeting me at the Astor at eleven?"

"I can't promise, but I'll try. Good night!"

There was nothing further that I could do, and I felt sadly in need of rest. Throwing off my coat and waistcoat I began making preparations for bed. The notion took me to once more investigate the secret passageway. I pushed sharply on the panel as I had done before, but this time I could not budge it. I tugged and worked and pounded, but it stuck fast in spite of all my efforts. As I was struggling to force it open, there came a sharp ring at the bell of the apartment. As I was, in my shirt sleeves, I answered it. The two detectives I had seen downstairs stood there.

"What is it?" I asked.

"I arrest you for the murder of Daisy Lutan," said one of them, and with that they sprang forward and pinioned my arms.

"Why, this is absurd," I laughed in their faces, conscious of my utter innocence of the crime. "I had nothing to do with it."

"That remains to be seen. Put on your coat and come along."

Still holding me fast, they went back with me to my bedroom. Clutching me tight they made me put on my coat, and no sooner had I done so than one of them snapped handcuffs on me.

"Look at this, Jim," said one of them, pointing to a spot on the front of my coat.

"That's blood all right," said the other, after inspecting it.

"I got that when I was helping Mr. Wick lift the body to the couch," I protested.

"Tell that to the judge," the detective called Jim scoffed. "Better look around for the gun, Cullen."

"You'll find no gun here," I cried. "I never owned one."

Nevertheless Cullen began rummaging through the drawers of my dresser. Suddenly he gave a triumphant exclamation and drew something from beneath a pile of shirts in the second drawer.

"Here it is," he announced, holding up before my astonished eyes an automatic revolver.

"Here It Is," He Announced, Holding Up Before My Astonished Eyes an Automatic Revolver.

"I never saw it before," I gasped.

The detective merely laughed.

"There's one bullet gone," said the man who was examining it.

"Come along, young fellow," said the other detective gruffly. "The bullet settles it. We've got the right party."

CHAPTER IX.

A prisoner in a police station cell, I passed a sleepless night. Conscious as I was of my utter innocence and confident of my speedy release, nevertheless I had to admit that the detectives from their point of view were perfectly justified in placing me under arrest.

For a burglar to have gained access to the apartments without the connivance of the employees seemed almost an impossibility. For him to have escaped from the building after having murdered Miss Lutan without being detected seemed also highly improbable. Then, too, there was the damning evidence of the blood on my coat and the fact that I had been found at the door of the apartment. I had not observed the stain on my clothing until the detectives discovered it. My explanation of how it had gotten there was the true one, yet I could readily realize that it might sound fishy to others.

On the face of it the tragedy in the Granddeck looked like an inside job. The revolver, with one bullet missing, was the strongest sort of evidence that I was the murderer. Yet I never had seen the weapon before and could not imagine who could have placed it there. There was only one explanation possible. It had been purposely planted there with the definite object of throwing suspicion on me.

The one person—the only person—whom I knew to have been in my rooms after the murder was committed was Claire Bradford. Could she have done it? I remembered that Barbara had showed me a revolver in her possession. I wondered if this could be the same weapon. I did not think it possible that Claire herself could have used it. I could imagine no motive why Claire Bradford would want to kill Miss Lutan, yet it must have been she who had hidden the revolver in my dresser. What had been her motive? How had she got possession of the revolver after the murder?

Come what may, I had no intention of telling any one—not even Gorman—of Claire's second visit to my apartment. For Barbara's sake I made up my mind I would keep my lips closed about that incident, even if I had to stay in prison indefinitely. At the police station when the detectives had brought me in, I had quietly but firmly refused to answer any questions, although they had badgered me for nearly two hours before they let me alone.

"Where did you live before you came to the Granddeck?"

"Where did you work?"

"Where is Rufus Gaston?"

"Where do your people live?"

"Why did you kill Daisy Lutan?"

"Where did you get the money you have?"

"We've got the goods on you. Why don't you confess?"

These were the sort of questions that were flung at me, first by one and then the other. Evidently at first they had had hopes of breaking me down.

"I have nothing to say," had been my unvarying answer to all their questions.

Finally they gave it up and locked me in a cell for the night, leaving me thankful that the honor of being a suspected murderer relieved me from sharing a cell with some of the frowsy prisoners I saw brought past my barred door.

"Haven't you any friends you would like to have notified?" was the last question they asked as they left me.

"I have nothing to say," I repeated once more.

Nor was this answer this time mere stubbornness. Who was there that I could notify of my plight? Birge and Roller, my two intimates, were somewhere on the high seas. The men whom I had known in the office where I had worked, for obvious reasons, were not to be called on. I had no idea of the whereabouts of my aged relatives beyond the fact that they were somewhere in Maine.

I had no intention whatever of communicating the fact of my arrest to my mother. Indeed, I was hoping that she would not hear of it until after my innocence was established.

I thought of Gorman. I would have been glad of his counsel, but I remembered that I did not know where he lived. He had told me he was giving up his position at the hotel. It would be useless to try to find him until morning.

Yet in spite of my apparent friendlessness, although to all appearances there was no one in New York to whom I could turn in this time of trouble, it was a wonderful comfort to feel that I was sure of one stanch friend—Barbara Bradford.

Although we had been acquainted but a few days, and although hardly a word of love had passed between us, I knew that her feeling for me already was something greater than friendship. I knew that she trusted me and that she would remain faithful in her affection for me, no matter what accusations were brought against me. I had been madly in love with her from almost the first time I saw her. Whatever happened, I must keep her out of it. I must find some means of warning her to say nothing to any one. I knew that her first impulse as soon as she heard of my arrest would be to come to my rescue, regardless of the fact that in establishing an alibi for me she would be blasting her own reputation. Under no circumstances, even if I was convicted, must she be permitted to speak. No explanation can account for the presence of a young girl alone in a man's rooms at eleven o'clock at night, even though she and I both knew how utterly undeserving of censure her presence there was and how important had been her motive in coming there.

Mention of Barbara's name in any way in connection with a murder case would be certain to wreck her sister's matrimonial plans. It would mean the ruin of her mother's ambitions and the unmasking of the parlous condition of their finances. It would mean that the reproaches of her mother and sister would be heaped on my Barbara's poor head.

I was still unsatisfied in my own mind as to just what part Claire Bradford was playing in the web of mystery about us. She was emotional and flighty, given to doing rash things. I felt that there was a strong possibility that relations with her ex-husband had been in some way re-established. I felt at times that she was being used as a tool by the conspirators in the Granddeck mysteries. If Claire was involved in any way, it behooved me to move carefully lest she should be betrayed in my efforts to clear myself.

There was nothing for me to do but to sit tight and take my plight as philosophically as I could until I could get in touch with Gorman. As soon as it was morning, I bribed a jail attendant to bring me a morning newspaper. On the first page I found an account of the murder under glaring headlines and read it with intense interest, my conviction growing with each line that I read that the police case against me was far better backed up than I ever imagined it could be.

Then and there I made up my mind never again to believe anything on purely circumstantial evidence. No one knew better than I how utterly innocent I was of that crime, how upright my conduct in New York had been, and how honest my motives for all my recent actions had been, yet this is what I read in the newspaper:

BURGLAR MURDERS WELL-KNOWN ACTRESS

Miss Daisy Lutan Found Mysteriously Shot in her Luxurious Apartment in the Granddeck.

Marks on Throat Where Murderer Had Choked Her

Police Arrest John S. Nelson, a Clerk, Out of Work, in Whose Rooms They Found a Revolver.

Daisy Lutan, an actress, whose matrimonial affairs recently brought her much notoriety, was found last night murdered in her apartment in the Granddeck. She had been instantly killed by a bullet wound through the heart, and there were marks on her throat where her assailant had tried to choke her. John S. Nelson, a clerk out of work, who had been acting as caretaker for one of the tenants in the building, was arrested.

There was blood on his coat when Detectives Cullen and Edwards took him prisoner, and they found in his room a revolver with one chamber empty hidden under a pile of shirts in the dresser.

The apartment Nelson is occupying is directly above that of Miss Lutan. The police theory is that Nelson let himself into the apartment by swinging down from his window, and that Miss Lutan, returning unexpectedly, found him ransacking her rooms.

The crime was discovered by James Wick, superintendent of the apartment house, who was in the elevator when he heard screams followed by a shot. Getting out of the elevator to investigate he found Nelson at the door of the Lutan apartment.

Nelson glibly explained that he had heard a shot and was trying to see where it had come from. Mr. Wick's suspicions were aroused by his manner, and he made Nelson come with him into the apartment and kept him there until the arrival of the police.

Little is known at the Granddeck about young Nelson, and he stubbornly refuses to make any statement about himself. He was employed only a few days ago by Rufus Gaston as caretaker for his apartment. As Mr. Gaston is absent from the city it cannot be learned how he happened to give Nelson employment. The police believe he may have obtained the position through false references in order to gain an opportunity to loot the apartments in the building.

Superintendent Wick had ascertained that Nelson was once employed by a shipping firm in the Wall street district but had been discreditably discharged. His former employer confirmed this, but would say nothing about Nelson beyond stating that he had been discharged for cause.

Although Nelson was not over well supplied with money he had been seen recently ordering elaborate meals in some of the most expensive restaurants. Miss Nellie Kelly, the telephone girl at the Granddeck, reported that only the night before Nelson had taken her to dinner, ordering champagne and hiring taxicabs, and had tried to pump her about the tenants in the building.

The one fact that stuck out in the whole article that seemed of vast importance to me was the fact that Wick had informed the police that I had been discreditably discharged from my last place of employment. How did he know that? Certainly I had not told him. I had told no one of the occurrence except Barbara Bradford, and I was sure she had not revealed it to anyone.

It was indubitable proof to me that Wick, or someone with whom he was conniving, had been having me shadowed. Even my great-uncle Rufus did not know where my place of employment was. Evidently the plot to discredit me had begun the day I arrived at the Granddeck. I had been discharged on account of some mysterious note my employer had received. I began now to believe that Wick must have had me followed to my place of business and to have sent that note for the express purpose of bringing about my discharge. But why? That was the puzzle.

"Old Style" Time Still in Use.

It is not only in eastern Europe, under the influences of the Greek church, that the unreformed calendar may be found still in use. Even in England, where Christmas has been kept on December 25 for many generations, the government does not pay the Christmas dividends on the national debt till Twelfth day, and the midsummer dividends are paid not on June 24, but on July 5.

795,000 BALES STATE FORECAST

CONDITION OF COTTON CROP IS PLACED AT 58 PER CENT ON AUGUST 25.

DAIRY COURSE FOR AUBURN

State Association Agrees To Finance New Department For $10,000.

Alabama's Cotton Prospect.

Montgomery. — Alabama's cotton production this season is estimated at 795,000 bales, according to F. W. Gist, statistician for the federal and state departments of agriculture. This estimate, which is based on the condition reported as of Aug. 25, is 15,000 bales in excess of the forecast made on the same date a year ago. Provision is made in this estimate for a normal abandonment of 1 per cent. The acreage this year is said to be about 1 per cent less than in 1919. On Aug. 25 the condition of the crop was placed at 58 per cent, which forecasts an acre yield of 133 pounds this season. Too much rain and the inroads being made upon the crop by the weevil constitute the burden of the Alabama farmer's complaint, regarding the cotton crop this year, Mr. Gist says. Weevils are now reported to be active in every county in Alabama, he says, also that in most of the area of longest infestation the pest is attacking young bolls as well as the squares and blooms.

Planning Dairy Course.

Selma.—Auburn will have the dairy course that has been agitated recently by those interested in the institute and this special department, it is announced. The dairy course will be established at Auburn and the Alabama Dairy Association has pledged the amount necessary to finance the department which is $10,000. The course will be open this Fall. The money will be loaned by the Alabama Dairy Association to promote this new industrial department of the Polytechnic Institute and those interested in the placing of this important feature of the school will raise the money to repay the loan.

To Build Big Power Plant.

Dothan.—It has just developed since the dispute arose between the City of Dothan and the Georgia-Alabama Power Company that the city some time ago bought a hydro-electrical power site on the Chatahoochee River, and an engineer has been engaged to make a thorough survey of the property, with the view of developing it and bringing the current to Dothan. Whatever the outcome of the controversy between the city and the Georgia-Alabama Power Company is, it is the intention of the city to develop this property, as the $30,000 it is paying for current will take care of the interest on the investment.

Extensions Made At Auburn.

Auburn.—Announcement is made of improvements in the department of architecture at the A. P. I., by which during the coming session it will be enabled to render a much greater service through a more attractive course than heretofore. Prof Frederick A. Biggen, head of this department, states that the expansion consists not only of more commodious quarters but also the selection of an assistant professor of architecture, Prof. Harrington Barlow, who will have especial charge of the instruction in architectural design, and at the same time have supervision of the extensive repairs and alterations now going on in the college buildings.

Prohibition Fight Is Promise.

Mobile.—A bill to permit the sale in Alabama of Bevo and other kinds of soft drinks now prohibited, will be introduced at the special session of the legislature called for Sept. 14. Prohibitionists will fight the bill to the last ditch. The framers of the bill claim the state will be enriched hundreds of thousands of dollars annually. It is claimed that the "wets" want something "with a kick" and that there is danger of the "kick" being a real one. Any liquid that resembles beer is not permitted to be sold in Alabama under existing laws.

Oil Indications In Morgan.

Decatur.—Drilling for oil in Morgan county apparently hinges on the decision of several farmers on the question of blocking leases. F. N. Berry, of Texas, said to represent a syndicate, conferred with representative business men at the courthouse and told them there is every indication of oil in Morgan County. Under the general lease terms, owners of the property are given a royalty of one-eighth of all oil produced.

Voters To Decide On Law Revision.

Montgomery.—Scores of letters and telegrams commending him for including in his call for an extra session of the legislature, a provision for the submission of a constitutional convention, have been received by Gov. Kilby, since the issuance of the official proclamation. Although the date for the holding of a constitutional convention is a matter to be fixed by the legislature, it is not believed the convention, if held, will take place any time in the near future.

Anniston Capital Buys Industries.

Anniston.—Local capital and local men appear to be gradually obtaining control of the Anniston manufacturing field. The purchase just announced by the Lynchbury Foundry Company's Anniston plant by a local syndicate. Since December, 1919, local capital have organized four new soil pipe manufacturing companies and have built plants for them which now are in operation. In addition, local capital has acquired one other pipe plant, and has enlarged it and another locally owned and controlled plant has been doubled in size.

Mobile County To Appeal For Help.

Mobile.—The Mobile County Board of Revenue and road commissioners will request the office of the department of agriculture at Birmingham to allow Dr. C. E. Smith, federal veterinarian in charge of tick eradication work in South Alabama, to give more of his attention to Mobile County in the future, or to supply an assistant to look after the work here. The commissioners declined to grant the request on the grounds that the county could not afford it.

Book Shortage Is Still Serious.

Montgomery.—That the prevaling shortage of text books is a serious menace to the operation of public schools in Alabama, is the frank statement made by John W. Abercrombie, state superintendent of education, in an open letter addressed to the patrons and public school officials of Alabama. The shortage, he says, is claimed by publishers, to be due to labor conditions and the scarcity of materials.

Increase In Cotton Rates.

Gadsden.—The Gadsden Chamber of Commerce will join the movement of commercial bodies in Alabama to prevent the state public service commission from allowing the railroads an advance of 25 per cent in interstate freight rates on cotton. It is understood here that an effort is to be made at the meeting of the commission, to have cotton placed on the list of exempted commodities, the same as slag and iron.

To Rebuild Plant.

Florence.—The light and power plant at Rogersville, this county, recently destroyed by fire, is to be rebuilt; also a large garage the property of Thomas Thornton, destroyed at the same time. HAS NO PAIN NOW

What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Mrs. Warner.

Onalaska, Wis.—"Every month I had such pains in my back and lower part of stomach I could not lie in bed. I suffered so it seemed as though I would die, and I was not regular either. I suffered for a year and was unfit to do my housework, could only wash dishes once in a while. I read an advertisement of what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had done for other women and decided to try it. It surely did wonders for me. I have no pains now and I can do my housework without any trouble at all. I will always praise your medicine as I do not believe there is a doctor that can do as much good in female weakness, and you may use these facts as a testimonial."—Mrs. LESTER E. WARNER, R. 1, Box 69, Onalaska, Wis.

The reason women write such letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. and tell their friends how they are helped is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives. Freed from their illness they want to pass the good news along to other suffering women that they also may be relieved.

Self-Centered.

"You have always been one of these skeptical people," remarked the reproachful friend.

"I must admit," replied Mr. Growcher.

"You even said the flying machine would not be a success."

"Well, so far as my own comfort or peace of mind is concerned, it isn't."

A fool may have brain enough, but lack the sense required to make use of it.

CALOMEL HORROR TOLD BY DODSON

You Don't Need to Sicken, Gripe or Salivate Yourself to Start Liver.

You're bilious, sluggish, constipated. You feel headachy, your stomach may be sour, your breath bad, your skin sallow and you believe you need vile, dangerous calomel to start liver and bowels.

Here's my guarantee! Ask your druggist for a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone and take a spoonful tonight. If it doesn't start your liver and straighten you right up better than calomel and without griping or making you sick I want you to go back to the store and get your money.

Take calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak and sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day. Take a spoonful of harmless, vegetable Dodson's Liver Tone tonight and wake up feeling splendid. It is perfectly harmless, so give it to your children any time. It can't salivate.—Adv.

"'Why, didn't you notice?' said Mr. Howells. 'He chose his text from Revelations.'"

"STRANGE HOW WOMEN SUFFER"

Says Tennessee Lady, and Will Just Go Suffering, She Says, When Cardui Is Right at Hand.

Caryville, Tenn.—Hoping her experience may benefit others who suffer from disorders common among women, Mrs. Charles Rains, of this (Campbell) county, says: "I had womanly troubles till I couldn't rest, couldn't sleep, and was nervous and suffered a great deal of pain in my head, limbs and back. I would get to the place where I couldn't move without a great effort.

"For years I had known of Cardui, and it is strange how a woman will just go on suffering when the best remedy in the world is right at hand—but we do!

"But finally the pain was worse, my suffering so great, I knew I must do something. A friend mentioned Cardui and we sent for it. One bottle helped me.

"I took a course of Cardui, regained my strength, built myself up and felt like a new woman.

"Can I recommend Cardui? Yes, and gladly, for it is a God-send to suffering women. I hope when they suffer with troubles common to women they don't wait, but get this sure remedy at once."

Any druggist can supply Cardui promptly. Call on yours today.—Adv.

Home Town Helps

IN TRUE COMMUNITY SPIRIT

Example of Small Town Neighborliness That Is the Rule Rather Than the Exception.

This is a story from life for city workers to moralize on.

Howard Kirchgesner is a farmer living on the outskirts of Staples, Minn. While operating some farm machinery, he crushed his hand. For any farmer to injure a hand at this season of the year is pretty serious business, espepecially when help is so scarce and live stock and crops must be daily attended to.

Kirchgesner went to bed with his hand paining him and wondering how his farm would get along. It looked pretty bad for him. In the morning he was awakened by a commotion in his front yard. He looked out to find Mayor Harry Long, Rev. W. H. Johnson, Harry Manson, Sherm Tower, Jerry Lynch and half a dozen other neighbors from Staples, dressed in overalls and equipped with hoes and other implements ready to keep his farm going while he was laid up.

And from sunup until sundown there was only death for weeds and potato bugs. Then the cows were milked and turned out to pasture and the neighbors departed for their homes.

It would seem that one must turn off from the asphalt pavements to find the places where life is still run pretty much as the heart dictates, and where the question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" doesn't wait for an answer. Is it any wonder that the nation and the big city turn to the small town and the country for its captains, when this is the spirit that rules its everyday life.—Minneapolis Journal.

NO ADVANTAGE IN BIGNESS

Los Angeles Man Combats an Opinion That Has Been Long and Generally Held.

Of what advantage is bigness in a city, beyond a reasonable point, except to real estate subdividers? demands a writer in the Los Angeles Times. Personally, I found the Los Angeles of 1890 a more livable and lovable place than the Los Angeles of today.

Great cities are cancer spots on the map, breeding places of unrest and revolt. The trend to the cities is one of the most alarming symptoms of our national life.

Why measure a city by its size and smokestacks? Why not rather enlarge upon its beauty, and comfort, and good citizenship?

Americans worship bigness. Cities are estimated by their population, buildings by their height, men by their bank accounts, and babies by their weight. It is a sign of national youth. Children always delight in "great big" toys. In course of time—say in a thousand years or so—we shall overcome this weakness, and value quality rather than quantity.

Small Town Opportunities.

The general conception of a progressive man is measured by the size of his bank account, but the real measure of progress is to be found in the amount of good a man does for those around him. The mere shifting of wealth from one to another is not a mark of progress, but rather an increase of privilege. Many an ordinary man has become very progressive by coming to a small town from a larger one, because he had better opportunities to develop in the smaller town; while just the opposite could develop a live wire by changing to the city. Progressive men are staying in the small towns, else there would be no growing small towns. It takes effort, and lots of it, to increase the facilities of the small town.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

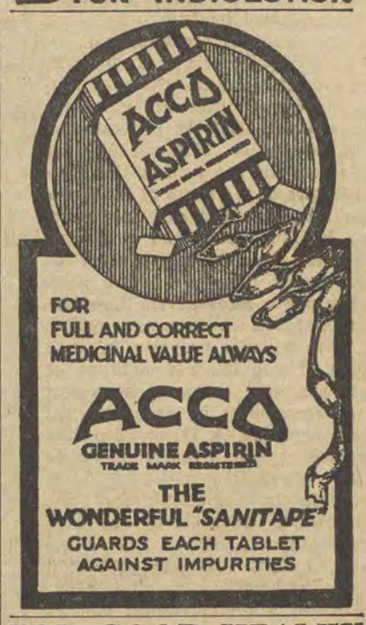
Women Plan Park.

The women of Wellington, a Kansas town, have succeeded in a crusade they undertook a few years ago, to turn an unsightly swamp of 30 acres into a beautiful city park. It has been named "Community Park." It is laid out with artistic landscape effect, replete with trees, shrubs and flower beds. It contains a park house, surrounded with large shade trees, a neat modern stone building, containing a large reception room, dining room and kitchen, that will accommodate comfortably about 250 persons. The park house is used for entertainments, banquets and parties.—Montreal (Can.) Herald.

Courtesy First.

It should be a real pleasure to you to be able to give out information. The more you can be of service and benefit to folks, the more they will think of you and your city. You are a part of Indianapolis—and it is up to you to be a good part. Courtesy first! (Prepared by board in charge of arrangements for convention of Associated Advertising Clubs of the World at Indianapolis.)

Good Citizenship First.



Your town won't grow unless you grow. The size of any community is determined by the quality of its citizens, not by their number. Your duty to yourself and to your town is to be a good citizen.

SLEEPS ANY OLD WAY NOW

"I am 50 years old and never was sick until 8 years ago when I got stomach trouble. I have spent a fortune for medicine which did not cure I kept on suffering and getting worse. A fellow worker told me about Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. After taking 3 doses I felt like a different man; before taking it I could not lie on my back nor right side. Now I can sleep any old way." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. EPPS BROWN, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The Service Situation

Telephone service should be adequate, efficient and dependable; sufficient in quantity, satisfactory in quality and furnished without interruption.

Adequate service is dependent upon adequate facilities.

Efficient service is dependent upon a sufficient number of trained employees to maintain and operate the facilities.

Dependable service is dependent upon both adequate facilities and trained forces.

The facilities are paid for with the money invested in the business. Trained forces are paid with the money paid to the Company by the public for the service furnished.

In no other way can these essential requisites of service be had. The needed facilities are never paid for out of the earnings of this Company, and the employees are never paid out of the capital of the Company.

Subsequent statements will show what the Company has done to meet its obligations to furnish both facilities and forces.

Everyone knows that this Company's service has been dependable. Throughout the war and in spite of strikes and the most abnormal conditions ever known, our service was furnished without interruption. While the service now is not adequate to meet the unprecedented demand, due to causes which will be given later, the facts show that the Company is now furnishing a far greater quantity of service than ever before.

The following figures show the service furnished within the state of Georgia:

EXCHANGE SERVICE

	Telephones Installed	Telephones Disconnected	Net Gain
1915	9,103	8,514	589
1916	9,645	7,591	2,054
1917	8,452	7,111	1,341
1918	7,176	5,737	1,439

An average gain of 1,356 telephones per year. Since 1918 the performance was:

	Telephones Installed	Telephones Disconnected	Net Gain
1919	9,943	6,485	3,458
1920 (5 mo) . .	3,315	1,909	1,406

During 1919 the net gain was 155 per cent greater than the average gain for the four previous years. If the rate of net gain during the first five months of 1920 is maintained throughout the year, the 1920 gain will be 149 per cent greater than the normal average annual gain.

The average number of calls made from the exchange stations has greatly increased, so that the Company is now furnishing several hundred thousands more exchange messages. from the same number of telephones, than ever before.

TOLL SERVICE

1915	1,025,278	toll messages
1916	1,103,666	" "
1917	1,255,083	" "
1918	1,367,726	" "
1919	1,379,629	" "
1920 (first 5 mos.) . .	630,674	" "

The volume of toll service during 1919 was 34.6 per cent greater than during 1915, and if the volume of toll service for the first five months of 1920 is maintained throughout the year, the volume of toll service during 1920 will be 47.6 per cent greater than during 1915.

Does this record entitle this Company to your support? If it does, your interest demands that you let it be known.

That every one cannot now be served is due to the unparalleled demand, and the abnormal conditions of the manufacturer and means of transportation; all of which will be shown.

The next advertisement will tell what we must do to adequately serve you during the next five years.

REPUBLICANS SWEEP THE STATE OF MAINE

BAROMETER STATE FORECASTS REPUBLICAN VICTORY IN COUNTRY IN NOVEMBER

PORTLAND, MAINE, Sept. 13.—Republicans swept the State in the election today and elected Frederic H. Parkhurst as governor by the largest majority ever given a gubernatorial candidtate in Maine. With only 42 isolated towns and plantations to be heard from, which cast a total vote of about 3,500 in the state election of 1916, Parkhurst's majority over Bertrand G. McIntire, Democrat, was more than 64,000. The largest previous majority was about 48,000 given the Republican nominee in 1896.

Aided by the women's vote, which went very largely to the Republican candidates, the party rolled up a total vote of more than 53,000 larger than that of 1916, while the Democratic total was increased over that year by only about 2,300. The Republicans elected Congressmen from all four districts and obtained a larger majority in the legislature, besides electing their candidate for state auditor.

The Republicans carried all four congressional districts by large majorities, re-electing Congressmen Wallace H. White, Jr. John A. Peters and Ira G. Hersey, and electing Carroll L. Beedy, of Portland, in the first district, where Congressmen Louis B. Goodall was not a candidate for re-election. They also obtained a commanding lead in the state legislature and elected Roy L.Wardwell, of Augusta as state auditor.

The part played by the new factor of the women's vote was evident. In all parts of the state women availed themselves of their first opurtunity to vote in a state election and the figures showed a large mojority of them voted the Republican ticket. The vote for Parkhurst, on returns from more than two-thirds of the state, showed an increase of more than 46,000 over that cast for Milliken Republican, four year ago, while McIntire's vote was less than 1,500 more than that of Curtis, Democrat, in the last presidential year.

Returns from 557 election precincts out of 632 in the state (from 453 cities and towns out of 519), for governor, give.

Parkhurst (Republican) 124,966.
McIntire (Democrat) 64,296.

These same precincts in 1916 gave:
Milliken, (Republican), 74,979.
Curtis, (Democrat), 62,453.

The Republican strength was uniform throughout the state. Several of the cities which showed small Democratic pluralities in 1916, returned large pluralities for Parkhurst today. In many others, which went Republican four years ago, the plurality for that ticket was greatly increased this year.

Considerable significance of the outcome in its bearing on the voting for president in November, was apparent from the fact that the campaign was fought out almost wholly on national lines with the League of Nations as the chief issue.

Congressional Figures.

Portland, Me., Sept. 13—Returns from 75 precincts out of 91 in the first district give for congress:

Beedy (Republican) 19,027; Haskell, (Democrat) 8,593.

In the second district, 140 out of 145 precincts give: White (Republican) 34,390; Price (Democrat) 21,588.

In the third district, 102 out of 123 precincts give: Peters (Republican) 19,581; Towle (Democrat), 8,815.

In the fourth district, 128 out of 173 precincts give: Hersey (Republican) 25,920; Brown (Democrat) 10047.

Daniel's Statement.

Washington, Sept. 13—Secretary of the Navy Daniels, who made speeches in Maine for the Democratic ticket, commented upon the election there tonight in a statement which said that the "majority for state officers in September does not foreshadow anything as to the November result."

"The vote in the Monday election does not indicate the strength of the sentiment in favor of the League of Nations in Maine," he said. "Some of the ablest men in the state told me that in a straight league of nations referendum in November Cox and Roosevelt could carry the state on the question, unaffected by state issues, if that issue was presented directly to all the voters of the state."

Harding's Statement.

Marion, Ohio, Sept. 13—Senator Harding issued the following statement tonight after he had been informed that the Maine election result indicated a sweeping victory for the Republican ticket:

"The result in Maine is reassurance that the American people mean to return to representative government under the constitution through the agency of the Republican party and that Maine takes the lead in declaring for America unmortgaged to the old world, but still ready to serve humanity as American conscience impels."

READY TO REGISTER DOGS

Circuit Clerk M. D. Foshee informs us that his supplies for the 1920 dog registration have arrived, and under the law, all dogs must be registered between October 1 and October 15.

Last year the state authorities were very lenient in the requirements of this law because it was a new law and the people did not have much time to become acquainted with it. But this time that is not the case and it is very certain that those who do not get their dogs registered in the time required by law will have to pay a penalty for not doing so.

Everybody is urged to take due notice of the matter and get your dogs registered between October 1st and October 15th.

THORSBY LOCALS

Mr. A. L. Legg of Birmingham and Mr. C. E. Lucas of Thorsby have formed a partnership for the purpose of operating a cold storage and meat packing plant at Thorsby, the only business of its kind between Birmingham and Montgomery. They propose to serve fresh meats daily and of a quality that only curing in cold storage can produce. Work has already been commenced on the construction of the cooling rooms.

Mr. L. C. Robinson has sold his store to Mr. J. G. Billingsley, who has sold his farm near Thorsby and will make a venture in merchandising.

Mr. Nels Peterson, our genial station agent, has moved from one of Mrs. Villadsen's cottages, near the railroad, to a more secluded house which he purchased from Mr. R. L. Carter.

Mr. George Freeman has torn down the old livery stable which he owned and is building a neat bungalow which rumor says is to be occupied by Dr. Wood.

Mr. J. R. Martin is preparing to build a modern bungalow on his lots near the Congregational Church.

The Congregational Church people are preparing to make somewhat extensive repairs on their building both inside and outside. Negotiations are also under way to secure a parsonage for the pastor.

On Thursday evening, September 16th, there will be a special meeting of the Board of Trustees of Thorsby Institute to hear the report of the committee on the Girls new Dormitory, consider such plans and specifications as may be submitted and give such instructions to their committee is may be needed to begin operations on the new building at an early date.

On Thursday, September 9th, at 10 a.m. Thorsby Institute opened its fifteenth school year, the assembly hall being well filled with students, patrons and friends of the school, and the enrollment was the largest of any first day in the history of the school, with many more to come in in the near future. A very noticeable feature of the occasion was the evident spirit of co-operation among the people of Thorsby and vicinity which manifests a growing interest, and appreciation of the school as a valuable adjunct to the educational facilities of this community.

On Friday evening, September 17 the Ladies Guild of Thorsby will give their annual reception at Bates Hall, to the faculty, trustees and their wives, students, new and old, regular contributing friends of Thorsby Institute.

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Powe of Birmingham motored down to Clanton to visit Mr. and Mrs. J. P. VanDerveer.

Mr. J. W. Driver left Monday for Houston, Texas, where he will reside in the future.

REPUBLICANS ENLIST WOMEN OF THE COUNTY IN CAMPAIGN

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the County Republican Campaign Committee, Mr. Howard L. Foshee, the members of said committee representing every beat in the county assembled at the court house last Friday to transact business relative to the progress of the county Republican campaign.

The first thing that was called to the attention of the committee was a few vacancies on the committee, and these were filled by unanimous selection.

One of the main items of business for which the committee was called was the matter of selecting women members of the campaign committee for the several beats to assist the campaign by arousing the women to their duties of registration and voting when the proper time comes. The following is the list of women that were chosen in each Beat:

Beat 1, Miss Hattie Jones, Mrs. Leila Smitherman.

Beat 2, Mrs. J. N. Ervin, Mrs. Mollie Sessions, Mrs. C. W. Scott.

Beat 3, Mrs D O. Manning, Mrs. W. F. DeShazo, Mrs. W. B. Cooper.

Beat 4, Mrs. Lee Vickers, Mrs. E. P. Littlejohn, Mrs. J L Wilson, Mrs. J J Mims, Mrs. R W Littlejohn, Mrs. C D Duke, Mrs. J. Wiley Foshee, Mrs. J B Atkinson, Miss Gertrude Popwell.

Beat 5, Mrs. W S Clark, Mrs. Alfred Robinson.

Beat 6, Mrs. C C Vinson, Mrs. J. W Cagle, Mrs. M F Lett, Miss Mae Poole.

Beat 7, Mrs. Ralph Calloway, Mrs. W Y Nix.

Beat 8, Mrs. T G Milling, Mrs. John H. Ramsey.

Beat 9, Mrs. C S Howard, Mrs. J H Goddard, Miss Genie Collins, Miss Roberta Bean, Mrs. A J Cleckler, Mrs. J L Vines.

Beat 10, Mrs. J T Rockett, Mrs. Newt Vinson, Mrs. R J Eiland, Mrs. Frank Patterson, Mrs. H J Taylor, Miss Zebie Robinson.

Beat 11, Mrs. Leona Giles, Mrs. Mollie Gentry, Mrs. William Cleckler, Mrs. R. W. Heflin.

Beat 12, Mrs. J P Bean, Mrs. Emma Wilson, Mrs. T J Dorminey.

Beat 13, Mrs. L A Calloway, Mrs. J H Anderson, Mrs. H M Dykes.

Beat 14, Mrs. H M Eagle, Mrs. H. S Watkins, Mrs. T J Hubbard, Miss Ursula Jones.

Beat 15, Blonnie Henley, Miss Ida Short, Mrs. Jessie Moates, Mrs. W T Herrod.

Beat 16, Mrs. Lee Robinson, Mrs. R M Robinson.

The ladies who were added to the campaign committee will be expected to look after the qualification and registration of the women in their respective Beats. As soon as the matter has been passed upon by the legislature and detailed provisions made for the registration of women in Alabama these ladies will be informed of the manner and methods that will be used in registration and it will then be their duty to arouse the other women and get them to register and become qualified to vote in November.

It is desired to impress our women that a great duty lies with them in going to the polls to vote this fall. The success of he Republican party in Chilton County lies in their exercise of their franchise. They must not fail to qualify and vote.

It may be determined by the committee that some speakings are necessary in the different Beats. In that event the women who were put on the committee can be of great service in urging the other women to come out to the speakings and there learn of the plans for their registration.

It was thought advisable by the committee that there should be a central committee consisting of the campaign chairman, H. L. Foshee, and two others, who would have general supervision of the campaign, the raising of the campaign funds and the expenditure of the same. By authority of a motion duly passed to provide the above, the chairman, Mr. H. L. Foshee, apopinted Mr. H. A. Harris and Mr. Elbert Littlejohn to act with himself as such committee.

TO THE VOTERS OF THE CLANTON SCHOOL DISTRICT

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 15, 1920.

You are no doubt aware of the fact that on September 20th, 1920 the people of this District will be given the privilege of deciding by the ballot whether or not the present three mill tax will be re-adopted.

Then, again, beyond a reasonable doubt, a large majority of the voters and property holders, as well, have readily seen the advantage of this tax. Two years ago you were promised that if this tax was voted you would be given a nine months free school. This promise has been carred out to the letter, notwithstanding the fact of the high price of everything. More than seventy-five desks and over two hundred dollars worth of blackboards, besides the coal, the brooms, etc., have been paid for exclusively out of the three-mill school tax. You will bear in mind that since the Clanton Grammar School opened a few days ago the school board has been compelled to buy seventy more desks at a cost of $672.00. Thus you see, that by the time these desks are placed in the building and properly put up for us they will cost approximately $10 each. These same desks a few years ago could have been bought for $3.25 each.

This year two additional teachers have been added to the faculty. Then too, to hold our last year's teachers it was necessary to increase their salaries. In fact, every teacher could have received more salary in some other town, but owing to their devotion to the people and school in this District they preferred to remain here at less salary than they could have received elsewhere. With all those added expenses it will take a very large incidental fee amounting to one dollar or more per month for each child, should this three mill tax be defeated.

You will recall that during the County three mill tax campaign your attention was called to the astounding fact that the people in the State of Ala. consumed 127,000,000 cold drinks yearly. These bottles, if placed with the bottom upright would pave 20th Street in Birmingham from Capital Park to Red Mountain, and have thousands left over with which to pave other streets. Now, any intelligent person can readily see that these bottles placed upright would easily pave every street in Clanton and then have many left over to fix some of the county highways. These cold drinks, according to the U.S. government statistics, cost the people of the State of Alabama more then $12,000,000.00. According to the population of this District our cold drinks cost us approximately $15,000.00. How does this compare with out measley sum on which we try to run our school? "If the child is benefitted the State is benefitted, if the child is injured the State is injured." Remember agan, the saying of one distinguished Alabamian, "We are not too poor to educate, we are too poor not to educate."

The corporations including the L. & N. Railroad Co., will pay by far the larges part of this tax.

With the above facts, how can we afford to vote against this tax and thereby deny the children of this District the advantages of an excellent free school?

Do you believe in the greatness of your school, Then why not show it by coming to her aid before it is too late. Help!

Yours for success of your children,
J. L. JOHNSON,

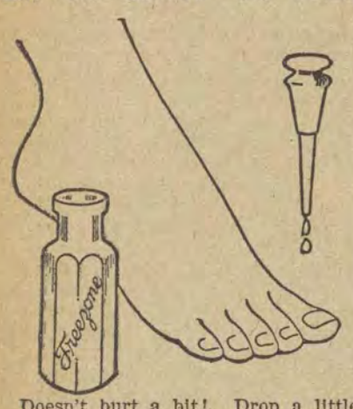
DODSON STOPS SALE OF CALOMEL

"Dodson's Liver Tone" is Taking Place of Dangerous, Sickening Chemical, Say Druggists

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.



Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Saved An Operation

MR. W. F. NELSON, a merchant of Hixon, Tenn., says: That the daughter of one of his neighbors, Mr. James Roberts, was in such a condition with female trouble that an operation was advised, and the young lady was sent to Chattanooga for its performance. She dreaded the operation, and STELLA VITAE having been recommended, decided to try that first. She has taken six bottles and is happily on the road to recovery. She is able to do her usual work and is in better health than for years before, but continues to use it. She writes: "STELLA VITAE will do all you claim." Her father says "She began to improve at once, after taking STELLA VITAE."

IMPROVED ROADS

NOVEL ROAD-MAKING DEVICE

Southerner Has Patented an Unusual Drag, Which Is Said to Be Quite Effective.

For removing inequalities from dirt highways, a southern inventor has devised and patented an unusual road drag, which is declared to be very effective. The forward part of the contrivance includes three transverse beams, fastened together with two lateral timbers. In the first two cross-pieces are set spikes, the points of which protrude from the wood, while the front side of the third beam is faced with metal. The rear portion of the device, which is attached to the front section with chains, consists of two side timbers, nailed to four heavy planks, with their forward edges turned upward and lapped. When the appliance is pulled over a road, the earth is loosened by the spikes, then smoothed and packed by the remainder of the machine, thus finishing the surface in one operation. —Popular Mechanics Magazine.

NUMBER ALL ENGLISH ROADS

Properly Organized and Uniform System of Sign Posting to Be Used in Great Britain.

The national road scheme will be ready by the autumn.

The scheme consists of the classification of all main and secondary roads in Great Britain, together with a properly organized and uniform system of sign posting. Roads will bear distinctive numbers, so that the traveler need only ascertain the official number of the road, say, from Norwich to Birmingham, to be able to travel from one town to the other without a map.

The experiments conducted under instructions of the ministry of transport to determine the most suitable material for a uniform road dressing, have been successful, and a standard surface has been practically selected. For the present this surface will be applied only to the arterial, and not to the secondary, roads.

By January 1 the new national road scheme will be in readiness to be put into immediate operation.—Daily Mail London.

LARGER CAPACITY OF ROADS

Must Be Doubled to Meet Augmenting Requirements of Transportation Next Year.

We are confronted with the problem of increasing the capacity of our highways. This must be doubled to meet the augmenting requirements of the next year or two. Engineers are wondering along what line this increase shall be provided. One suggestion is to double the width of the roads and increase first cost and maintenance 100 per cent. The most reasonable one is to provide a road of sufficient strength to carry vehicles of 100 per cent greater capacity for a given width of road, as the first cost of these strengthened roads would be only 10 to 20 per cent greater per mile than that of present inadequate highways, says a writer in an exchange. In view of the fact that 50 per cent increase in hauling capacity gives a reduction of 15 per cent in transportation costs, the latter seems the wisest thing to do.

ATTENTION TO EARTH ROADS

Clean Out Ditches and True Up Crown by Use of Light Grader—Four Horses Needed.

The majority of earth roads have been previously graded and it is necessary to clean out the ditches and true up the crown of the road by the use of the light grader two or three times a season. This work requires four horses.

Haul With Less Cost.

Not only can a greater quantity of products be hauled to market with less horse power on better highways, but there also will be a greater saving of wear and tear on the vehicles which carry the goods.

Encourage Producers.

The national system of transportation and distribution is so essential that every possible facility must be provided to encourage producers of farm communities and merchandise to increase production.

Frocks Express Personality

WOMEN are sure to approve of the new tailored dresses for fall, because there is no chance to grow tired of any one style in them. There is no monotony among them, no tiresome repetition of ideas in construction or trimming, but such a diversity of really good designing that there is a dress for every style, just as there is a becoming hat for every face. They have one very good point in common, however, and that is their simple lines, and designers appear to agree on the neckline, which is rounded in front and low enough sometimes to admit of a chemisette, but higher than usual at the back.

Two very smart tailored frocks for fall may be studied in the picture here and both present new features. The frock at the left has a severely straight bodice with long waist line, and sleeves slashed on the outer arm and curved upward to the three-quarter length. They are finished with a flat band of satin and the neck, in the same way. These bands appear across the top of the skirt at the back, where it is plaited and at the bottom of the front portion which is gathered. The skirt joins the bodice with a flat piping of satin and just above this piping satin bands reveal how cleverly they can be used when a designer sets out to do his best with them. Three rows of slashes in the bodice furnish them a chance to slip in and out and form a checker-board pattern that is charming for a cloth dress.

The simplest of straight-line dresses in the second model ought to inspire gratitude in the hearts of plump women, for it is destined to give them long lines. There is an inverted plait down the front and decorations of narrow ribbon in groups of six each, finished with tiny steel buttons. The new collar is interesting, being a tie of silk attached to the neck and finished with a bow, and ends at the front.

Sweaters Follow Devious Ways

SWEATERS—that word must have a broad interpretation to cover all the varied garments that are called by it—are going by many paths this fall. But all lead in one direction and their goal is to furnish more warmth and less color, apparently, than their forerunners of the past season. There are so many variations of the principal models that every one can be suited. Slip-over and coat designs find about equal favor, both in short and fingertip lengths and in snug-fitting or loose adjustment. Some of the snug slip-over sweaters are only a litle longer than a blouse. They are usually knitted with a band about the bottom and long enough to extend about six inches below the waistline where they turn jauntily upward in a narrow cuff.

Another short model appears in the surplice sweater and comes in the brighter colors. This is waist length also, open at the front with attached knitted belt extended so that it can be brought round the waist and tied at the back. Knitted or braided belts and sashes of the same wool as the sweater are the rule. Colors are quiet with the exception of some strong blues and greens and in many coat models no contrasting colors are introduced, but borders and bands are accomplished by varying the stitch in the knitting.

An attractive slip-over sweater is shown in the picture. Its neck and sleeves are unusual, the former having a square opening at the front and the latter deep-knitted flounces. The border at the bottom is of the same color as the sweater and so is the long knitted sash. This model fits snugly about the hips and is a trifle longer than its forerunners.

SICK WOMEN HEAR ME

You Can Be Free from Pain as I Am, if You Do as I Did.

Harrington, Me.—"I suffered with backache, pains through my hips and such a bearing down feeling that I could not stand on my feet. I also had other distressing symptoms. At times I had to give up work. I tried a number of remedies but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me more good than anything else. I am regular, do not suffer the pains I used to, keep house and do all my work. I recommend your medicine to all who suffer as I did and you may use my letter as you like."—Mrs. MINNIE MITCHELL, Harrington, Me.

There are many women who suffer as Mrs. Mitchell did and who are being benefited by this great medicine every day. It has helped thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing down feeling, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound contains no narcotics or harmful drugs. It is made from extracts of roots and herbs and is a safe medium for women. If you need special advice write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass.

LITTLE ADVICE FOR GROCER

Would Be Wag Had Picked Out the Wrong Woman on Whom to Exercise His Wit.

There was an expression of melancholy ringed with resentment on Mrs. Brown's face as she entered the grocer's shop.

"I want," she began impressively, "to talk to you about them eggs I had last week. They weren't anything like as fresh as they might have been."

"That's strange," replied the grocer, who fancied himself something of a wag. "We always have an almanac hanging up in the fowl run to keep the hens up to date."

"Oh!" came the retort with crushing emphasis. "Then all I have to say is that somebody with brains about as addled as them eggs has been misleadin' the hens with last year's calendar. Just you hang up a 1920 card, my good fellow, and maybe them chickens 'll start working overtime to catch up to it!"

CATS DISRUPTED THE ZOO

Released to Clean Up Despised Rats, They Terrorized Lions, Leopards and Tigers Alike.

An army of cats, turned loose in the zoo at Highland park, Pittsburgh, Pa., to clean out the rats, has shown the fallacy of many tales of ferocity told of wild denizens of the jungle.

Rats had become so numerous at the big zoo that it was found necessary to take some means of ridding the building of the pests, and the head keeper decided on cats—just the plain alley breed. An advertisement brought them in droves, and they were turned loose in the cages, cellars, supply rooms and lofts.

No sooner had the cages been invaded than pandemonium broke loose. Lions, tigers, panthers, pumas and leopards failed to recognize a distant relationship, and many of them went clear frantic with fear. Other animals, including the elephants, were not so timorous, but hippo and rhino were only a few seconds in making up their minds that discretion was the better part of valor.

The poetry of motion is portrayed by the picture of a beautiful girl with a bug down her back.

Certainly luck counts. So do brains and pluck

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

by Mary Graham Bonner

OUT TO DRY.

"This is the best joke I've ever heard," said the King of the Clouds, "and I'm the one who has made the joke.

"Yes, I'm a regular little joke maker, or big joke maker, or whatever you want to call me."

"What happened?" asked one of the Cloud Fairies.

"Well you see," said the King of the Clouds, "I saw a lot of bathing suits out to dry. They were all hanging on the line, for all the people had been in bathing in the morning.

"They had had fine swims and had enjoyed themselves immensely. Of course they had grumbled a bit when they had had glimpses of me, for I was talking from time to time with Mr. Sun and he was sitting back with me in my cloud home.

"They were afraid that Mr. Sun would desert them, but after a little while I went back to fix my best suit—I wear my best suit on rainy days which is different from the way people do. You see I like to wear my best suit on the rainy days as that is when most folks see me, if they see me at all! Sometimes they don't come out and look at me but spend their time playing games and cards and never looking at me except for a moment or two when they grumble.

"Well, all the people thought Mr. Sun was out for good. And they hung out their bathing suits when they were all dressed and they said: 'We'll hang out our suits to dry.'

"I just thought I'd play a joke on them so I thought I'd have a very fine kind of a joke.

"I thought it up and this was the joke."

"Tell it to me," said the Cloud Fairy.

"Just what I am going to do," said the King of the Clouds.

"I'm glad of that, for I'm so eager to hear," said the Cloud Fairy.

"I said to myself, 'They'll have their suits out to wet and not to dry.'"

"What did you mean by that?" asked the Cloud Fairy.

"I meant," said the King of the Clouds, "that instead of their bathing suits drying they would only get wetter. Instead of their hanging out to dry, they'd hang out and get wet by the moment and the second, and add to the wetness they had taken in from the water.

"Oh, that was a joke. And I saw the people look out of their windows and say, 'Well, the bathing suits aren't drying. They were hung out there to dry and they're getting far wetter than they got when they were hung out there first after we had wrung them out.'

"And I laughed to myself to think that they had been hung out there to dry and how I had fooled them.

"I think it was the best sort of a joke I thought up, don't you, Cloud Fairy?

"Just think what happened to those bathing suits they had hung out to dry.

"The old King of the Clouds played a great joke on them."

"That was a great joke," said the Cloud Fairy.

"Look," said the King of the Clouds, "they don't know now what to do with their bathing suits. I'm puzzling them, I am.

"If they take them off the line they'll have to take them in and hang them in to dry.

"But they can't hang them out to dry today, for I'm going to stay around for a time longer.

"I promised my children, the Army of Raindrops, they could play about.

"And old Nurse Fog is taking the Mist Grandchildren for a little airing.

"So the people are having a joke played on them, all right, all right.

"And the joke was made up by the old King of the Clouds, a great old joker, ha, ha."

"You are a great old joker," said the Cloud Fairy. "Yes no one can say you're not that."

"And Mr. Sun is laughing back of the clouds too," said the King of the Clouds. "He thinks it's a great joke too, ha, ha, ha," ended the King of the Clouds.

"Ha, ha," chuckled the Cloud Fairy.

THREE YEARS WITHOUT HOPE

A Story of Sickness and Suffering with Final Return to Health
It will do you good to read it

No matter how long nor how much you have suffered, do not give up hope. Do not decide there is no help for you. There is. Make up your mind to get well. You can. There is a remedy in which you may place full reliance as did Mrs. Rozalia Kania of 39 Silver Street, New Britain, Conn. This is what she says: "I had cramps for three years and thought I would never be any better. I could not eat without distress. Slept with my mouth open and could hardly breathe. No medicine helped me. I had catarrh of the stomach. Now I have no cramps and am feeling well and healthy. I wish every suffering person would take PE-RU-NA."

Catarrh effects the mucous membranes in any organ or part. PE-RU-NA, by regulating the digestion and aiding elimination, sends a rich, pure supply of blood and nourishment to the sick and inflamed membranes and health returns.

For coughs, colds, catarrh and catarrhal conditions generally, PE-RU-NA is recommended. If you are sick, do not wait and suffer. The sooner you begin using Dr. Hartman's well-known PE-RU-NA, the sooner you may expect to be well and strong and in full possession of your health. A bottle of PE-RU-NA is the finest emergency, ready-to-take remedy to have in the house. It is fourteen ounces of prevention and protection.

Sold everywhere in tablet or liquid form.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE is taken internally and acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System, thus reducing the inflammation and restoring normal conditions.

How to Treat A Torpid Liver

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25c, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. If your dealer will not supply you, it will be mailed direct by the Hitchcock Medicine Co., Atlanta, Ga., upon receipt of price.—Adv.

EATONIC Users —Do This—Get the Greatest Benefits

Chicago, Ill.—Thousands of reports from people all over the U. S. who have tested eatonic, show the greatest benefits are obtained by using it for a few weeks, taking one or two tablets after each meal.

Eatonic users know that it stops Belching, Bloating, Heartburn, and Stomach Miseries quickly, but the really lasting benefits are obtained by using eatonic long enough to take the harmful excess acids and gases entirely out of the system. This requires a little time, for eatonic takes up the excess acidity and poisons and carries them out of the body and of course, when it is all removed, the sufferer gets well, feels fine—full of life and pep.

If you have been taking an eatonic now and then, be sure and take it regularly for a time and obtain all of these wonderful benefits. Please speak to your druggist about this, so that he can tell others that need this help. Adv.

THE LEAGUE A LOSING ISSUE

The League of Nations is a losing issue in American politics. Every state that has had an election this year has repudiated both the league and the candidates who endorsed it. Even Georgia, a state that would have been expected to continue to give its support to whatever the national Democratic party might put out has nominated Tom Watson for United States Senator and Watson has been all the way through one of the bitterest enemies of the League and the Wilson administration.

Likewise, the Maine elections on Monday resulted in a landslide against the League. The Republican candidates for all state offices were overwhelmingly elected.

Everywhere the League of Nations and the Wilson administration are being handled unmercifully by the voters. The final death blow will be administered in November when the country proclaims itself for Mr. Harding by the greatest majority any man has even been elected to the presidency. America stands for America, and therefore, it must be against the League.

WATSON AS SENATOR

Tom Watson will be a kind of Senator at large when he goes to Washington next March. In the past thirty years he has spent more time out of the Democratic party than he has spent in it. He was the leader of the Populists as long as they remained in the field as a separate political entity. Then he returned to the Democratic fold for a spell, only to leave it for the Bull Moose crowd in 1912 and for the Republican ticket in 1916. Now he is a Democrat again, with a Democratic commission as Senator in his pocket, indicating that in Georgia a majority of the people have forgiven him for his transgressions. He is committed, however, neither to the San Francisco platform nor to the Chicago platform. He is committed only to the Ocala platform.

It is a favorite pose of Mr. Watson that his enemies are leagued together in a murderous conspiracy to take him off some time when he isn't looking. Although nobody has ever so much as hit him with a Maypop, we presume that he will enter the city of Washington surrounded by picked body guards. He should demand that every senator in Congress, from Phelan of California, to Penrose of Pennsylvania, be searched for firearms before he agrees to enter the chamber. The people haven't many friends left and a champion such as Brother Watson is should be cautioned by his well-wishers not to be off his guard for one moment.—Montgomery Advertiser.

OLD EX-TEACHERS OF STATE TO BE PUT BACK ON JOB

Mr. Howard L. Foshee, our County Superintendent of Education, is in receipt of the following letter from the State Superintendent at Montgomery:

Montgomery, Ala., Sept. 13, 1920.
To County Superintendents:

In a further effort to enable you to secure teachers for your schools next year, you are authorized to make application for a provisional certificate to be issued to any holder of an expired first, second or third grade certificate, which was issued by the State Board of Examiners at any time since the inauguration of the uniform state examination system.

Please note that this ruling supercedes that of August 17th on the issuance of provisional certificates, and that it extends the privilege to receive these certificates to all persons who have taught under certificates of any grades since the uniform examination law went into effect. Applications should be submitted on the regular forms, and when practicable should be accompanied by the expired certificates.

Since the question of an adequate supply of qualified teachers does not appear to be any nearer to a solution than at any time within the last two years, it is my intention to recommend to the State Board of Education at its next meeting that examinations for certificates of all grades be continued for at least another year on the same basis as heretofore. If this recommendation is adopted, it will mean that examinations for third grade certificates will be given in December and thereafter, notwthstanding the printed announcement that such examinations would be discontinued after September 30, 1920.

Yours very truly,
JOHN W. ABERCROMBIE,
Superintendent of Education.

ELECTION WEEK

Sept. 20th to 25th, The Ideal, along with 5,000 other picture theatres, are conducting a nationwide straw vote on the coming national election. Blank ballots can be obtained at the entrance to this theater at any time during this week, and all voters including the ladies, are requested and urged to secure ballots and vote on the important questions before the country. The ballots when filled out, are to be dropped into a sealed receptacle. At the close of the week's business they will be counted by a selection of representative ladies and gentlemen, and the total results will be flashed on our screen the following week; also transmitted to headquarters, who will compile the entire country's vote and furnish the figures and facts covering the whole country.

This is going to be a very interesting and instructive innovation, and your interest and co-operation will be appreciated and add to the value of the move. (All individual votes will be strictly confidential.)

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her.

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since . . . I sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too.

WHEAT AND OATS THE OUTLOOK

SOME FACTORS OF SUCCESSFUL SMALL GRAIN PRODUCTION IN SOUTHERN STATES.

C. A. Whittle, Southern Soil Improvement Committee.

Wheat is too closely related to human hunger ever to suffer a serious slump in demand. At this time the great wheat producing areas of Europe give no signs of getting immediately back to normal production. Soviet Russia, the greatest of all, offers no signs of growing wheat beyond—if even equal to—the needs of Russia.

Roumania, Austria, Hungary and the Balkans are so depleted in men and means, and so disturbed with war and international politics, as to grow not even enough small grain for their own hungry and starving millions. Other leading European countries are importers and not exporters of grain. The Americas will, therefore, be the hope of Europe's bread. In fact, the demand will continue to be very urgent.

LABOR—The labor requirements per acre of wheat is less, of course, than for cultivated crops. Where labor's scarce wheat and oats are, therefore, to be looked upon with favor.

But the labor problem involved in producing wheat will not be completely solved unless the farmer goes in for large yields per acre. It requires no more preparation, and seed, to grow a big crop of wheat than a small one. Therefore, the intelligent farmer will look well to his soil treatment so that maximum yields may be made at a minimum cost per bushel. Farm labor is too expensive to neglect this precaution.

PREPARATION—Wheat and Oats do best on upland soils. The stiffer, firmer soils are preferred. But it does not pay to sow these crops on eroded, thin soiled slopes. If the crop is to follow cotton, corn or other cultivated crop, the soil may be disked. Deep breaking is not necessary. After drilling in the seed, the soil may be firmed and smoothed with a roller.

FERTILIZATION—Intelligent fertilization will pay on wheat and oats. Fertilizers will create a good root development and thus protect the plant against winter-killing; they will hasten the growth of wheat that has been sown late on account of the Hessian fly; it will increase stooling or tillering, and make plumper grain and fuller heads; and well-fed plants are also more resistant to rust and other diseases.

An application of nitrogen in late winter or early spring will prove very helpful in giving the grain crops a vigorous new start.

GOOD SEED—A variety of wheat may be good, but the germinating power of the seed poor. A farmer should give more attention to his wheat and oat seed. He should find out their yielding record. Different strains of a variety will have different yielding ability. Get only the best—it pays.

Good seed includes clean seed. Make them smut-free by a dip into blue stone. Use only the varieties that have rust resistance power.

Farmers of the cotton belt would do well to go into the growing of cereals on a broader scale. Small grains fit in with a well arranged crop rotation. They provide necessities, and thereby add to the independence of the farmer and to his power to conserve the returns from his money crops.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held at the general election in November, 1920; and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law, upon the following amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, viz:

The several counties in the State shall have power to levy and collect a special county road tax not exceeding fifty cents on each one hundred dollars worth of taxable property in such counties in addition to that now authorized or that may hereafter be authorized for public road purposes; provided, that of such tax, the time it is to continue and the purpose thereof shall have been first submitted to the vote of the qualified electors of the county, and voted for by a majority of those voting at such election.

"Section 2. The funds arising from the special county road and bridge tax levied and collected by any county shall be apportioned and expended by the courts of county commissioners or boards of revenue of such county in the following manner, to-wit: Fifty per cent of said taxes levied and collected shall be used for maintenance of roads and bridges, and the remaining part shall be used in constructing roads, bridges, culverts, etc., as such boards of revenue or courts of county commissioners may direct.

"Section 2½. Twenty-five per centum of all moneys derived from property lying within municipalities and arising from the tax proposed herein shall be paid to such municipality and shall by it, be expended for upkeep of its streets.

"Section 3. That the court of county commissioners, boards of revenue, or other governing body of such county may, or upon written petition of ten per centum of the qualified voters of any county shall call and submit said election provided for and authorized by sections one and two hereof to the qualified electors of such county either at the same time of the general election, or at a special election called for that purpose; provided, that said election shall be called and held in accordance with the law now or that may hereafter be enacted governing county bond elections, and in conformity with the general election laws of the State."

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

Look Out for Rheumatism As Winter Approaches

So many cases of Rheumatism come from a tiny disease germ that infests the blood, that physicians are beginning to realize that this source of the disease is becoming quite prevalent. Of course a disease that has its source in the blood cannot be reached by local remedies applied to the surface.

One remedy that has given splendid results in the treatment of Rheumatism is S.S.S., the fine old blood remedy that has been sold by druggists for more than fifty years. S.S.S. acts by driving out of the blood the disease germ that causes Rheumatism, thus affording real relief.

Begin taking S.S.S. today and if you will write a complete history of your case, our medical director will give you expert advice, without charge. Address Chief Medical Adviser, 151 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

KILBY SAYS LET PEOPLE DECIDE ON CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Governor Thomas E. Kilby has sent out a letter in regard to the Constitutional Convention, in which he states that the matter of whether or not the Constitution shall be remade will be left up to the vote of the people.

Following is his letter in full:

During recent years it has been found that much progressive legislation, earnestly desired, has been restrained because of some constitutional limitation or inhibition. This has occasioned the submission to the people for approval at almost every general election one or more amendments to the constitution, with the result that we now have a considerable amount of confusion and a great lack of co-ordination in the fundamental law of the State.

From almost every section of Alabama there has come a demand that the people be allowed to say by their votes whether or not they shall be permitted to amend or alter their constitution so as to bring it up to the requirements of the day, to meet modern ideas of government and to avoid the necessity for so many recurring amendments. It is not within the province of the legislature to call a constitutional convention. You have merely to submit to a vote of the people the question of whether or not and when a convention shall b e held, prescribing in the resolution submitting the question a plan of appointment of delegates to the convention. Objectors to a convention, while with practical unanimity admitting that the present constitution is a bar to further progress and that a new one is sorely needed, contend, that the present is not a propitious time to submit the question because of the state of mind of the people, unrest, and so forth. That is tantamount to saying that the people are beside themselves, out of their mind, so to speak and cannot be trusted to decide a matter that deeply concerns them. I do not hold that view. I have confidence in the wisdom of the voters of Alabama and in their ability to properly and wisely determine the question at this time or at any other time. But for the purpose of giving ample time for reflection and deliberation it would, in my judgment, be wise to submit the question, if you do submit it, at an election to be held in the spring of 1921, the convention if the people vote for it, to be held in the summer or fall of 1922.

Please bear in mind that you are not asked to call a constitutional convention. I merely ask that you decide whether or not you will trust the people to decide the question for themselves. If you are not willing to do so that ends the matter.

If you submit the question I recommend the creation of a commission composed of, for example, thirty-five citizens of the State drawn from the worthy members of such groups of our people as the farmers, the business men, the educators, the doctors, the bankers, the bench and the bar, the press and organized labor, whose duty it would be to study comprehensively and in detail the provisions of the present constitution in the light of modern thought and conditions, in order to secure for the people of the State a constitution best suited to their needs and most conducive to their welfare.

The report of the commission should contain in detail such recommendations as to the continuance, discontinuance or modification of existing provisions or the adoption of new provisions, as the Commission from its investigations and study, shall deem advisable and prpoer. It should further contain drafts of proposed changes. The report should be submitted to the Governor not later than April 1st, 1922, and by him transmitted to the constitutional convention. It should be made a public document. The services and report of such commission would materially lessen and shorten the work of the constitutional convention, if called to convene by the people, and would afford a most valuable basis for the deliberations of that body.

Alabama Can Do What Other States Have Done for Their Ports

There is no way to build up an effective system of water transportation except by erecting modern terminals. Deep water, alone, won't do it.

VOTE FOR THE SEAPORT AMENDMENT

Cheap Water Transportation and a better system of Markets will reduce the cost of living in Alabama.

If you feel disposed to question the wisdom of giving the Port of Mobile the moral and financial backing of Alabama, turn to the business patriotism of Lousiana for guidance. And it hasn't cost the taxpayers of that state one dollar.

Wharves, Cotton Warehouses and Grain Elevators will be built by the unit system as needed, and they will be made to pay for themselves. State-owned terminals will prevent monopoly, give transportation independence and create a new source of revenue for the State.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

Alabama's Telephone Service Needs

The Company has 3,000 unfilled applications for telephone service in the state of Alabama today.

We can not furnish this service because we do not have the facilities. During 1919 our forecast for 1920 warned us to expect and prepare for this demand. This we did.

During 1919 adequate facilities to meet the 1920 service demand were planned, the necessary money arranged for, their immediate construction authorized and orders for material and equipment placed with the manufacturers.

To complete this 1920 construction program for Alabama, now under way, requires the expenditure of $1,431,000.00.

Until these orders are filled, sufficient facilities to supply this service can not be provided.

The demand for service continues to grow.

Modern conditions and business methods have made telephone service a basic unit of commerce.

As the population and business of the country grow, the need for telephone service grows.

No one doubts that the population and business of Alabama will continue to grow.

Our forecast for the next five years' service requirements show that, at the end of 1925, there will be a net gain of 19,100 telephones in this state.

These forecasts are based upon population, present and prospective, and an analysis of business conditions, present and prospective. The Company's present plant in Alabama was built upon such forecasts, and experience has proven their accuracy.

To meet the almost certain demand for telephone service in Alabama during the next five years (in addition to the 1920 construction program now underway), plant must be installed and expenditures must be made as follows

FIVE-YEAR PROGRAM OF CONSTRUCTION, STATE OF ALABAMA

	Telephone Installations	Telephone Disconnections	Net Gain	Total No. of Telephones	Construction Cost
1921 . . .	8,900	5,400	3,500	59,146	$1,415,825
1922 . . .	9,800	6,100	3,700	62,846	1,484,624
1923 . . .	10,800	7,000	3,800	66,646	1,664,624
1924 . . .	12,000	8,000	4,000	70,646	1,422,424
1925 . . .	13,000	8,900	4,100	74,746	1,850,424
Total 1921-'25	54,500	35,400	19,100	74,746	$7,837,921

These amounts are subject to increase in the amount we fall short of completing the 1920 program.

In no other way can this service be furnished. The necessary facilities do not exist; they must be built.

They must be built in advance of their actual need; in no other way can there be a "readiness to serve."

To complete this five-year construction program requires:

Fundamental engineering so that these additions and extensions, when finished, can be co-ordinated with the present plant and the whole operated efficiently and economically. This the Company has done.

New buildings and additions to present buildings planned and working specifications prepared. This the Company has done.

Orders for the necessary telephone material and equipment must be placed with the manufacturers, and contracts for construction of the buildings made. This the Company will do as soon as it can secure the money needed to pay the costs of the construction.

The money needed to complete the 1920 construction has been secured.

The money needed for the 1921 and following years' construction has not been secured. Twelve months' time is required to construct the facilities needed to meet the known 1921 service demand; assuming that the necessary material and equipment are promptly delivered.

The present manufacturing and transportation conditions make it imperative for the orders for this material and equipment to be placed without delay. The service demand for 1921 can not possibly be met except by authorizing theh 1921 construction program and placing orders for the necessary material and equipment at once. This the Company can not do now because it has no money available for this work.

These extensions and additions must be paid for out of the capital account of the Company; they are never paid for out of the earnings of the Company. If for no other reason, because the earnings of the Company are not sufficient.

The entire net earnings of the Company in Alabama for the past four years are less by $558,000.00 than the cost of the additions and extensions needed in Alabama for 1921 alone.

The money for new construction must come from the people who are willing to invest their money in this Company's business; in no other way can it be had.

The figures given were prepared in the ordinary routine conduct of this Company's business, and were taken from the records of the Company.

They give you a true picture of the telephone situation in Alabama.

The situation is as much yours as it is the Company's.

The responsibility is as much yours as it is the Company's.

If you are to have adequate telephone service during 1921, and during the immediate subsequent years you must act with the Company and act now.

The next advertisement will tell you why and what you can do to insure telephone service for the immediate future.

As I pondered over it I decided that my chance meeting with Barbara Bradford in the park had upset the plans of a blackmailing band, and that they were avenging themselves on me for my unwitting part. I was certain that Wick and Lefty Moore's wife were in connivance with them, and that the gang possibly included Claire Bradford's ex-husband. Wick had a passkey that enabled him to enter the Lutan apartment. Undoubtedly he could also enter mine as well. But Wick could have nothing to do with the planting of the revolver in my rooms. I was positive about that. He had not been out of my sight for a single moment from the time that we had discovered the body. The only way that it seemed possible to involve him in that was on the theory of a prearranged plot to make me appear the murderer. Was it possible that Claire Bradford had participated in this? I knew she had been in my rooms after the murder. It must have been she who put the revolver there.

One of the detectives who had arrested me appeared at my cell door.

"Come along," he commanded gruffly.

As I came out I was again shackled and led to the patrol wagon that was waiting. I had supposed that I was being taken to court to be arraigned, but such was not the case. I found myself at police headquarters, where both my photograph and my fingerprints were taken. I refrained from giving any information about myself, beyond giving my name and age, being careful to have my name recorded as John S. Nelson. Out in my home town everybody for years had known me by my middle name "Spaulding," and I was hopeful that they might fail to identify me if they read anything about me.

When everything that might serve to identify me had been recorded, I was taken into a large room where perhaps half a hundred men were assembled, most of them wearing masks. I looked about with curiosity. I had read of this ceremony. I was being "lined up" before the members of the city's detective force to see if any of them could identify me and to give them an opportunity to familiarize themselves with my features in case it should ever be necessary to arrest me again.

"Never saw him before," I heard one of them say. "Guess he must be a western crook."

"He's no amateur," said another. "That job up at the Granddeck was done by a professional."

Many slighting comments were made, too, on my personal appearance. I learned for the first time that I had a "bad ear," and that my eyes were shifty. The only emotion these comments aroused in me was a feeling of pity, not for myself but for all poor unfortunates who fall afoul of the law. Even though a man is presumed to be innocent until he has been convicted I had observed that since the first moment of my arrest everybody had taken it for granted that I must be guilty and had treated me with little respect or consideration.

From headquarters I was taken to the police court and without further delay brought before a magistrate.

"John S. Nelson, arrested for the murder of Daisy Lutan," said the detective.

"Have you counsel?" asked the magistrate.

"No," I replied.

"I will assign Mr. Myers as the prisoner's counsel," he announced.

A young chap, evidently just out of law school, stepped forward, and drew me a little to one side.

"Plead 'Not guilty,'" he directed "and be careful to say nothing more."

"Of course," I replied. "I'm not guilty. I had nothing to do with it."

I could see by his face that he did not believe me and as I turned again to the court I made up my mind that even if the court had assigned him as my counsel I would tell him nothing.

"How do you plead?" asked the court.

"Not guilty," I replied.

"Remanded without bail for further examination until Thursday morning," snapped the court, and I was led back into an anteroom, Mr. Myers and the detective accompanying me. The latter there surrendered me to some official, presumably a prison keeper.

"Looks pretty bad for you," said Myers, as we were left alone for consultation.

"I suppose it does look that way," I laughed.

"No chance to make it self-defense," he went on, plainly amazed at my manner. "No jury'd ever stand for a burglar shooting in self-defense."

"No," I admitted, "I suppose they wouldn't. Fortunately I'm no burglar."

"If we could make out it was a lovers' quarrel," he suggested.

"If I had ever known Miss Lutan," I admitted, "that might not make a bad defense."

"Look here," he replied indignantly, "young fellow, you are up against it harder than you seem to realize. They've got the goods on you, and it'll be the chair for yours if you're not careful. You've got no chance proving an alibi."

"Why not? I never saw Miss Lutan until I saw her body in her rooms. I never was in her rooms until I went in there with Mr. Wick after we had heard the shot. What's more, I never owned a revolver in my life and never saw the one the detectives found until they pulled it out of my dresser drawer."

Incredulously he listened. I could see that he did not believe a word I was saying.

"You don't look like a dope fiend, either," he observed scathingly.

"Look here," I retorted, "it is bad enough to have the police take it for granted that I am a criminal and a murderer, but when the counsel the court assigns me starts out on the same course, we quit right now. I'll get a lawyer of my own when I need one."

"I'll come around this afternoon and see you again," he said coolly. "A few hours in the Tombs will make you see things differently."

A few minutes later I found myself ensconced in a cell again, still confident of my speedy release, but somewhat puzzled as to what would be my best method of procedure. I was unacquainted with any lawyers; in fact, with any one in the whole city with whom I could consult. My immediate hope lay in my friend, Detective Gorman. There was nothing for me to do but to wait until I heard from him.

Fortunately I had had the forethought when the detectives were arresting me to take from its hiding-place in the bookcase my little hoard of money. This enabled me to send out of the prison and have a luncheon brought in. Making myself as comfortable as possible, I sat down to wait for Gorman, occupying my mind meanwhile with thinking of Barbara Bradford.

The thing uppermost in my mind was how to prevent her from being in any way involved. She must never know that only by her testimony would I be able to prove an alibi. Should she ever realize this, I knew that her sense of justice would make her come forward and tell the truth, even though it meant the loss of her own reputation and the scandalizing of all her acquaintances. She must not be permitted to talk.

She must not even try to see me while I was in prison.

The one way—the only way—I saw by which I could escape from the law's toils without implicating her was through the speedy rounding up of the band of criminals who I was positive were responsible for Miss Lutan's murder as well as for all our troubles. I was relying on Gorman to do this.

A keeper's voice interrupted my chain of thought.

"You're wanted down in the counsel room," he said. "There is a visitor for you."

"A visitor," I cried excitedly. "Who is it?" I thought of course it must be Gorman come to my rescue.

"It's your sister," he announced.

My sister! A thrill shot through me at his announcement. I knew of course it could not be my sister. Both of them were mere children far away in the West. It must be Barbara.

I Stood There Astounded. It Was Not Barbara; It Was Her Sister Claire.

Undoubtedly she had resorted to this ruse to make sure of seeing me while at the same time concealing her own identity.

Overjoyed at her coming, delighted to know that I had read her heart aright and that my confidence in her trust in me was justified, I hastened with the keeper to meet her.

Delighted as I was at her coming, I was formulating in my mind how best to make it clear to her that she must leave at once and that no matter what happened she must keep her lips closed about the events of last night. Under no circumstances would I permit her to sacrifice herself to save me.

In the counsel room a veiled figure awaited me. I sprang forward eagerly toward her. The woman standing there put up one hand in a repelling gesture and then flung back her veil.

I stood there astounded. It was not Barbara. It was her sister Claire.

CHAPTER X.

For a full minute Claire Bradford and I stood there observing each other. Even before a word was spoken I think we both sensed our mutual distrust. As I studied her, I was trying to conjecture what could have been the motive so impelling that she had dared to come even within prison walls to see me. Had Barbara sent her? I doubted it. I was sure that more than likely her visit was to plead with me to keep silent about her part in the tragedy. I was certain she was going to ask me to pledge my word to tell no one of her second visit to the Gaston apartment.

Yet as I studied her weak, beautiful face, so like Barbara's and yet so different, with its sensuous mouth and roving, brilliant eyes, I still was wondering how it was possible for a girl of her refinement and social position to have become enmeshed with such common criminals as the two employees of the Granddeck, Wick and the telephone girl.

"To what am I indebted for the honor of this visit," I asked at length, adding with some sarcasm, "from my sister?"

Never for a second had I imagined that other than a selfish motive could have brought her thither, and the conversation that followed was all the more surprising to me on that account.

"I had to say I was your sister," she answered quickly. "I wanted to be sure of seeing you and I did not wish anyone to recognize me. You know, I believe, who I am?"

"You are Barbara's sister," I replied.

"That's why I came," she cried, "for Barbara's sake. I have come to plead with you for her."

"To plead—with me—for her," I echoed in astonishment.

"Yes," she cried passionately. "She's young. She's little more than a child. She did not realize what she was doing. You must not let anyone know you even know her. You must never, never tell."

"Never tell what?" I answered noncommittally.

She answered with a convulsive sob. I thought for a little that she was going to break down completely. Her manner and the pallor of her face attracted the attention of the keeper who was in the room with us, and he started forward as if expecting her to fall in a faint. Resolutely she pulled herself together and went on in calmer tones.

"Oh, I know all about it. I know that she is completely fascinated by you. I know that she has been meeting you in the park. I know that she has lunched with you at the Astor." She hesitated and her face crimsoned—"I know that she has even visited you in your rooms late at night. Oh, please, please, I beg of you, if there is a spark of manhood in you, do not take advantage of a silly girl's weakness. Please help me protect my little sister's name; promise—you will, won't you?"

"Why should I?" I replied carelessly, repressing my desire to leap at once to Barbara's defense and explain how pure and honorable her conduct had been and how lofty the motive that had governed her actions. Tempted though I was to defend her, I realized that this might be an opportunity to learn something of Claire Bradford's associates, and I determined to make the most of it. How else could she know of all my meetings with Barbara unless she was in league with the persons who had been having me shadowed? How the knowledge that Barbara had been in my apartment could have come to her was a mystery beyond me. I would have sworn that that was a secret sacred to our two selves.

"Listen to me," she commanded, speaking in low tones, "Barbara is my baby sister, innocent of the ways of the world. I must save her from herself, and her heedlessness. Never, never, if I can help it, shall she suffer the agony and shame and disgrace that I have known. Years ago I, just as she is now, became infatuated with a man far below me in the social scale. He, too, was a criminal."

I sniffed indignantly at the "he, too," but she paid no attention.

"I ran away from school and married him and learned too late that he had a wife and child already. All my life, ever since, that terrible thing has followed me. It's like a specter ever rising to confront me. Even if I have to kill you, I am going to save my little sister from following in my steps."

"Where is Gaston Maurice now?" I asked. "Have you seen him recently?"

She gasped and shuddered, looking at me incredulously.

"You," she breathed excitedly, "who are you? How do you know his name?"

"Never mind how I know it," I replied. "What I want to know is where is he now? When did you see him last?"

"Not for years—not since long before my father's death—not since the marriage was annulled."

"Nor heard from him," I persisted.

"No, nor heard from him," she hesitated, "unless—"

"Unless what?" I insisted, as she stopped abruptly.

"I can't tell you," she said firmly. "I don't know. They must have come from him, from someone that knew—the letters."

"What letters? Tell me about them."

"I can't tell what I don't know. I haven't the least idea where Gaston Maurice is. I had hoped he was dead in the war. Yet he can't be. I have had anonymous letters threatening me. They must have come from him or from someone whom he told of our marriage? How else could they know?"

Her distress was so real and her manner so convincing that I decided that she must be telling the truth.

"Well," said I, "if you cannot tell me where to find Gaston Maurice there is one thing that you can tell me."

"What is that?"

"Why did you visit my apartment late last night? Why did you put that revolver in my dresser?"

"Revolver," she queried in a puzzled tone, "what revolver?"

"The revolver with which Miss Lutan was killed."

She eyed me in shocked surprise.

"Why do you say this to me? I never saw the revolver."

"You cannot deny that you were in my apartment last night.""

"But the revolver," she protested. "What do you mean by that? I know nothing of any revolver."

"Last night, a few minutes after Miss Lutan was murdered," I said sternly, "some man or woman entered my rooms and placed a revolver with one chamber discharged in the dresser in my bedroom. It was evidently placed there for the purpose of throwing suspicion on me, of making me out the murderer. The detectives found it there and arrested me. If you did not enter my apartment to hide the revolver, why then were you there?"

"You Cannot Deny That You Were In My Apartment Last Night."

"I knew nothing about the murder," she answered irrelevantly, "until this morning—until I read about it in the papers."

"What about Wick?" I hurled at her. "Didn't Wick tell you?"

"Wick," she repeated in a puzzled way. "Oh, Mr. Wick, the superintendent. No, I have not seen him for several days."

"Did you do nothing yesterday at his direction?"

"How absurd! Of course not."

"Why, then, did you go into my rooms?"

She looked at me with a frightened face, and her manner became more confused.

"I really believe you are trying to implicate me in your crime," she ejaculated. "It's absurd for you to try to question me this way."

"Lady," interrupted the keeper, "you'll have to be going now. Time's up."

"Promise me," she begged hastily in an undertone, as she departed, "whatever you think about me, you'll keep my sister out of it."

"I'll promise nothing, unless you confess everything," I repeated, determined, if I could, to drag her secret from her, even though I, as well as she, was eager to shield Barbara's name.

Claire Bradford's attitude, I must confess, puzzled me greatly. Her denial that she had seen the revolver, or that she had been working in conjunction with Wick seemed to ring true, and I was also inclined to believe her statement that she knew nothing of her former husband's present whereabouts. While I was pondering over her statements, my cell door opened and Gorman was let in.

"Well, young fellow," he said, "this sleuthing business didn't turn out exactly the way we expected it to, did it?"

"You don't think I'm guilty, do you?"

I waited in agony for his answer. If he failed me, there was no one, absolutely no one, to whom I could turn.

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Unappreciative Guest.

Ralph, three years old, was spending the day with his aunt. Thinking a custard would appeal to him, she inquired if he liked them, at which he answered: "Oh, my, yes." However upon being served it fell short of his expectations. He ate a little and passing it to his aunt said: "You can have it Aunt Myra. I am so full, and if you want some water to wash it down, here's my glass."

TRAGEDY TURNS INTO ROMANCE

Chief Figures in Sensational Episode in Chicago Are Quietly Married.

COMES AS SURPRISE

Man and Woman Were Prominently Mentioned in One of the Most Remarkable Tragedies of the Year—Both Exonerated.

Chicago.—Ruth Wood, twenty-five-year-old bookkeeper, who was found leaning over the dead body of Samuel T. A. Loftis, wealthy diamond broker, in his palatial North side apartment, was married two weeks later in Waukegan to Roy M. Shayne, advertising salesman, whose name was linked with hers in the widely heralded tragedy.

The marriage comes a surprise to both relatives and friends of the couple. They made no announcement of their intentions, but slipped quietly from the city.

The first announcement came in a telegram to Miss Wood's mother:

"We are married. Both very happy. On our way to a quiet resting place," the message read. It was signed "Roy and Ruth."

Romance Old—Yet Young.

The romance of the pair is scarcely two months old—and yet has lasted over a decade of years. Then Roy Shayne was manager of his father's business, the John T. Shayne company, dealers in furs. Ruth was a typist, barely out of school. She worked for the firm and Shayne became attracted to her.

Later she left his employ and for ten years did not see him. Then, some weeks ago, the fates which had decreed their participation in one of the most sensational "stories" of the year brought them together again. They met at the Edgewater Beach hotel, where Ruth was employed.

Shayne became devoted to her, and met her daily at her home. He introduced her to Samuel T. A. Loftis, wealthy diamond dealer. That night they announced their engagement at a dinner given by Loftis.

Leaning Over the Dead Body.

Girl Met Loftis by Appointment.

Six days later Loftis called Miss Wood at the hotel.

"Come to my apartment. I want to talk to you about Roy's future," was his message. Miss Woods went. Loftis met her at the door dressed only in pajamas. Drinks followed. Five hours later Shayne, awaiting her arrival at her mother's home, received a phone call. It was Ruth.

"Come and get me. I am at Loftis' home! And hurry!" was the message. Shayne went.

An hour later officers came rushing to the house. Loftis lay dead on the floor. Shayne was awaiting. Miss Wood had fled.

Shayne refused at first to tell her name—but finally consented. Both were arrested. Both were grilled. Both obtained "scare heads" in the papers and both faced the searching glances of officials and spectators at a coroner's jury. Their story was a 24-hour sensation of Chicago. And both were exonerated.

Babe's Appeal Touches Father.

New Castle, Pa.—Contentment prevails in the home of Betty Jane Reno, and her brothers, Jack and Ralph, at New Castle, Pa.

Mr. Reno, who was in Cleveland, read Betty's letter to the paper, and was touched by the appeal. "I was just going to work," he wrote home to his wife, "and saw Betty's letter in the paper. I simply couldn't work. I had no idea how the kiddies would suffer."

He forwarded a money order with the letter, and stated that he would return and "play square" with the family he had deserted.

Insurance Companies Won't Take a Man Who Suffers Continually From Stomach or Liver Troubles.

Acworth, Ga.—"We have used Black-Draught in our family for years, and can say I never have found a liver medicine that could equal it," writes Mrs. J. A. Millwood, of this place. "It is fine for indigestion, headache and sour stomach," she continues.

"I am glad to recommend Black-Draught, and am sure if others would use it they would be as glad as I've been."

Thousands of families keep Thedford's Black-Draught in the house all the time, for use at the first sign of indigestion, constipation, colic, colds and fever, thereby preventing illnesses that might develop seriously.

When you notice that you are bilious, have a bad taste in the mouth, coated tongue, offensive breath, or if you are dizzy at times, restless, sleep poorly—do not neglect your liver. WILSON REFUSES MINERS' REQUEST

PRESIDENT WILL NOT REOPEN ANTHRACITE WAGE FOR MINERS

RECALLS PREVIOUS WARNING

Declines To Reconvene The Joint Scales Committee Of Miners And Operators

Washington.—President Wilson refused to reopen the anthracite wage award as requested by anthracite miners, many of whom are on an unauthorized strike.

The refusal was made in a letter to the joint scale committee of miners and operators.

The president reminded the miners that this government had fought Germany and had refused to recognize Russia because those governments could not keep their words. He indicated the same procedure would be followed toward the miners who, he said, failed to live up to their contracts.

The president also recalled that he had warned the miners not to strike and that he had replied to threats to do so with a statement that their challenge would be accepted. He said that they had gone on a "vacation" notwithstanding this warning and told them the "vacation" amounted to a strike.

The president's letter, after acknowledging the miners' telegram, thanks the miners representatives on the scale committee for acting promptly in wrting a new wage scale based on the award of the anthracite coal commission. The letter continues: "You ask me to convene the joint scale committee of anthracite operators and miners for the purpose of adjusting certain inequalities which you assert exist ni the award of the anthracite coal commission. In that connection your attention is called to a telegram which I sent to Enoch Williams and others in reply to a telegram I received from them stating that the anthraciet miners would refrain from working unless I set aside the award of the anthracite coal commission on or before September 1. In that telegram I said: 'If your communication declaring your intention to refrain from working unless I set aside the award of the anthracite coal commission on or before September 1, 1920, is intended as a threat, you can rest assured that your challenge will be accepted and that the people of the United States will find some substitute fuel to tide over until the real sentiment of the anthracite mine workers can find expression and they are ready to abide by the obligations they have entered into.'

"Notwithstanding the plain warning contained in that telegram, which was given wde publicity, the majority of the anthracite coal miners, following the leadership of these men, have refrained from working, under the guise of taking a vacation. In doing so they have not deceived anyone, not even themselves. When a body of men collectively refrain from working by mutual understanding, however arrived at, it is a strike, no matter what name may be given to it. Our people have fought a great war and made untold sacrifices to insure among other things that a solemn agreement shall not be considered a mere scrap of paper. We have declined to entr einto no more friendly relations with governments which boast of readiness to violate treaties whenever it suits their own convenience, and under these circumstances we could not look the world in the face or justify our action to our own people or to our own conscience if we yielded one iota to the men in the anthracite coal fields who are violating hte contract so recently entered into between themsilves, the coal operators and the government of the United States.

"I appreciate the earnestness of your efforts to get the men to return to work and comment your stand in support of the obligation of your contract, which all men must honor, but for reasons statde above I regret that I cannot grant your request to reconvene the joint scale committee of miners and operators."

LABOR MAY SAVE M'SWINEY

Talk Of World-Wide Boycott On British Goods In Retaliation For Treament Of MacSwiney

London.—British labor, six and one-half million strong, has taken its stand against the government in the MacSwiney test, as Irish Republicans exhort the whole world to help them in their fight by striking at Great Britain's pocket book through a financial, economic and industrial boycott.

The great Portsmouth conference of 950 delegates, representing six million five hundred thousand workers, passed a resolution reminding the government that organized labor would hold it responsible for MacSwiney's death, should he die.

MacSwiney's wife has addressed an appeal to sympathizers with the Irish cause, the world over, to take part in an economic boycott against Great Britain.

MacSwiney Rejects Food

Each day as the fast of Lord Mayor MacSwiney in Brixton prison progresses there is staged by the bedside of the dying man a tragic little act, which has been disclosed to the press by Father Dominick, chaplain to the mayor.

Every morning food in some form or another is brought in by the prison authorities and offered to the starving prisoner in the hope that his almost uncontrollable craving will master him and that he will bc tempted to eat. Every morning there is the same end to the act—MacSwiney, who is too weak to utter a spoken refusal, crushes his desire and turns his head away. So it has gone on until the twenty-fifth day of his hunger strike.

There have been many rumors that MacSwiney was being given sustenance in drinking water or otherwise. This is indignantly denied by relatives and friends. Father Dominic says:

FARMERS ARE MENACED BY THE LOFTY PRICES OF FARMING IMPLEMENTS

There Has Been An Advance Of Seventy-Five Per Cent In Cost Of Farming Machinery

Washington.—Declaring prices of farm implements to have been increased without warrant through "concerted action" of manufacturers and dealers, the federal trade commission in a report made public recommends reopening of anti-trust proceedings against the International Harvester company and institution of judicial proceedings against implement manufacturers and dealers.

The commission declares its investigation, which was ordered by the senate, disclosed that in the period between 1914 and 1918 the prices paid by farmers for implements advanced 73 per cent with greater portion of the increase coming in 1917 and 1918. The increase, the commission asserts, was larger than warranted by the advances in the costs and expenses of the manufacturers and dealers, and resulted in unusually large profits.

Notwithstanding the increase, the farmers of the country, according to the commission's report, "were not prevented from making as much profit as before, because the prices of farm products increased to an even greater extent."

Wander is survived by his wife, three children, father and mother and one sister. It is not known what the domestic wrangle was about.

SITUATION IN EAST GROWING SERIOUS

POLES AND LITHUANIANS FIGHTING SPASMODICALLY ACROSS THE FRONTIER

POLES CAPTURE 200 MEN

Peace League To Take Up Arbitration Application — Officials Of League "Up In The Air"

Warsaw.—Conditions along the Lithuanian front are becoming more serious daily, and, according to latest reports, the Poles and Lithuanians are fighting spasmodically across the improvised frontier. In one action two Lithuanian officers, and 200 men were captured by the Poles.

German and Russian Bolsheviki are aiding the Lithuanians, it is contended by the Polish authorities. Reports reaching army headquarters state that Leon Trotzky, Russian Bolsheviki minister of war and marine, has ordered Soviet troops to help the Lithuanians to drive the Poles out of that country. The latter, however, contend that they have not crossed the demarcation line fixed by the allies.

It is contended by the Poles that the Germans and Bolsheviki planned to use Lithuania as a corridor connecting Russia and East Prussia. Reports have been received which seem to indicate that German military and commercial interests have combined with the Bolsheviki to encourage Lithuanians to wage war against Poland.

London.—Poland's application for arbitration of her territorial dispute with Lithuania will be taken up by the league of nations at the meeting of the council in Paris on September 16, it is learned.

So far as can be learned officials of the league are not inclined to sympathize with Poland, pointing out that country has not conformed to its league obligations, and has taken the initiative in the Russo-Polish hostilities. The political department of the league already has started an investigation.

USE OF NATURAL ROCKS TO INCREASE CROP YIELDS IS URGED ON THE FARMERS

Employment of Natural Rocks In Pulverized Form A Great Fertilizing Agency Open To Farmers

Chicago.—The natural rocks, such as lime, gypsum, phosphate and potash shales can be made to afford a permanent soil fertility system, according to Dr. William Crocker, professor of plant physiology of the University of Chicago, who recently addressed delegates from all sections of the country, meeting to form the Associated Natural Soil Fertility Resources.

"By employing these natural rocks in a pulverized form, the farmer can readily increase his crops' yields," said Doctor Crocker.

Among other speakers were Virgil G. Lanier, Jacksonville, Fla.; Davis Gray, Columbia, Tenn., and C. A. Weller, Knoxville, Tenn.

Reunion To Be Held At Columbia, S. C.

Columbia, S. C.—Plans for entertaining the several thousand veterans of the Wildcat (81st) division, who will hold their first reunion here September 20-21, are rounding into shape in a very gratifying manner to the several committees who have charge of the entertainment of the city's honored guests. Never have the women of Columbia been more thoroughly organized for a task, not even in war times, when things were systematized down to the most minute detail, than they are for the part they are to take in entertaining the wildcats. Already former members of the division from twenty-five states have notified the secretary of the association of their intention to be present. The citizens of Columbia are determined that there shall be absolutely no cost to the visitors at any time, or at any place. Besides entertaining these guests in their homes, the citizens of Columbia are expending the sum of $25,000 for various kinds of entertainment.

Admiral Knapp retired last June, after relinquishing the European command.

Burned To Death By Cigarette Stub

San Antonio, Texas.—Mannie Guggenheim of Greenville, Miss., was burned to death here when his bed clothing was ignited from a lighted cigarette stub, which, it is presumed, he was smoking when he fell asleep. Guggenheim, alone in the room of a local hotel, fought the flames desperately until overcome, thus preventing their spread to adjoining rooms. His heroic work, after his carelessness, undoubtedly saved the lives of many of the guests of the hotel and prevented property loss.

MANY KILLED IN EARTHQUAKE

Great Property Damage Done In Upheaval Of Earth—Tower Of Pisa Perceptibly Oscillates

Rome, Italy.—Over two thousand persons are dead and many more injured as the result of earthquakes in Tuscany, according to scattering reports reaching here.

The towns of Villacolle and Mandina, in the province of Massae Carrara, was entirely destroyed and the population of two thousand completely wiped out. Twenty were known to have been killed there and many others injured.

At Gallinara, in the province of Pisa, fifty-seven bodies had been recovered at last reports from the ruins.

Castiflione, Pieve Fosciano, Vaglia Camporgiano, San Domingo, Piazza Alserchio, Poggio, Castegnola, Fosciendora and Canigiano have been badly damaged. The dead and injured are numerous, though the number is not yet estimated. Assitance is being sent to the scenes of the disaster.

Villa Collemandina is a small town of about two thousand inhabitants in the province of Massae Carara.

A dispatch from Pisa says the earthquake shock there was preceded by deep rumblings and followed by vertical and horizontal earth tremors, lasting for thirteen seconds.

The popultaoin ,terror-stricken, fled from their homes, the women and children shouting and weeping. A mabut a majority of the people fled to the fields.

The hands of the clock in the tower stopped at 7:35 o'clock in the morning. Bells in the various steeples were set ringing by the disturbance. Persons who happened to be in Cathedral square in Pisa say they saw the famous leaning tower perceptibly oscillate.

Electric wires were short circuited in various buildings. St. Michael's church and St. Matthew's church were considerably damaged. Other church buildings suffered less seriously.

A dispatch from Milan says the earthquake there did not cause any panic among the population, but the prisoners in the jail mutinied, insisting that their cells be opened so they might not die in the ruins of the building if it should fall. Soldiers were hurriedly caled out and finally established order.

News by way of London, England, says the town of Fivizzano, 34 miles northwest of Luccia, has been completely demolished by an earthquake, and adds that Solero and Monte were badly wrecked.

UNITED STATES HAS BEGUN PROBE OF THE NATIONS' DISARMAMENT

Washington.—Informal investigation has ben started by the United States government of the progress being made by the nations of the world in the movement for universal disarmament.

Inasmuch as control of armaments was made one of the objects of the league of nations, the inquiry into the movement for universal disarmament has developed, officials say, into an investigation of the present status of the armament control clauses of the league of nations covenant.

Without having taken up the main problem of a radical and general disarmament of nations, the league of nations, according to reports received here in official circles, has begun the organization of machinery for solving the problem. Preliminary investigation and study of the league have commenced and some subbsidiary phases of the main problem such as the control to the manufacture of munitions and of the use of gas in warfare already have been discussed with a view of reaching a universal agreement.

Move Started to Drain Swamps Near Clanton

Application Will Be Made by Property Owners to Have Survey of Drainage District Made and Cost of Drain Ditch Estimated.

Last Monday a small group of property owners who have holdings in the swamps on the outskirts of Clanton met at the court house and initiated a movement that will finally result in the biggest advance step that has ever been undertaken in this county in the way of farm improvement.

As is well known to everyone who has any knowledge of the country surrounding Clanton, there is a vast acreage of the very richest kind of land that lies in the creek swamps and has been for all time too wet for cultivation. It is to all practical purposes worthless, and the only place where it ever takes any recognition is on the tax assessments. There are hundreds of acres of this land in radius of two miles of Clanton, and it is the richest land in Chilton County.

The natural situation of Clanton makes it practically surrounded by these swamps. The creek that flows eastward along the north side of town and that one which flow eastward on the south side of us, join their lazy meandering waters just on the east side of the town. All along their pathway is stretched many many acres of rich flat lands that hold the waters of the streams and prevent all except a very small bit of drainage.

A short while ago a few of our interested property holders began to look into the matter of getting these lands reclaimed from their former useless state and put into a state of cultivation. As a result of the first efforts in this matter an engineer from the U. S. Drainange investigation department was secured to come here and look over the proposition and give a discussion of the case in the light of what might be possible to do in the premises. This engineer, Mr. Hart, was here all day Monday, going over the territory of what may constitute the drainage district. At the meeting on Monday afternoon Mr. Hart took up the entire proposition in a general way and outlined the manner and the method by which work of this kind may be done under the provisions of the state law now existing in Alabama.

After the discussion was over and those present had asked Mr. Hart various questions about whatever phases of the work they desired, it was voted unanimously that the body then and there set out in the process of getting the drainige work under way.

J. D. Collins, W. W. Fox and P. D. Wilson were elected as a committee to have the proper papers fixed up in order to comply with the law governing the process. Every property owner that was present was enthusiastic and there are others who will be vitally interested though they may not have been present at the meeting.

It is estimated that it will cost from $15 to $20 an acre to dig a drainage ditch through all this land and carry away all the surplus water, making the lands ready for cultivation as soon as they can be cleared of the timber. The soil in these swamps is from one to five or six feet deep and when properly drained will produce 50 or 75 bushels of corn per acre without a bit of fertilizer. And sugar cane, oh my! Mr. Fox says it will make more lasses than you could ever get made up on our present style of cane mills.

If these swamps are drained (and they surely will be) Clanton would be benefitted a hundred per cent from the action. Instead of being a town bounded down on all sides by quagmires and frog ponds we would be a thriving city surrounded by acres of the very finest land in Alabama that would sell at $100 to $150 per acre just as fast as you could change your money.

We call on the business men of Clanton here and now to encourage this movement. Talk it over among yourselves and discuss it with the men who own the lands. It is now started and let us keep it alive till the job is done.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE OCTOBER 7 AND 8

County Superintendent of Education, Howard L. Foshee, has been informed by the State Department of Education that October 7 and 8 have been set for the date of the Chilton County Teachers Institute for this year. The place of holding the Institute will be the Chilton County High School Building.

It is suggested by the State Department that all the District School Trustees of the county be present at the Institute on the closing day at the eleven o'clock hour. The purpose of having the trustees present is in order to have an opportunity to discuss with them some of the problems that are now confronting the cause of education. This discussion with the trustees will be made by a representative of the State Department of Education and the county superintendent. It will be a valuable and very helpful thing for the trustees.

All white teachers of the county are expected to attend all the sessions of the institute on these two days, October 7 and 8.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH.

The regular services of this church will be held on Sunday morning at 11 and evening at 7:45. Preaching by the pastor.

The Sunbeam Band will meet at 2:30 P. M. Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4:00 P. M. and the Senior B. Y. P. U. at 7.

At the close of the morning service the church conference will be held. This is an important meeting as the officers are selected for the ensuing year, and many other important matters are to be attended to. We trust that every member as far as possible, will make an effort to be present. As members of the church in sound health and strength, unless unavoidably hindered, it is our duty, and it should be the passionate desire to be present at all the regular serviees of the church. Our absence helps to hinder the work and prosperity of the church. Good congregations help to make a successful church. We are each responsible for this. Everybody is welcome to these services.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

FROM BEAT NO. 11

Editor Union-Banner

I will say to the ladies of this county that I want you all to register and come to the polls and vote for the freedom of our country. Let's be a free people, as the time has come when your help is needed. It looks hard that our country is in such a fix. If the law will allow it me and Rube Jones will go to all the ladies in Beat 11 and register all the ladies of this Beat free of charge. We have made that agreement if the law will let us do that, and see that every lady in Beat 11 register that will. Let me hear from someone as soon as you can and let's be ready when the time comes.

I hope that the people of this county will look good and vote for the betterment of our country. I am ready to do all I can for the good of our country and the rising generation to come after the older ones are gone and lying silent in their graves.

I will say to the people, if they stand still and let the League of Nations come on us, we are all in bondage to other nations for all years to come. Voters, look good before you cast your ballot, no matter what you are.

JOHN S. DENNIS.

REV. GRAHAM AND HIS WORK.

Rev. J. M. Graham, who has recently accepted the Presidency of Thorsby Institute, was in Clanton Tuesday attending to some business matters relative to his work at Thorsby. Rev. Graham, in addition to his direction of the work at the Institute, will be engaged in general educational and community welfare work throughout the County in and organization known as the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute, of which he is the Superintendent. Associated with him in this work are Rev. Lewis H. Kellar, Rev. E. W. Butler, Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, Rev. Chas. T. Rogers, and Rev. Chas. L. Fisk who compose the Board of Directors. The objects of the organization briefly stated are the development of churches, homes, schools and other phases of community life and activities. It is a definitely religious but non-sectarian movement. Rev. Graham proposes to further acquaint people of the county with his aims by an occasional article in The Union-Banner.

JIM ABBOTT—NOT JIM GRANT

In the publication of the names of the Co. Republican Executive Committee in the Union-Banner of Sept. 9th the names of W. J. Moates and Jim Grant appeared as the members from Beat 15. Mr. Moates calls our attention to this error and points out that it should have been Jim Abbott instead of Jim Grant.

The name of Mr. Grant got into this place purely by mistake. Our type-setter has become so accustomed to using the name of Mr. Grant in connection with prize watermelons, wild cat still raids and one thing and another, that it is almost second nature to think of Jim Grant as soon as the name of "Jim" is seen.

ONE VOTE AGAINST 3 MILL TAX

A citizen of school district No. 44, known as the Union Point District, was in Clanton Tuesday, and told the Editor of The Union-Banner that only one vote was cast in the district on last Monday against the three mill tax for their school. That vote, our informant stated, was cast by a man who does not own a foot of land and has two children to send to school. It seems strange to us that there are men of that kind who will vote in a way so contrary to their interests.

Mr. Tommie Taylor asks us to advertise that he has a FORD 1 TON TRUCK FOR SALE—Practically new, in first class condition. Reason for selling, going to buy a bigger truck. See him at the Clanton Produce Co.

A. F. Mims of Thorsby was in Clanton Monday for a short while.

DISTRICT SCHOOL TAX CARRIED BY GOOD VOTE

The result of the election on the three mill school tax in the Clanton School District on Monday was a vote of 211 for the proposed tax and 79 against it.

Two years ago when the district tax was first voted it was carried by only 29 majority. The greatly increased majority for it shows that its workings has won many friends for the system. Every lover of our public schools will be glad of the outcome of the election as the favorable consideration of the people for our city public school speaks very commendable for our citizenship.

REYNOLDS AND THOMPSON TO HAVE JOINT DISCUSSION OCT. 9

Judge Reynolds will go to Centerville on October 9th to engage Fritz Thompson in another joint debate on political issues of the present campaign. On the night of the 9th they will debate at Blocton. This is going to be an interesting piece of political hairpulling. We hope that an agreement will be made between the speakers in advance that Fritz must stay in the house and hear Judge Reynolds reply to him. He should not be allowed to run away like he did over at Columbiana.

LEWIS EASTERLING NOW GAME WARDEN OF CHILTON COUNTY.

Lewis Easterling of Beat 16 informs us that he now holds the official designation of game warden of Chilton County. He further says that if any of the boys take a notion to go out and try their new guns on the squirrel crop before they get ripe they had better not pass his house. This not only applies to the squirrels but to all game that is protected by Alabama laws .

NEW LAW FIRM IN CLANTON

This week there appears a new card in our professional column announcing the law firm of Saxon & Pitts in Clanton. The partnership is composed of L. L. Saxon of Columbiana and Mr. Percy Pitts of Clanton. In fact, there is to be a continuation of the law partnership of Saxon & Pitts in Columbiana, where they have been practicing for the past five years.. The Clanton office is merely an addition to the scope of the firm.

Both Mr. Saxon and Mr. Pitts are well known in legal circles in this part of Alabama. They will be welcomed at the Clanton bar.

WE HAVE ICE RIGHT ON.

Clanton is enjoying its usual portion of ice this week in spite of the fact that our ice plant was completely destroyed by fire early last Sunday morning. On Monday morning Mr. Wade had a car load of ice here ready for his delivery truck to make the usual rounds of the city on time. We deplore Mr. Wade's loss by the fire, and he has the thanks of the town for his promptness in taking care of his patrons by securing plenty of ice from elsewhere.

It is our information that Mr. Wade will rebuild his ice plant in Clanton, but we have not been able to confirm the report by a statement from Mr. Wade himself.

The law partnership of Atkinson & Collier, which was formed just a few weeks ago has been dissolved, and Mr. Atkinson is moving back to his same offices in the Wilson Building. He will be glad to have his friends call on him in the same offices which he occupied before forming his partnership with Mr. Collier.

DR. GRAGG WINS MAYOR'S RACE BY A SMALL MARGIN

The municipal election in the Town of Clanton on Monday was a hotly contested battle with Dr. V. J. Gragg and Attorney F. B. Collier, candidates for Mayor, leading the opposing forces. The result was in doubt down to the very last minute, when Dr. Gragg passed under the wire by a margin of only four votes.

There were eight candidates for councilmen, who received votes as follows:

Tom Kemp 234; J. Watts Moore 197; M. L. White 184; J. B. Atkinson 141; Dr. N. S. Johnson 131; T. C. McSwain 121, V J. Elmore 119; Dr. T J. Marcus 110.

The five highest will be the members of the council.

There were quite a number of ladies who took part in the election, casting their ballots for the first time in the history of Clanton.

BIG FIRE DAMAGE IN CLANTON EARLY LAST SUNDAY MORNING

The plant of the Wade Ice Company in Clanton was completely destroyed by fire at an early hour last Sunday morning. The entire plant was a total loss, together with the machinery that constituted the light plant before the coming of the Alabama Power Company to Clanton.

The fire was a very dangerous one, inasmuch as the Wade building was closely adjacent to everal store houses. The buildings occupied by Tom Kemp, McKee's Market, Western Union Telegraph Co., Ideal Theatre, Candy Store, The Boston Shoe Shop and the planing mill of the Downs Lumber Co., were threatened, and but for the splendid fire-hose of our city waterworks department, would surely have been all destroyed.

Mr. Wade carried no insurance on his plant, and his loss is estimated at about $25,000.

We have heard no theory as to how the fire might have caught.

CLANTON HAS FIRE PROTECTION

We heard a property owner in Clanton say last Sunday that when he insured his property this year the insurance company told him that they did not regard that Clanton has any fire protection in its waterworks system. We don't know, but we imagine that if you should ask Tom Kemp, Gilvey McKee or P. C. Smith, their opinion would not exactly correspond with the idea advanced by the insurance company. Clanton has got good fire protection. Anybody with half an eye can see that, and the insurance authorities should recognize the fact in fixing our rates.

CANDY KITCHEN IN CLANTON

Mr. J. P. A. Wall, former proprietor of the Chilton Cafe, and a Mr. Smith, are preparing to open up a Candy Kitchen in Clanton, probably in the Hayes Building opposite the post office.

Mr. Wall says that he is going to make candy—fine candy and lots of it. Further particulars will be announced later.

Mr. Wall is a hustler, and we are glad to have such noble fellows as him with us .

TIME TO PAY OUR TAXES.

The time is close at hand now for the annual visits of our tax officers to the various parts of the county for the purpose of assessing and collecting the state and county taxes. Their dates have already been announced as will be seen by reference to another part of this paper. They start about the first of October.

Alabama Legislature

What the State's Solons Are Doing and Undoing

Montgomery.

Governor Kilby's message to the extra session of the legislature deals primarily with the necessity for removing the sex barrier to the franchise in Alabama and providing machinery by which women may be qualified to vote. Considerable attention is devoted to the need for a constitutional convention and a request that the legislature submit the question to the people to decide whether they want a constitutional convention called.

The governor reviews the progress made by the state under the laws adopted at the last session of the legislature, and finds much cause for gratification. He deals at length with child welfare, education, law enforcement, tax equalization and the need for further progress along all of these lines. He reviews all of the bills he has suggested to the legislature for enactment at this extra session.

The only suggestion of additional revenue-producing measures is contained in a paragraph devoted to the great need of the state's institutions of higher learning, and in that case he merely asks what finer thing the legislature could do than to find revenues from some source with which to put them abreast of the times and equal in all respects to similar institutions in other states.

Following is a brief summary of Governor Kilby's message to the legislature:

This marked increase in commitments (to jail) indicates an alarming increase in crime. . . . We are in a condition of unrest and perturbation such as, unfortunately, follows all great conflagrations. It is clear, however, that it is the duty of the state to afford its citizens every possible protection against this wave of lawlessness. Present facilities for enforcing the laws are entirely inadequate.

"We should look forward to the return of normal conditions and enable the Alabama Public Service Commission, as time goes on, to be in a position to lighten the burdens of our people and bring back rate levels and practices to a more normal basis.

"In my message at the beginning of your July session I told you that in my judgment no legislature was ever given a greater opportunity for real and lasting service to a state. I now say that no legislature ever made better use of its opportunity.

"The enactment of a general health law and the increased appropriation it carried have been a great blessing to our people.

"The field of child welfare is the most delicate of all fields of social work and calls for trained service. Trained workers are to be had only upon payment of adequate salaries.

"The response of the people of the state to this most worthy appeal to their patriotic sentiment (the Alabama Memorial Commission's work) has not been very creditable.

"Workmen's Compensation — This law is working to the satisfaction of employers and employes.

"From an educational standpoint the past year has been a significant one for Alabama. In many respects progress has been great; in some, it has been phenomenal, epoch-making. It has attracted the attention of the entire country. . . . Approximately 3,000 adult illiterates have been taught to read and write. . . . Approximately $1,000,000 has been expended on rural school houses. . . . Much remains to be done. With all our efforts, with all those things regarded as essential for an efficient system Alabama still ranks alarmingly near the bottom of the list, only three states falling below us. Still greater effort, even greater progress is necessary if our children are to have advantages equal to those provided by other states for theirs. Nothing less should satisfy us. . . . Patriotic teachers must come to the rescue and serve for inadequate compensation, while patriotic citizens make provisions for the adequate support of the schools.

"What finer thing could you do than find the money from some source and with its use place these institutions (the state institutions of higher learning) abreast of the times and equal in all respects to the best of their several kinds in any state of the Union? Any sacrifice such action entails would be amply repaid, for the money so expended would come back to us a hundred fold in better educated, more highly trained young men and women who are to be the future leaders of our people in all lines of activity.

"We do not owe a dollar of borrowed money, and I have every reason to believe that we can pass through the year without borrowing. There has been a marked improvement in our financial condition. . . . The appropriations for the year begin Oct. 1, 1920, aggregate approximately $1,000,000 more than for the current year. I anticipate no difficulty in paying these appropriations out of the revenues of the state without resort to borrowing.

"It is gratifying to report that much progress has been made . . . toward equalization. . . . The great bulk of the property owners of Alabama have willingly and cheerfully assumed their share of the cost of government, believing it to be fair and equitable and that all cases, big and little, have been weighed on the same scales.

"There are no 'burdens of taxation,' comparatively speaking. The cheapest thing in Alabama today is state government and the things that go with it. It is the only thing I know of that has not doubled and trebled in price during the recent year. . . . With 10,000 school teachers working for wages far below the wages paid common laborers and menial servants, this hue and cry about the 'burdens of taxation' is a thing to be ashamed of."

Kilby's Bills Introduced.

All bills proposed by Governor Kilby in his call were introduced in the two houses during the day except the measure providing for change in the law relating to the public service commission. This bill, which gives the commission broader powers is now being written and will be introduced later in the week.

It levies a fee against each public service corporation in Alabama which will provide a fund of about $50,000 for the expenses of the committee.

Bills legalizing women's suffrage were presented and referred to the committee on privileges and elections of the two houses. The bills were introduced in the house by W. H. Shaw of Colbert, who proposed measures in 1919 which contemplated ratification and would have prevented this extra session. One measure provides for the registration of women at a special registration period, beginning October 1. Another prescribed the qualifications of women voters, the bill providing that their qualification shall be the same as imposed on men by the constitution.

A third requires all women voters to pay a yearly poll tax of $1,50, beginning October 1. This poll tax will be delinquent February 1 and will bar a woman from participating in any primary or general election.

Measures which are advocated by the governor now and which were introduced on the first day follow:

To authorize the governor to employ a special force to serve under his direction in enforcing the state laws, this being known as the state law enforecement bill, appropriating additional funds for the expense of the department.

To validate county warrants issued under an act of the 1919 legislature, relating to construction of roads and tick eradication,

Providing an aditional appropriation for the State Pasteur Institute, which is an amendment to an act of the 1919 legislature.

Authorizing courts of county commissioners, boards of revenue or like governing bodies to issue interest bearing warrants for the construction of roads and eradication of the cattle tick.

* * * *

Opposed to Convention Bill.

Alabama voters will not be called upon by the legislature to say whether or not a constitutional convention shall be held in 1922. At a caucus of those opposed to the enactment of the laws which would put the question up to the voters, sixty-eight members of the house of representatives agreed to oppose such a measure. Already a majority of the senate had agreed to vote against the bill.

The caucus of the house members was held following adjournment for the day and after Speaker S. A. Lynne had informed the house that Governor Kilby, in a personal conversation with him, had asked that it be made known without equivocation that he had never urged the calling of a convention, but had merely suggested that the issue be submitted to the voters at the request of a large number of citizens.

Oppose Appropriation.

Additional appropriations for the state law enforcement department, charged with the duty of enforcing state laws, will not be given with the approval of the senate committee on finance and taxation, that committee having made an adverse report on the senate bill when the body convened for the second legislative day. The bill was sponsored by administration leaders, and was suggested in the call for the special session. Provision for an additional appropriation was made totaling $50,000.

Want Arbitration Board.

Among the bills introduced was one by Senator Smith of Coosa county which would create a state board of arbitration and local boards with authority to settle disputes between employes and employers in Alabama. The bill prescribes the duties of members of the boards and provides for the arbitration of differences that may arise at any time. Senator Smith did not say whether the bill has the support of administration forces, but it is known that Governor Kilby had been asked to consider such a measure.

JUST GAVE UP SUFFERED SO

Weakness, Pains and Other Troubles Had Discouraged This Arkansas Lady.—She Took Cardui, Found It Helpful. Got Well!

Harrisburg, Ark.—After serious symptoms had become apparent, Mrs. Belle Wilkerson, of Route 1, this place, says she "got worse and worse."

"I wasn't able to stand on my feet and had to go to bed," she explains. The . . . grew worse, and for about three weeks nothing seemed to do me any good. I grew so weak and nervous and could not sleep. I began to have pain in the lower part of my body, and all across my back. There was a great deal of soreness and pain in my left side . . . I just gave up, for I suffered so. I grew discouraged and thought I was not going to get well.

"My head not only ached, but would feel so light and dizzy . . . I decided then I would take Cardui, as I read of how many women it had benefited, and some whose case was like mine. When I began Cardui, just after a few doses, I noticed a change. I slept better at night . . . and felt like I could eat something. I got up and began to do the work in the house and yard, and after three or four bottles of Cardui I was well."

Speedy Relief From Habitual Constipation

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.

Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. CHAPTER X—Continued.
—13—

"It looks like you were guilty from reading the morning papers," he answered with a grin. "But I don't believe all I read. They've made out a strong case against you, though."

"I didn't do it!" I cried passionately.

"If you didn't, who did?"

"It must have been Mr. Wick."

"There you go, jumping at conclusions. Why not Claire Bradford?"

"Why do you mention her? Do you suspect her?"

"If she didn't do it, why did she come down here to see you?"

"How did you know she was here?"

"I was watching you all the time you were talking to her."

"But how did you know who she was?"

"I saw the other one this morning. They look alike."

"But how did you know which sister it was?"

"You didn't seem to get along well enough in your talk for it to be Barbara," he answered with another grin.

It had not been my intention to reveal even to him Claire Bradford's second visit to my apartment, but I saw how foolish it would be of me to attempt to deceive or to withhold any information from such a shrewd observer.

Without reserve and with the utmost detail I proceeded to relate everything that had happened since I had seen him the afternoon before. I told of my discovery of the secret panel in my room and of the blind passageway into which it apparently led, of Barbara's having made the perilous journey over the window ledge to inspect my find, of the screams we had heard, followed by the shot, of how Barbara had fled back by the way she came, and I had run downstairs and with Wick had discovered the body. I told him every detail so far as I could remember it, winding up with my catching Claire Bradford leaving my apartment, just before my arrest and the finding of the revolver.

"You don't think the detectives themselves planted the gun on you?" he asked. "I've heard of them doing things like that."

He spoke with such an air of innocence that I had to smile. I doubt if there were many tricks of detectives that Gorman did not know all about.

"They had no opportunity whatever. Neither of them had been near the dresser before, and I was watching them every moment."

"Well, who did hide the revolver there, if they didn't?"

"I don't know."

"Couldn't Wick have done it?"

"I was with him every moment after we discovered the body."

"Maybe it was Claire Bradford?"

I shook my head.

"I thought at first it might have been she, but I'm convinced since talking with her that it was not. She's either entirely innocent or else the most wonderful actress in the world."

"I think we can leave her out of it," ventured Gorman.

"That leaves only Wick."

Gorman shook his head positively.

"No, Wick didn't do it. He's a bad one all right, and he has done time, but he's only a tool."

"Wick has done time!" I exclaimed. "How did you find that out? What have you learned about him?"

Gorman grinned at my eager questioning.

"I don't know much about him yet, but I'm sure he's an ex-con. While you were in court this morning," he explained, "I went up to the Granddeck to take a look at things for myself. Wick showed me through the Lutan apartment, thinking I was from the coroner's office. I spotted him at once. A crook that has done time is always sure to give himself away."

"How?" I asked.

"Well," said Gorman judicially, "men's businesses leave their marks on them. A clergyman don't have to be wearing a high vest for you to spot him, and nobody ever took a dancing teacher for a pugilist. A man that has looked at as many crooks as I have knows them by instinct, and then there's little ways you can tell. As I was going up to the apartment with Wick he just naturally fell into step with me, showing he had been used to marching with other prisoners. He talks, too, without moving his lips. That's a sure sign. They learn that in prison so they can talk without the guards knowing it."

"That's so," I cried. "It struck me that there was something funny about the way Wick talked, but I couldn't have told just what it was."

"Wick's a crook, all right, "but I think he comes from somewhere upstate or maybe out West, but he hasn't intelligence enough to be anything more than a runner for the gang."

"Well, what's your theory?" I asked. "If Wick didn't murder Miss Lutan, who did?"

"I don't know yet. Wick ain't big enough. Big jobs take big men to plan them. This whole thing is a big affair, carefully planned out. It takes more brains than Wick ever dreamed of having to plant anonymous notes and terrify people nearly out of their senses with mysterious whispers and then to steal the Bradford papers and the Gaston pearls and then when things get hot to have you already framed as the goat to blame things on."

"Then you think my discharge from the office was part of the plot?"

"Sure it was. You butted in on their blackmail plans, and they wanted to get square with you, and a young fellow out of work and discharged in disgrace is always an easy mark for suspicion."

"And was it part of the plot to blame Miss Lutan's murder on me?"

"I don't think so. The Lutan murder was an accident. Even the biggest crooks seldom deliberately plan murder. They're all afraid of the chair. She came in and surprised some one of the gang in the apartment. He had to shoot her to make his getaway. It was quick thinking on somebody's part after the murder to plant that gun in your rooms. That sort of scheming takes brains, and Wick hasn't got them."

"Who was it, then?"

"We've got to find," said Gorman, speaking slowly and with emphasis, "the big crook that is back of all this—the master-mind."

"The master-mind," I echoed.

"Yes," he said, "there's a big crooked brain somewhere that has been directing the whole plot, and planning the actions of Wick and of the telephone girl, and maybe of Claire Bradford, too."

"I wonder if it could be her ex-husband. She told me, though, a few moments ago, that she had not heard of him for years, and she seemed to me to be telling the truth."

"I don't think it was him," said Gorman. "He was only a chauffeur. If he's in it at all, he's only one of the gang. He's not the master-mind."

"I hope we can keep the Bradfords out of it altogether," I said. "You see, Gorman—"

"I understand," he interrupted. "I know how the land lies. You need not worry about that. If Claire Bradford had any part in the plot, you can bet she was forced into it and driven to do what she did. Have you seen her sister?"

"No, and I hope she'll make no effort to see me. She mustn't. You'll see her, won't you?"

"Leave it to me," said the detective. "I'll manage to reach her without even her own family knowing anything about it. I'll make her understand that if she tries to see you or says anything, she'll only be damaging your case. Don't worry about her."

"There's one thing, though," I said, "that I wish you could do."

"What's that?"

"Can you find some way of getting to the Gaston apartment and exploring that secret passage and see where it leads?"

He turned savagely on me.

"Say, young fellow," he said, "if I didn't know that you were innocent, I'd swear that you were a dope fiend with this tale of a secret passage.

"We've Got to Find the Crook That Is Back of All This—the Master Mind."

You've been reading too many thrillers or going to the movies too much. They don't have secret passages in modern apartment houses. You better keep quiet about that. You can't get anybody to believe you, and you'll only hurt your case."

"But I know there's a passageway there—along the hall. I found the opening, a panel in my bedroom. There's a place there big enough for a man to walk in. I saw it."

He looked at me pityingly, and I could see that he did not believe a word I was saying.

"All right, there's a passage there, and we'll leave it there. A young fellow in love is apt to imagine all sorts of things."

I saw there was no use in my insisting further about the passageway. His mind was stubbornly made up that it could not exist. He was the only friend I had in all the great city, and I must leave it to him to work the thing out in his own way.

"What about a lawyer?" I asked.

"Didn't the court assign you one?"

"Yes, but he took it for granted that I was guilty, so I got rid of him."

"Well, there ain't much a lawyer could do yet. I'll dig up one when we need him. Bail is not possible in a murder case, so there is nothing for you to do but to sit tight and take it as easy as you can. By the way, have you heard anything from old Gaston since you were arrested?"

"Not a word," I answered. "I have not the least idea where he is or how to reach him."

"Humph, that's funny," said Gorman abstractedly. "Good-by, I'll see you again tomorrow."

He pounded on the cell door, and a guard released him, leaving me alone to ponder over my plight, and especially over his last question. What had he meant by it?

Where was old Rufus Gaston?

Once more suspicion of my aged relative shot through my brain. Was it possible that his was the master mind behind all this plotting? Gorman had insisted that the arch criminal behind Wick and the others must be some man of intellect. My great-uncle Rufus had brains. Out of a clear sky he had summoned me to live in the Granddeck and then had mysteriously disappeared. Certainly he had had opportunities for knowing Wick and the telephone girl. Barbara had recalled once having heard her father speak of him in disparaging terms. Had it been he who was plotting against the Bradfords and had brought me into the case as a scapegoat?

Was old Rufus Gaston the master mind? Where was he?

CHAPTER XI.

Fortunately for me, there had recently been a wave of public criticism of the courts for the long delays in bringing criminal cases to trial, and the district attorney was moving with all celerity to bring my case to a conclusion. An indictment against me for the murder of Daisy Lutan had been quickly found and the date had been already set for the trial—one week hence—so that the period of my incarceration and doubt as to my ultimate fate seemed likely to be very brief.

Utterly absurd as the situation was, accused of murdering a woman whom I never had seen and hardly had heard of until I saw her lying dead in her apartments, conscious as I was of my entire innocence in the matter, still, as in the solitude of my cell I reviewed the case, I found myself facing the ordeal of a trial for murder with considerable apprehension.

Circumstances certainly looked much against me. There was absolutely no way in which I could refute the testimony of the two detectives that they had found the revolver with one chamber discharged in the drawer of my dresser. I myself had seen them find it. While Gorman still held that there was a possibility that they themselves had put it there, I knew that neither of them had been near the dresser after I had admitted them to my rooms. The only person whom I had the slightest ground for suspecting was Claire Bradford, yet what motive could she have had?

Wick undoubtedly would testify that he had met me at the door of the Lutan apartment directly after he had heard the shot. He might say that I appeared to be greatly excited. This would be the exact truth. There was even the possibility that he might swear that he had found me coming out of Miss Lutan's apartment. Even if he did not make the statement direct, shrewd questioning on the part of the district attorney could easily make it appear that I had just left the Lutan apartment. How could we possibly controvert his testimony?

Then, in addition, there were the damaging statements that would be offered by Nellie Kelly. She would swear that the evening before I had taken her out to dinner and had been questioning her about the other tenants in the house. Even though we knew that she was a tool of Wick and was the wife of Lefty Moore, the burglar, unless Gorman was able to discover that she herself had a criminal record, it seemed utterly hopeless to attempt to confute her statements.

It would also militate against me that at the time of the murder I was out of a job and almost without funds. They were likely, too, to bring out the fact that I had been discreditably discharged from the only position I had held in New York. The only man who knew anything about the matter, Mr. Wood, the head of the firm, had been suddenly called to France in connection with an order for munitions, and was not expected to return for several months. The fact would weigh against me, too, that I would be unable to offer the testimony of any character witnesses. Birge and Roller, my classmates with whom I had roomed ever since I had come to New York, were "somewhere in France" with the American troops and could not possibly aid me.

All of this was pointed out to me by John McGregor, a young attorney whom Gorman had employed for me. While Gorman and I had, I think, succeeded in convincing him of my innocence, the fact that he was continually citing the difficulties in the way of our proving it made me realize that he was very dubious as to the outcome.

The trouble was that we were absolutely without witnesses. Old Rufus Gaston's whereabouts still remained a mystery. If we could discover him in time, we could at least explain satisfactorily my presence in the Granddeck and could establish that I was not the homeless, penniless vagrant they would try to prove me. The longer old Rufus remained in hiding, the stronger became my suspicion that he might be in some way involved in the plot. His action in keeping his address a secret from me seemed to have been with deliberate intent.

After some discussion Gorman and I had agreed not to mention either of the Bradford girls.

"If one word about either of them slips out in court," said Gorman, "they'll be in for it. The papers will jump to it and print their pictures and all that. We'd better leave them out of it."

With this I heartily concurred. I was determined that Barbara Bradford must be in no way involved, come what may. I knew that she herself would be apt to be restrained from attempting to communicate with me by the fact that her sister's marriage was set for the day after tomorrow. Her loyalty to her family was such that she would not risk scandal by trying to aid me, at least not until her sister was married and the future for Claire and her mother assured.

Two small rays of sunshine lightened the gloom of my cell—the fact that the newspaper mention of the tragedy seemed thus far to have escaped my mother's notice and the fact that Barbara still believed in my innocence and trusted me absolutely. A day or two after my arrest Gorman had managed to see her and had told her that it was my wish that she keep entirely quiet her knowledge of the affair and that she should make no attempt whatever to communicate with me while I was in prison. He had brought back with him a hastily penciled note which often in my cell I read and re-read:

"Dear Mr. Nelson:

"I'm so sorry to hear of your trouble and the absurd charges against you. I'll do whatever you wish, of course. I trust you absolutely. If anything I can tell will aid you at any time, I am ready to speak—cost what it may. I know you are innocent and must soon be freed. Hoping to see you,

"With all confidence,

"B. B."

Each time I read anew the penciled lines, my heart rejoiced. Come what may, I felt sure that Barbara's heart was mine. I joyed to know that come out of prison to her though I might, she would be glad to see me. Joyfully would I have gone to the electric chair rather than have her fair name in the least smirched by scandal in trying to defend me. She alone could prove an alibi for me, but no one must ever know it.

What would a scandal-loving world say if the fact became public that she had been alone with me in my apartment near midnight? If only by the sacrifice of her good name could I go free, then let me stay in my cell. Let me even go to the electric chair. I would not have my life at the loss of my beloved's reputation.

One other thing I had kept from my lawyer—my discovery of the passageway between the walls in my great-uncle's apartment. If I could not get Gorman to believe in this secret passage, which I was convinced had some connection with the mysteries and the whisperings at the Granddeck, there was little likelihood that McGregor would believe my tale either. Given one single hour in my quarters at the Granddeck and I would have discovered whither it led and who used it, but once a man is charged with murder, his hands are tied. It was futile for me to mention it again, even to the detective or to my lawyer, until such time as I could show it to them and convince them that I knew what I was talking about.

Where He Was Weak.

The other day, my little cousin brought home his report card marked A plus for everything except deportment. His father said: "Why, John, how does this happen?" John's reply was: "Well, but daddy, that's my hardest study."—Exchange.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER © by the AUTHOR.

ON THE FARM.

"I don't mind which crop of hay I eat," said the horse, "as long as I have hay to eat."

"We Tell Stories."

"Neigh, neigh," said another horse belonging to the farmer, walking along the road, "I don't mind, either."

"We are less fussy than that even," said some pink and white pigs who were digging in some mud. "We will eat almost anything and rush for it, too. We were clean not long ago. Yes, we were clean pigs, but now we're all dirty. We became dirty digging for food."

"We're adding to Mother Nature's family," said the elderberry bushes with the big flowery white purple berries.

"We're enjoying the day so much," said some children as they wandered about the farm in their bare feet.

"We add to the beauty all about," said the big hills, and the valleys added:

"We too try to look our best. For they say that this farm is in a lovely valley and that all around are lovely hills. So we try to look our best, and this valley right here takes such pride in being a fine valley."

"And," said the well, "where the children always went to get water, "I tell stories to the children as they look down into me.

"At night the stars shine down upon me and I tell them stories, too."

"And we like it around here," said the birds, "for the people on the farm give us crumbs and they put the crumbs on the piazza of the farmhouse so we will come up and be tame."

"And we three trees," said one of the tall oak trees, "have stood for years on the road leading to this farm. We talk to each other from spring until the fall and our branches talk throughout the winter."

"We don't actually belong to the farm," said the two blue darning needle flies, "but we like it here, so we stay around, too, for it is such a nice farm."

"And though I'm only an old pine tree stump with funny old roots spread out about me, I, too, like to feel a part of the farm. Children use my hollow stump for a dolls' house. And that is fun."

"And we're a little beyond the farm," said a pine tree grove, "but we belong to the farm, and the farmer's children come along and walk over our pine needle pathway."

"Though we're always shaking," said the aspen leaves on the aspen trees, "we are shaking with our merry laughs and smiles. It's not because we're nervous or unhappy, no indeed."

"And I like it here," said the robin. "Yes, chirp, chirp, I am very happy. The tree is old but it's cozy and homelike just the same and around the trunk of the tree the beautiful sweet peas are climbing up. And down in the grass delicious worms are to be found."

"We, too, try to make the road which leads to the farm nice," said some of the early golden rod flowers.

"I love the farm," said the cow, whose eyes had been shut. "I had to listen to what was being said, though I will admit that I was taking a little day nap—dreaming of the joy of cud chewing!"

A Doll's House.

"I guard the farm-house," said Jack, the Airedale dog, and Buster, the bulldog added:

"So do I. And we each wait until our own name is called before we go for dinner. That is not only a trick but we feel it is only polite to wait until one is asked into dinner.

"We have other friends around the farm and we love farm life, how we love it!

"We bark and act as watch dogs to protect the farmer and his wife and the children. But oh, we're as gentle as sheep with the children!"

And one after the other, every animal on the farm, every flower, and every thing that belonged in some way to the farm smiled and felt deeply happy on the farm summer afternoon that the world was so extremely nice and that farm life was as nice as anything in the whole world.

And the farmer's children thought the same as the animals did about the farm!

CALOMEL LOSING OUT IN SOUTH

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much, but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasant-tasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feeling fine; no biliousness, sick headache, acid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day like violent calomel. Take a dose of calomel today and tomorrow you will feel weak, sick and nauseated. Don't lose a day.—Adv.

Wilson can't get even half a League onward.

The women of Maine don't raise their boys to listen to voices in the air, do they?

All we got to do is to dig the ditches. The water will run down hill by itself.

Fifth Cousin Roosevelt says that "Maine doesn't count." But it did—and it was a bully count.

In one of his recent speeches in the west, Candidate Cox said: "Thank God, the women will vote this year." He had not heard from Maine.

Dr. Marcus says he is thankful to his friends for keeping him from being elected on the Town Council on Monday.

A friend of ours who is cleaning up a small swamp ran into a thunder wood tree and has decided to scratch for a living.

Norman E. Mack says that "the plain people" are for the Democratic ticket this year. There seen to be mighty few plain people in Maine just now.

The Democrats are now saying that money carried Maine. How much? Any old figure will do, of course, but make it big. Your leader, jimcox, is a piker in these accusatory matters.

Franklin D. Roosevelt, Democratic candidate for Vice President, calls Senator Harding "an old-fashioned politician." That is far better than a half-baked politician, with half baked ideas of government.

It would be interesting to know whether Daniels cost the Democrats more votes in Maine than did Franklin D. Roosevelt. Between the two of them—with Wm. J. McAdoo added—they started an amazing landslide.

BAD NEWS FROM MAINE

The Democrat who can get either contentment or satisfaction out of the returns from the Maine election must indeed be of a cheerful and optimistic nature. In the result of the Maine election there can not possibly be but one element of value to the Democratic party—the lesson which teaches that the party must speed up its organization and back up the aggressive campaign of Governor Cox with a far-flung and systematized campaign.

Democrats are mad enough to say "Oh well, not only is Maine one of the solid Republican States, but it is a decadent State, as well, for the last census showed that it lost in population during the past ten years." But that will be no answer to the 66,000 majority piled up in the State which went Democratic in 1912 and 1914 by narrow majorities, and which has several times given the Republicans less than ten thousand majorities. The country has been looking forward to what the new woman vote would do; we have been assured by the Democratic leaders that the women would vote for the League of Nations. What ever else the women in Maine wanted they did not want the League of Nations or a Democratic administration. The outstanding factor in the Maine election is the unfriendliness manifested there by the women for the Democratic party.

It is all the harder for Democrats to get consolation for the Maine result, because the campaign was pitched on national issues. Democrats might see some ray of light in the election returns, if the campaign had been fought out on old State issues, and had been decided by State factionalism. But the two parties in Maine accepted national issues, particularly the League of Nations, as the battleground. The impartial Associated Press says:

"Considerable significance in the outcome in its bearing on the November election was apparent from the fact that the campaign was fought out almost wholly on national lines, with the League of Nations as the chief issue."

Parkhurst, the Republican who was elected Governor, said "the voters of Maine resented the autocratic and the un-American administration which the Democrats have given us for the past seven years." These are harsh words and they make unpleasant reading for Democrts, but it will be folly not to rid ourselves in September of what illusions we may have before fighting out the campaign before the November election. The practical lesson as we pointed out, was demonstrated in the lack of an efficient Democratic organization. The best Democratic organizations, would probably not have turned Maine from Republicanism, but it would have cut the lopsided majority.

The five million dollar fund which the Republicans admit to say nothing of the fifteen million dollar fund with which Governor Cox charges them undoubtedly had some effect on the Maine campaign. Money even when used recklessly, unfortunately does increase the vote of a candidate, a party or a faction. We learned that last spring in the Alabama primaries. The Democrats need to bestir themselves; it is evident that they are fighting a battle against odds.—The Montgomery Advertiser.

You fellows who own swamp lands around Clanton may look out for somebody trying to buy your marshes for a song. But don't listen to him. Just inform him that you are going to join the drainage association and have that land put into use. You can spend $20 an acre on it and sell it for $150 an acre.

A TRIBUTE TO CONGRESS

Washington, Sept. 14.—Expressing confidence in thhe American form of government, the Republican Publicity Association takes the New York "World" to task for calling Congress a "Soviet of country lawyers." The statement issued by the Association through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., follows:

"Deep in the slough of despondency, the New York 'World' believes what it apparently deems the failure of popular government. 'The Congress of the United States has been called a Soviet of lawyers. It could be more precisely described as a Soviet of country lawyers—lawyers of the prosecuting attorney type who have finally realized their ambition to get to Washington. This applies to the Senate as much as to the House.' Then the 'World' proceeds to quote what it calls an 'illuminating criticism of the government of the United States' by Franklin D. Rooevelt, the Democratic candidate for Vice President.

"That the 'World' and its candidates should be criticizing the government of the United States is no occasion for surprise, since they have demonstrated the sincerity of their dissatisfaction with the American government by their proposal to abandon American nationalism for the domination of a super-state in which Great Britain would have six votes to America's one.

"Fortunately, however, the Republicans, and we believe, most Democrats, do not share the pessimism of the 'World' and its candidates. Republicans sometimes criticize the adminstraton but they do not, as the 'World' says of Mr. Roosevelt, criticize the government. Neither do Republicans speak of Congress as a soviet of country lawyers, using the words as terms of contempt. The Republican party believes that the founders of the American form of government were wise in establishing a legislative branch composed of two houses, vesting in the legislative branch the sole power to levy taxes, declare war and confirm peace. The Republican party believes that the founders of the government acted wisely in providing for popular election of Congressmen and that the people also acted wisely in amending the Constitution by providing for popular election of Senators. The Republican party further believes that the people can be trusted to elect their representatives and that they have done fairly well in the exercise of that power. The Republican party believes that it is not only bad patriotism but bad morals to seek to arouse in the minds of the people contempt and suspicion for that branch of the government which has been and still is the guardian of liberty.

"Whether the present Congress is dominated by country lawyers is a question we shall not take time to determine. It may be said, however, that if the statement is true the country lawyers have reason to point to the fact with pride. This Congress cut two and a half billion dollars out of the demands of the Democratic administration and made possible future reductions of taxes in corresponding degree. This Congress passed a bill for restoration of the railroads to private management, for establishment of an American merchant marine, for development of idle water power, for rehabilitation of disabled soldiers, for encouragement of foreign trade under the Edge law, for punishment of profiteering, for deportation of alien reds, for development of oil lands under a leasing system, and for numerous other purposes tending to promote the public welfare. Moreover, the present Congress courageously resisted the effort of President Wilson and the 'World' to surrender American government to a super-state, and passed a peace resolution which President Wilson vetoed.

"If it be true that this Congress is controlled by country lawyers, we extend our compliments and congratulations to the legal lights from the rural districts."

CENTER HILL

Dear Editor:

Will you please allow me a small space in your most wonderful paper to say a few words

Health of this settlement is fine, and farmers are enjoying this nice weather to gather their crops.

Miss Maude Webb spent Sunday with Miss Larace Cobb.

Mr. Pat Lowery and Earl Sammons gave Misses Eula and Bessie Barnett a call Sunday afternoon.

Miss Beatrice Wells spent Sunday with Miss Nancy Sims.

Ex-Sheriff H. A. Harris has taken advantage of the reinstatement privilege offered by the State Department of Education to former teachers, and gone back into the harness as a member of our teaching force. We learn that he has already accepted the public school at Jemison and begun the session for this year. Several years ago Mr. Harris had the distinction of being one of the foremost teachers in Chilton county, having taught for a number of years in the best schools of the county. He will by no means be a stranger in school work now that he has decided to go back to it.

Senator Harding effectually disposed of the so-called Plumb plan of settling the railroad question by saying: "I do not believe America will consent to seize the righteously-owned property of any citizen to place it in the hands of another."

Senator Harding disposes of a much misunderstood matter, when he said that in the enactment of the Cummings-Esch law, Congress gave a six months' guarantee in wages to employees just as it gave a six months' guarantee of returns to the owners.

Let us drain out the swamps and marshes that surround Clanton, starve out the snakes and frogs, and put in their places great fields of corn and sugar cane. The wheel has started to roll. Put your shoulder to it and push. Don't think you are going to tag on and ride at the other fellow's expense. There is not going to be some riding and others walking in this drainage business. We are all going to keep our feet on the ground, our shoulders to the wheel and push, push, push!

With the creek swamps near Clanton drained out and the water running along in nice straight channels, and not spreading out lazily over all the fine rich level lands, we see a most glorious future for this town and the country close around. There will be hundreds of acres of growing corn and sugar cane in sight of the town where now the land is so wet and soft that it can't be used for pasturing cattle in some places. You can then ride into Clanton on the trains and look down the creek and oversee miles and miles of level land covered with black fields of corn where now your sight is obstructed by dense swamps growing over stale frog ponds. Instead of the lazy winding streams that now make the breeding places of millions and millions of mosquitoes and scarcely less of tadpoles, frogs and snakes, you will see pretty straight canals in which the water rushes with haste along its course to the river, not stopping and lazing along its journey to hinder the work of the farmers. We see a beautiful picture that will be realized in a very few years, we hope.

Many a Pretty Face Spoiled by Pimples

Not only are these pimples and splotches disfiguring, but they lead to serious skin diseases that spread and cause the most discomforting irritation and pain. Sometimes they foretell Eczema, boils, blisters, scaly eruptions and other annoyances that burn like flames of fire, and make you feel that your skin is ablaze.

If you are afflicted with this form of skin disease do not expect to be cured by lotions, ointments, salves and other local remedies, as they can not possibly reach the source of the trouble, which is in the blood. CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

Worn Down, Out of Heart

Georgia Lady, Worn-out and Tired, Tells How She Was Helped by Ziron Iron Tonic.

THE personal experience of Mrs. Nannie Phillips, of Powder Springs, Ga., is printed below in her own words:

"I was in a worn-out condition. My stomach was out of order. I didn't sleep well. I was tired all the time. I couldn't half eat, and didn't rest well at night.

"I would get out of heart and blue. I would feel like I was going to be down in bed. Yet I kept dragging around.

"We heard of Ziron, and from what I read, I was sure it wouldn't hurt me, if it didn't help me. But after taking it, I found it really helped me, and I sent back for more. I ate better, felt much stronger. I am sure Ziron is a splendid tonic."

Many people, who are worn down and disheartened, due to stomach disorders and nervous ills, find relief by toning up their blood with Ziron Iron Tonic.

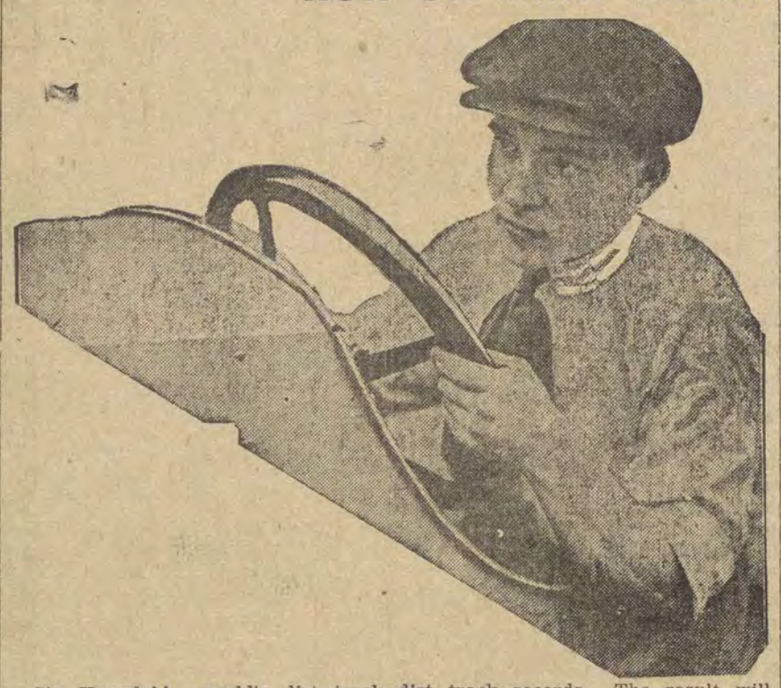
SINGING AT LIBERTY HILL

The County Singing Convention was held at Liberty Hill Church last Saturday and Sunday. It was a great success; attendance on Saturday was good, on Sunday it was simply enormous.



The young lady director caught the great crowd on Sunday. They were Miss Ida Scott of Verbena and Miss Era Sanders of Lomax.

Among the noted visitors were A. J. Langston of Perry, John W. Hays of Mobile, Attorney Blanton Riggins and J. H. Willoughby of Birmingham.

The hospitality of the people of Liberty Hill was unbounded. Our visit to that community will long be remembered with pelasure.

Nearly all parts of the county was represented.

REAL AUTO RACES TO BE RUN ON FAIR TRACK

Sig Haugdahl, world's dirt track champion, and a number of other famed drivers will enter thrilling speed contests at the Alabama State Fair, October 4 to 9. These speed demons will stage real races, not cut and dried affairs such as are frequently seen. Each man will be racing not only against his fellow racers, but against time, in an effort to lower dirt track records. The result will be highly spectacular, thrilling and altogether worth while for those who enjoy high-class speed events. These racers toy daily with death in its most terrible form—that of dying under the weight of their machines or perishing in the flames of ingited motor cars. The races will be worth while because they will be run by worth while racers.

FUTURE HOUSEWIVES' WORK TO BE AT THE FAIR

One of the most interesting exhibits planned for the Alabama State Fair, which will be under way at the Fair Grounds in West Birmingham October 4 to 9, will be the Jefferson County Girls' Club exhibit. It will be under the direction of Miss Marion Walker and through it the thousands of Alabamians who flock to the annual big state exhibition may learn just what the little women, the housewives of tomorrow, are doing toward learning to cook and sew and to get ready to take care of their own homes in the days to come.

A vast canning exhibit as well as an exhibition of needlework will be seen in the girls' club division. And there will be plenty of prizes for the small workers. The canning exhibit will be divided into four classes, that of the first year girls, that of the second year girls, that of the third year girls and that of the fourth year girls. The sewing and equipment exhibits will be divided into classes.

For the first year girls a $3 first prize, a $2 second prize and a $1.50 third prize will be offered for the best exhibits made up of one quart jar of tomatoes, one quart jar of soup mixture and one bottle of catsup or chili sauce.

In the second year girls' division similar prizes will be awarded for the best exhibits made up of one jar of chow chow or Dixie relish, one tin can of tomatoes, one jar of any kind of fruit and one exhibit of dried fruit or vegetables.

The third year girls will be offered similar prizes for exhibits consisting of one pint of fruit butter, one tin can of beans and one glass of jelly.

A number of prizes are to be distributed among the girls of the fourth year class. A first prize of $5, a second prize $3 and a third prize of $2 will be given for the best general exhibit, including preserves, jellies, canned fruits and vegetables. For the best two tin cans of tomatoes $3 will be given as first prize and $2 as second prize. The best peaches in glass jars will be awarded $3 as first prize and $1.50 as second prize. First and second prizes of $2 and $1 will be awarded for the best glass jar of vegetables, the best two glass jars of preserves, the best glass jar of soup mixture, the best glass jar of tomato pickle, the best glass jar of Dixie relish, the best quart bottle of fruit vinegar, the best exhibit of two varieties of vegetables.

Sweepstakes prizes of $10, $8 and $5 will be given the clubs having the greatest number of members receiving blue ribbons in these exhibits.

In the sewing exhibit the best club apron with emblem will draw first and second prizes of $2 and $1. The best club cap with emblem will receive first and second prizes of $1.50 and 75 cents. The best cup towel and holder will be given first and second prizes of $1 and 50 cents. For the best made over garment will be awarded first and second prizes of $2 and $1. Similar prizes will go for the best club luncheon set.

The equipment exhibit prizes will be awarded this way: For the best pair of cane packing paddles, $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the best menu using club products, $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the best club booklet (history of tenth-acre patch) $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the neatest record book, $1.50 first prize and 75 cents second prize; for the best home convenience exhibit, $3 first prize and $2 second prize.

Sweepstakes prizes of $8 and $4 will be awarded the club having the greatest number of members receiving blue ribbons in these exhibits.

SHOULTS

We are having some cool weather now, which reminds us that winter time is near at hand.

We regret to say that Miss Pearl Kelley, who has been sick for some time is not any better. The baby of Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun Garner is at this time very sick. There are several cases of "flu" around in adjoining communities.

Mr. Hart Walker and Miss Myrtle McAfee spent Saturday and Sunday at home; they returned to their school work at Centerville Sunday afternoon.

Miss Birdie Hall, who has had a position in Montgomery for some time, has given up the job and is now at Thorsby attending school.

Mr. Clarence Latham from Texas is at home for a few days. He has a position in Texas and is making good.

Mr. Wheeler Walker, who is flagging for the M. & O. Railroad is at home for a few days.

Next Saturday and Sunday is preaching day at Pleasant Grove. Every body come. Every member of this church is especially invited and urged to be present Saturday afternoon to call a pastor.

Our Sunday School is still improving . Mr. Howard Oden, the most efficient superintendent, makes some splendid talks every Sunday.

The sheriff was in this part of the county a week or two ago and captured two stills and a mixed blooded woman, and later we hear he arrested a white man. The people around here are beginning to wake up on this whiskey proposition. The Bible tells us that "The drunkard and glutton shall come to poverty."

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.
SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY.

The Solution of the Problem

To furnish the telephone service which will be needed in the state of Alabama during 1921, additional facilities must be constructed.

To build these facilities will cost $1,415,823.

The Company has no money with which to construct these facilities.

All new construction must be paid for out of the capital account of the Company; all of the Company's present capital is invested in the Company's business.

This money can be had in only one way; it must be invested in the Company's business.

This money can be had from only one source; from the investing public, people who have surplus money to invest.

Part of the investing public of this country live in Alabama.

These facilities are needed to serve the people of Alabama.

Will the investing public of Alabama furnish this money?

Every dollar the public of Alabama will invest in the Company will be used to construct plant facilities in the state of Alabama for the use of the people of Alabama.

If the investing public living in Alabama will not invest their surplus money in the Company's business, the Company must get the money needed to serve you from the investing public in other states; from strangers.

Can you expect strangers to invest their money in a business located in Alabama in which the people of Alabama will not invest their money?

The facilities now used by you were paid for by money furnished by strangers. They know what they are earning in Alabama while serving you just as you know.

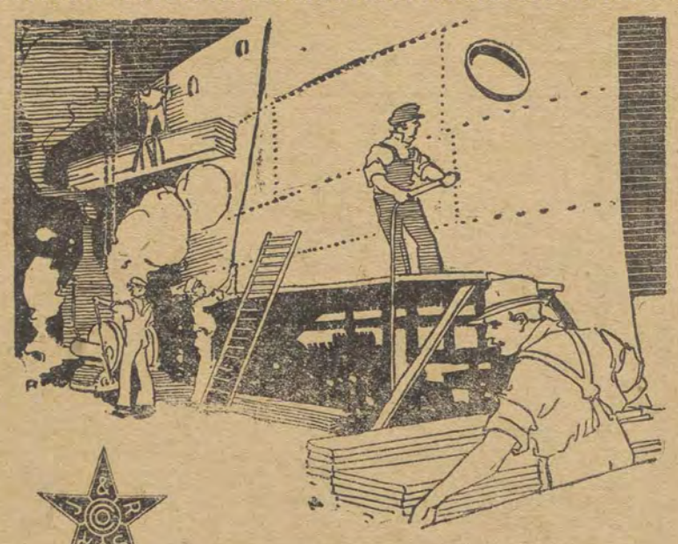
Can you ask or expect them to furnish more money for your use in Alabama under present conditions?

If the people of Alabama will not supply the money needed to serve themselves they must induce strangers to furnish it.

This can be done by allowing the stranger to earn a fair and just profit upon his money now invested in Alabama, serving you, and upon all additional money required to furnish you service.

This can be done in but one way: by paying fair and just rates.

When the Company is legally authorized to charge a rate which will yield a fair and just profit over and above the cost of furnishing you service in the state of Alabama, it can secure from strangers living in other states the money needed to furnish service to the state of Alabama.



The Company must have this right before it can get the money.

The people of Alabama must act first.

To have telephone service you must either invest your own money in the Company's business, or permit the Company to earn such a profit upon its present and future investment as will induce strangers to invest their money in the state of Alabama to serve you.

The next advertisement will tell what profit the Company asks to earn.

Low-Cost Mileage—in Goodyear Tires for Small Cars

There is no economy in buying so-called bargains in tires offered at sensationally cheap prices when a well-made tire delivers mileage at a considerably lower rate of cost.

Add the time and trouble occasioned by frequent replacements and it is fully apparent why tire users, seeking real mileage economy, are not attracted to very cheaply priced tires.

The popularity of Goodyear Tires, of the 30x3-, 30x3½- and 31x4-inch sizes, is based on the fact that they are built to deliver exceptional mileage at low cost and consistently do so.

If you own a Ford, Chevrolet, Maxwell, Dort or other car taking these sizes, go to your nearest Service Station for Goodyear Tires—for true Goodyear mileage, value, economy.

Today's Geography

Little Journeys to Places Figuring in World Events

Prepared by The National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C., for Department of Interior, Bureau of Education.

BATUM: CENTER OF CRUDE OIL AND CLASSIC STORY

Mingle an all-pervading odor or petroleum with the aroma of 1,000 years of history; picture the physical aspects of a Texas town of the gusher region, including puffing trains lumbering through the principal street amid a swarthy human content of Turk, Armenian, Georgian and Greek, and you get an idea of the incongruity of Batum.

Batum has grown like a mushroom within a generation because a pipe line poured precious oil through its Black sea port. It nestles at the foothills of a stream of history that parallels the pipe line and the 550-mile course of the railway to Baku, which links the Black sea to the Caspian, and passes such peaks of legend as the 18,000-foot Mt. Elburz, where Prometheus was bound to a rock as the vultures consumed his flesh.

From 1907 to 1911, inclusive, nearly one-fifth of the world's oil supply came from the Caucasus region, and in normal times Batum was credited with exporting more petroleum than any other port in the world. Batum won this boon by the natural advantage of a harbor ranked as one of the best in the world, despite the occasional storms that render its shelter treacherous.

The city came to its industrial own when it passed from Turkish dominion to Russian hands in 1878; but political troubles, even before the war bolts of 1914, affected its commerce. Before the World war a movement had been launched to boom Batum as a health resort. In that field it had some assets, despite its get-rich-quick anomalies and unkempt appearance, such as a climate where the foliage was thick in mid-winter, and its boulevards, shaded by palms, acacias and banana trees.

In 1903 Batum had an economic experience that affected it more deeply, perhaps, than political disturbances. It never recovered from the general strike of that year, which spread over the entire South Russia, and, in Batum, brought paralysis to business, suffering to citizens and palsy to progress.

Batum is built in a sort of amphitheater facing a beautiful bay. Wine was produced in the vineyards in its vicinity; and in the spring tons of strawberries were grown in the fields nearby. Both products were exported before the war. In those days automobiles, sewing machines, fireless cookers and writing materials passed its custom house on their way to the Caucasus or Persia.

WHAT'S IN SOME GEOGRAPHIC NAMES

Names of such women as Joan of Arc and Edith Cavell are written indelibly upon the hearts of people for all ages. Generous and well deserved tributes have been paid lastingly to others, but so much have their names become a part of our daily lives that many who frequently pronounce them are unmindful of their significance. Cities, rivers, provinces and islands bear the names of women of distinction.

Lady Franklin island, near Baffin island, in the arctic circle, is named for the wife of Sir John Franklin, the explorer who lost his life in first finding the Northwest passage through the great ice of the polar regions. There is perhaps no more beautiful story of untiring devotion and persistent effort than that of Lady Jane Franklin who, after the failure of many attempts, fitted out a ship which, though it brought back to her the definite proof of the loss of her husband's expedition, established his achievement of his object.

The picturesque stories of the little Indian princess Pocahontas always will hold a loved place in the hearts of American childhood. Counties in Iowa and West Virginia, villages in Bond county, Illinois, and Cape Girardeau county, Missouri, and in the Rocky mountains in Alberta, Canada, are named for her.

Queen Victoria's name is wrapped around the British empire from the capital of British Columbia, over the heart of Africa at Victoria Nyanza and Victoria falls, and beyond into the Queensland and Victoria in far-away Australia.

America, too, in its early days of colonization paid its tribute to the queens of the mother country and to the gracious ladies who braved the dangers of untried shores with their lords. Elizabeth, a cape in Maine, and Elizabeth City in Virginia, as well as the state itself, together with some 25 other places in the United States, bear the name of the clever, witty, versatile coquette, who took the dissension-torn England and whipped it into a place as a world power. Elizabeth Carteret, the charming wife of one of the aristocratic proprietors of New Jersey, shares with Queen Elizabeth some of the honors of the name. Elizabethtown, in North Carolina, and Elizabeth City, in New Jersey, are named for her.

The name of Clara Barton is perpetuated in Barton county, Kansas, and the wife of George Washington, who before her first marriage was Martha Dandridge, is honored in the town of Dandridge, Tenn.

Maryland and Virginia are fairly bespattered with the names of the queens and princesses of England, the state name of the former being taken from that of Queen Henrietta Maria, the wife of Charles I. Then, too, there are Annapolis, named for the wife of James I of England; and Anne Arundel and Caroline counties, in Maryland, called after the wives of two of the Calverts; Fluvanna county and the North Anna river in Virginia, named for Queen Anne; and Charlotte, Amelia and Caroline counties and Charlottesville, the home of the University of Virginia, all called for the wives and daughters of English kings.

Marietta, O., was named for the haughty, charming Antoinette. The Aleutian islands, off the coast of Alaska, when that territory was Russian, were known as Catherine archipelago, in honor of Catherine the Great. Ekaterinburg was named for the Russian Catherine who ruled Russia through her husband, Peter the Great.

VERA CRUZ: TRAVERSING A CONTINENT IN 75 MILES

"While fully aware of the high percentage of error most sweeping assertions contain, I nevertheless venture to claim that the country lying between the cities of Vera Cruz and Mexico City possesses more varied natural attractions than any other area of similar extent in the world."

This is the statement of Frank M. Chapman, in a communication to the National Geographic society concerning Vera Cruz, which figures so conspicuously in news dispatches from Mexico. Doctor Chapman continues:

"Be one student or tourist, there can be no question that one should enter Mexico from the gulf. A journey from the coast to the capital follows a natural succession of climatic zones as well as the sequence of early historic events.

"The day, indeed, should begin at sunrise, some hours before disembarking at Vera Cruz, with a hope that one may have the rare good fortune to see the first rays of the sun touch the summit of Mt. Orizaba, the first, as it will be among the most lasting, of one's impressions of Mexico. The shore is still some 30 miles distant, the mountain itself about 100 miles, and one is with difficulty convinced that the gleaming pink cloud high above the horizon is part of the still invisible earth beneath it. Doubtless the Aztecs were not familiar with this view of Mt. Orizaba, but from no other place is their name for it—Citlaltapetl (the Star Mountain)—so applicable.

"Time was when Vera Cruz was dreaded as a pest-hole, and trains at once took one from the steamer up the Sierras on the way to Mexico City, usually as far as Orizaba. Now, however, sanitary conditions and hotel accommodations have been so improved that one may stay here without danger or discomfort.

"In our journey from the gulf to the summit of the Sierras we pass through tropical, temperate and boreal zones—the Tierras Caliente, Templada and Fria of the native. Our actual journey, in passing from sea level to snowline, may be a matter of 75 miles, our change of altitude approximately three miles; but if we were to seek the Canadian zone not on mountain top but on the coast, it would be necessary for us to travel to Maine or Nova Scotia. In other words, a journey of some 1,500 miles would be required to reach conditions which are here distant but three altitudinal miles.

"It follows, then, that one can actually stand in a tropical jungle, where parrots, trogons, toucans, and other equatorial birds are calling from the liana-draped trees, and look upward to forests of pines and spruce, where crossbills, juncos, pine siskins, and evening grosbeaks are among the common permanent resident species.

"Later we may ascend the snows on Orizaba to discover at approximately what altitude the palms of the Tierra Caliente give way to the oaks of the Tierra Templada, to be in turn replaced by the spruce of the Tierra Fria."

QUACKS: ANCIENT AND MODERN

Do you regard cold cream as an ultra-modern palliative?

Or pure food and drug laws as a comparatively recent type of legislation?

Or the familiar "cure all" as an up-to-date quack device for the twentieth century credulous?

You are wrong, according to the statements contained in a communication to the National Geographic society from Dr. John A. Foote. A part of the communication states:

"Most people at some time or another use cold cream. It seems quite a modern luxury, indispensable alike to peer and peri, and adapted to many and varied uses. In fact, one traveler tells recently of having some of his cold cream eaten by a fat hungry valet in Germany. So we are inclined to regard it as a fairly modern product. And yet 'unguentum refrigerans,' cold cream, has come down to us from Roman days. The first formula is attributed to Galen, who lived and wrote in the second century. What we use today is practically the same, though 'Dr.' Galen's original formula was imitated and 'improved' hundreds of times.

"Emperor Frederick II. of Sicily, in 1240 or 1241, published the first pure food and drugs act. He was about 700 years ahead of Dr. Wiley, for he specified strict regulations of the standard of drug purity, and provided for drug inspectors, and fined all offenders.

"The practice of medicine was also regulated. A physician was required to have a diploma from a university before he could study medicine; then he took a three-year course in the school of medicine and one year practice under a practicing physician. Special post graduate work in anatomy was required if he was to do surgery.

"All this was in the so-called 'dark ages.' Even the fees of physicians and pharmacists were strictly regulated by law and were in purchasing value about the same as the charges of the present day. Physicians were not allowed to own drug stores and drug adulterators were severely dealt with.

"Mithradatium was the name of the great antidote of Roman pharmacy. It had from 40 to 50 vegetable ingredients, few of which had any real medicinal value except opium, and these drugs were blended with honey.

"It remained for Nero's physician, Andromachus, to put the finishing touches to this wonderful compound. Andromachus added viper's flesh to the formula and called his new compound Theriaca. He wrote some verses dedicated to Nero, describing this medicine and claiming virtues for it which in our day would subject him to prosecution. Evidently he believed he had created in this one compound a veritable pharmaceutical monopoly.

"Galen, one of the fathers of medicine, went even further. He recommended it as a cure for all poisons, bites, headaches, vertigo, deafness, epilepsy, apoplexy, dimness of sight, loss of voice, asthma, coughs, spitting of blood, tightness of breath, colic, the iliac passion (appendicitis), jaundice, hardening of the spleen, stone, fevers, dropsy, leprosy, melancholy, all pestilences, etc. Nowadays he would probably have included coupon thumb, golf shoulder and movie eye.

"As Galen's writings dominated medical thought for over 1,500 years, it is not surprising that this advertisement made Mithradatium, or Theriaca, a valued remedy. Every physician of note for centuries afterward claimed some improvement on the original formula."

SAGHALIEN: A LONG TIME POLITICAL PERPLEXITY

The island of Saghalien, recently subject of diplomatic correspondence between the United States and Japan, has been a political perplexity both to Russia and Japan for many years. Soon after the Pilgrim Fathers landed on the east coast of North America, a Japanese feudal baron dispatched an agent to this far northern island of the group that swings south from Siberia, at the mouth of the Amur, to Formosa and Fukien on the China coast. Within twenty years after that the Russians had landed on Saghalien.

The Japanese subsequently made several trips of inspection but a small handful of Russian colonists remained and today the majority of the permanent inhabitants of Saghalien are Russian, while to the Japanese it is little more than a summer fishing resort.

In 1853 Russia sent an ambassador to Nagaski and a band of troops to Saghalien. While the ambassador conducted negotiations the troops built a fortress but, after repeated attempts, the boundary question was still unsettled.

By 1875 the sea-going Japanese gave up all rights in Saghalien to the Russians in return for full rights in the Kurile islands and this condition of affairs continued until the Treaty of Portsmouth which gave southern Saghalien, up to the fiftieth parallel, to Japan.

Japanese Saghalien has little agricultural land but has large forests of both deciduous and evergreen trees, amounting to more than 8,000,000 acres. Japanese paper mills are situated in Otomari and elsewhere and an effort is being made to develop the papermaking industry.

But it is on fishing that the majority of the Japanese inhabitants depend for a living. As soon as the summer season is over the fishermen migrate to the southern islands of Japan for the winter. Mauka, on the west coast of Saghalien, is the center of the crab fisheries and much of the crab flake consumed in the Far East comes from this little town. A post road connects Mauka with Toyohara, which is the capital of Karafuto, the name which the Japanese have given to the southern part of Saghalien.

Saghalien has less than sixty miles of railway and white, red or blue lines are painted across the windows of the cars to prevent the people from trying to stick their heads through the glass.

The average annual temperature of Saghalien is near the freezing point and if the Japanese are ever to colonize the island they will have to change their methods of dressing and building.

Karafuto has much coal and there is considerable gold, but in the past the Russian residents have largely confined their efforts to farming and the Japanese to fishing.

Saghalien has not been developed to any great extent, but what natural development has taken place has been done more by the Russian exiles whose permanent homes were there than by the Japanese whose fishing camps and trading centers have dotted the shoreline.

Highway Improvement

TEST GOOD ROAD MATERIALS

Much Detailed Technical Information Secured in Experiments By Public Roads Bureau.

It is believed that the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, through its testing division has done more than any other single agency in developing the intelligent use of bitumens in road construction. For example, experiments conducted under service conditions by this bureau decided whether a soft stone could be used in bituminous macadam and bituminous concrete; whether rocks having a marked cleavage could be used to advantage in such construction; what quantities of bitumen give the best results when used as surface treatments on water-bound macadam and what kind of covering material and what quantities should be used in any case.

A large amount of detailed technical information valuable to highway engineers generally has been secured by the bureau in the course of its research and experimental work. The ability of the highway engineer to construct roads which would accommodate automobile traffic has, in no small degree, been the underlying reason that the automobile industry has developed to its present enormous proportions.

In 1916 the passage of the federal aid road act marked a new epoch in highway construction in the United States. The war then in progress emphasized the need of further developments in road building. The bureau has sought to keep well to the front in the solution of the new problems presented and is today conducting experiments and investigations of a fundamental character.

CARRYING PRODUCE TO CITY

Possibilities of Motortruck Only Touched as Yet—Improved Roads Will Assist.

About 20 per cent of motortrucks in the United States are owned by farmers, according to a well-informed motortruck official, but about 60 per cent of all the motortruck work is done in the country. It is announced that the expenditure in the United States for hard-surfaced highways during next year will be around $633,000,000 as compared with $125,000,000 during this year. The possibilities of the truck for carrying produce and supplies between farms and cities, is only touched as yet. The additional roads proposed will give added economy to motortruck transportation.

WORK GRADER OVER HIGHWAY

First Round Trip After Each Rain Should Be to Smooth Up Center and Remove Surplus.

The center of an earth road dries more quickly after a rain than do the sides. Therefore the first round trip over the road with a grader after each rain is on the center with the blade set at an angle that will move the surplus dirt ahead and out. This method smooths up the center first, where the traffic should travel and wishes to travel.

MUST USE PNEUMATIC TIRES

Norway Proposes Legislation to Prevent Damage to Improved Roads by Heavy Trucks.

Norway is the first country in the world to propose national legislation that will specify that motortrucks up to two tons capacity, must be equipped with pneumatic tires so as to prevent damage to roads and to cut down the excessive cost of highway repairs due to the use of solid tires.

Good Roads Fix Prices.

Roads in a large measure determine the character of agricultural activity, the markets its products may reach, which in turn fixes the prices of such products.

Plant Deserves Trial.

Biennial sweet clover is a pasture plant that deserves a trial in a small way on every farm.

Silage for Sheep.

Silage is rapidly coming to play an important part in the feeding of sheep.

Visitor Bound to Notify Big-Game Hunter That He Would Not Accompany Him.

He was a big-game hunter and he had inserted an advertisement in a morning paper asking if any man would accompany him to central Africa to shoot lions, rhinos, hippos, etc., the said companion to bear half the cost of the expedition.

Late that night or, rather at two o'clock the next morning, his household was awakened by a violent ringing of the front-door bell and a man was admitted who, to put it mildly, appeared to have been wining.

"Look here," explained the visitor, "I read your 'vertisement this mornin' and I was bound to come to you."

"Well," queried the hunter, "it's a bit late to talk business, but will you accompany me?"

"'Company you?" retorted the visitor. "No, shir. I called to tell you I'd shee you hanged first."

In Proportion.

"Why, is this your full stock of wedding rings?" the young man asked in surprise. "Only half a dozen—not enough to permit of any choice at all. Odd, when you have a couple of hundred engagement rings there in the case."

"Not odd—experience," the jeweler replied. "It'll take all those diamonds to work off these plain bands."

THE DAIRY

CLEANLINESS IS BIG ASSET

Duty of Every Dairy Farmer to See That Output Is Wholesome—It Lessens Complaints.

Farmers who produce clean milk possess a business asset the value of which many do not fully appreciate. The public is better informed, by far, than it was a few years ago regarding the value of pure milk as a food. It knows more of the dangers of unclean milk. Therefore, as a business proposition as well as from a sense of duty, every farmer owning milk cows should see to it that the output is wholesome.

Clean milk benefits not only the consumer but the milk producer as well. Most producers of market milk have experienced the chagrin of having a shipment of milk refused or returned because it reached the market sour, tainted, or otherwise in poor condition. Although such milk may be used for feeding pigs, it usually is a complete loss to the producer, since the cost of transportation back to the farm usually exceeds its value.

Frequently, also, the producer depends on a certain market as an outlet for his milk and has no means for utilizing small quantities at uncertain intervals, even if he had it at the farm. Another important consideration is that unpleasant effect which the receipt of sour, tainted, or otherwise unsalable milk has upon the purchaser. Delivering milk of that kind usually results in the loss of the confidence of the dealer, or, if it is delivered directly to the consumer, the loss of customers.

Clean milk means fewer complaints, a better class of patrons, and a steady market for the product. Carelessly produced and improperly handled milk may be the means of spreading disease. Every owner of a dairy herd should consider it his duty to himself and to the community to keep only healthy cows, supply them with wholesome feed, and keep them in clean, comfortable quarters. The milkers and all who handle milk should realize that they have in their charge a food which is easily contaminated and should take every reasonable precaution to keep it clean.

PREPARATIONS REPEL FLIES

Fish Oil Is Principal Ingredient in Several Mixtures Recommended for Stock.

While there are various preparations on the market designed to keep flies from cows or other live stock, the farmer can make a good fly repellent by using any of the following mixtures: Fish oil, 3 parts; kerosene, 1 part. Fish oil, 100 parts; oil of tar, 50 parts; crude carbolic acid, 1 part. Fish oil, 1½ pints; kerosene, 1½ pints; resin, 1½ pounds; laundry soap, 2 cakes. Mix thoroughly and add enough water to make 3 gallons. Fish oil, linseed oil, or kerosene, 1 pint; coal tar dip, 1 pint; laundry soap, 1¼ bar; hot water, 15 pints. Mix thoroughly so as to form an emulsion. The fish oil is the principal ingredient that repels the flies.

Either a brush or a hand-sprayer can be used to apply any of these mixtures. The sprayer will be more convenient. Applications will have to be made at frequent intervals to be effective.

The result is, thousands of dollars have been lost by lumbermen in this section.

Support Pledged To Port.

Montgomery.—Permanent organization of the Alabama Waterways Association, with P. T. Shanks, of Selma, its first president, was perfected here following a convention attended by several hundred prominent men in civic and official life of the State. A vice-president from each congressional district also was chosen. As its first obligation the association is pledged to the development of the port of Mobile, through obtaining ratification of an amendment to the Alabama constitution, authorizing the state to lend its credit for the development of modern terminal and port facilities at that point, which will be voted upon November 2nd.

Full Investigation Promised.

Mobile.—Postal officials at Washington have promised a full investigation of complaints made against the recently inaugurated railway mail service between Mobile and points on the eastern bay shore, according to advices received by Postmaster J. Blocker Thornton, of Mobile. The railway mail service was substituted for the boat service a few weeks ago, on account of the fact that the boats asked more money when the contract was to be renewed. Eastern shore residents and business houses in Mobile have complained that the railway service is not as satisfactory, as the mail must go to Bay Minette and then be carried through the country to the coast towns. This takes a much longer time for the mail to reach its destination, it is claimed.

Gas Rate Case Heard.

Mobile.—The hearing on the petition of the Mobile Gas Company for an increase in the price of gas furnished Mobile consumers was held here before S. P. Gallilard, member of the Alabama Public Service Commission. Other members of the commission on account of work at Montgomery, were unable to be present at the hearing, but the testimony will be submitted to them and the petition acted upon by the entire commission. The company submitted figures tending to show that only in five months since early in 1917 has it cleared operating expenses and interest on its floating indebtedness. A petition signed by about 500 consumers protesting against the increase and asking that the company be required to improve the heating quality of the gas was filed.

Fee System Desired.

Mobile.—A bill designed to restore the offices of tax collector and assessor of Mobile County to the fee system, has been introduced in the Alabama legislature by D. B. Cobbs, representative from Mobile. According to a bill passed at the last session these officials were put on salaries of $4,000 a year when the county failed to show a population of 100,000 in the recent census. The bill, which is said to have been designed for Montgomery County, it was not thought would affect Mobile, as it was believed that the population would go well over 100,000. The tax officials had a recount made at their own expense in the effort to prove to the census officials that several thousand people had been omitted.

Tax Value Raised.

Anniston.—The first appeal by a property holder in Calhoun county from adjustment made by the county tax adjuster resulted in a higher valuation being placed upon the complainant's property. The adjuster had valued the farm at Weaver at $5,400. Bradley appealed to the county commissioners, claiming the adjuster's figure unfair. The commissioners investigated the case and raised the figure to $7,200 R. H. Hobbs, the county adjuster, stated that the utilities tax in the county has been advanced to $4,000,000(the property valuation being placed at $20,000,000 as against $18,500,000 last year. No appeals from decisions of the adjuster have been made previous to that Monday.

On arrival at the home of Collins, a paty of men informed Collins of their intention, but Collins would not permit them to get possession of Windham until they had promised not to kill him, it is said. Relying on their promise, Collins surrendered Windham, who was afterwards lynched by the mob in a river swamp.

SOMETHING JOB NEVER DID

Possibly an Experience Like Mr. Brown's Would Have Shattered His Reputation for Patience.

Filled with pride, Mr. and Mrs. Brown started out for a drive in their new motorcar. Mrs. Brown was hoping the neighbors were watching, but her husband was too busy steering to hope about anything.

Alack! Before they reached the end of the road the car stopped, and stayed that way with a mule-like persistency. Mr. Brown tried every lever and handle in turn. Then he got down from his seat and began to investigate.

Presently he lay down and crawled underneath the car until only his number nines were left visible. In a few moments the car gave a sudden jolt and then stopped, and a terrible flow of language, more forcible than polite, became audible.

"Oh, John," exclaimed the wife, in horrified tones, "don't swear so! Have patience, like Job did."

"Job," shrieked Mr. Brown, in a stifled voice. "Job would have sworn, too, if he'd been underneath this beastly car with his mustache caught in a cogwheel."

Untipped.

HOLY CITY AS IT IS TODAY

Redeemed but Waiting to Be Clothed in Raiment That Is but Her Just Due.

It is well, as we leave the gentle allurement of flowers in the Garden of Gethsemane and turn toward the city, that our hearts have first been filled with serene joy, writes William D. McCracken in Asia magazine. We regard the fearfully tried city with something of the compassion that the Master felt for it. Seventeen times destroyed—bitterly hated—anxiously sought—how desperate a history since Nebuchadnezzar captured it more than twenty-five centuries ago. And only the other day, it seems, at Christmas time in 1917, Jerusalem was captured again, this time by its friends, the British after an agreement with the Turks that the city itself should not be bombarded. There was some fighting on the Mount of Olives, and reconnoitering airplanes dropped a bomb or two in and about the Garden of Gethsemane. But Jerusalem had been captured for the last time, and the last offensive was devoid of evil.

Redeemed today, but in her nakedness. Jerusalem waits to be clothed. She has as yet no grace, no covering for her ugly wounds. Some day her sides will glisten with the brightness of a heavenly radiance; she will be washed and anointed like a bride waiting for the bridegroom.

SOCIETY

Mrs. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Polly Anna Club Meets.

Mrs. Barney Roberts delightfully entertained the members of the Polly Anna Club Wednesday afternoon at her home. Bright summer flowers were used advantageously throughout the apartments. The evening was spent in doing fancy works of different kinds, after which a delicious salad plate was served to about fifteen guests.

Miss Kathleen Mullins Hostess

One of the most delightful affairs of the summer was a dinner party given Monday evening, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Mullins, when Miss Kathleen Mullins celebrated her twentieth birthday.

The home was never more attractive. On entering the dining room a scene of unsurpassed beauty greeted the guests. The table so artistically decorated in nasturtiums and maiden hair ferns was perfct in every detail, the color motif being carried out also in mints in minute yellow baskets tied with yellow ribbon marking the place cards of eight guests. A delicious five-course dinner was served. Those enjoying this hospitality were Misses Leona Pipes, Roberta Curry, Mary Sue Mullins, Maud Mullins, Alice Stanfield, Messrs George Walker and John DeRamus.

Fan Tan was the diversion of the evening, while music was rendered on the Edison throughout the evening. The hostess was assisted by Mrs. R. E. Luckie and Mrs. Watts Moore.

The E. C. Maye S. S. Class will hold their regular monthly social and business meeting with Mrs. Simpson on Friday at 3 o'clock.

Prof. Clarke was a visitor to Birmingham last week.

Womans Missionary Meets

A business session of the Womens Misionary Union of the Methodist Church was held Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. C. Jones. An interesting feature of the evening was a hose shower for Vashti. The social service pragramme was most enjoyable, being in charge of Mrs. Fox. All circles reported actively and good reports made. An ice course was served to a large attendance.

One of the most enjoyable social events of the past week was a spend the day party given by Mrs. R. E. Luckie on last Wednesday.

The entire apartments were made bright by pretty vases of nasturtiums and pot plants.

At the noon hour a lovely dinner was enjoyed. The central table decorations also were nasturtiums.

In the afternoon bridge was enjoyed when an ice course was served to Mrs. McSwain, Mrs. Macy Jones, Mrs. Simpson, Mrs. Moore, Miss Kathleen Mullins, Miss Roberta Curry and Miss Leona Pipes.

Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Pipes have returned home after a two-weeks stay in Kentucky and Virginia.

Miss Kathleen Mullins left Monday for Shorters College in Rome, Ga., where she will resume her school duties.

Miss Sallie Johnson left Sunday for Birmingham and will be a student of the Lula Compton Seminary.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Chestnut of Birmingham motored down for the week end with friends and relatives.

Mrs. Hugh Jones has returned home from a visit to Atlanta and Montgomery.

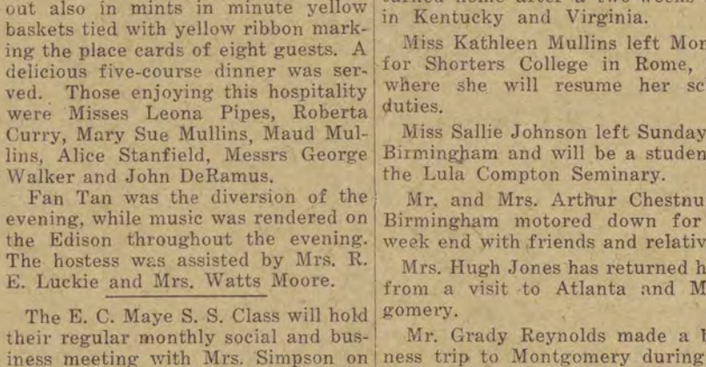
Mr. Grady Reynolds made a business trip to Montgomery during the past week.

SERVICES AT FRIENDSHIP

Next Sunday and Sunday night is the time for regular preaching services at Friendship Church, near here. Rev. W. P. Lowery, the pastor, will preach, and all who can are urged to attend.

At 10 o'clock Sunday morning baptising will be held at the church pool on the highway near the church.

Prayer services are held at this place every Sunday night, and there are always good crowds in attendance. At the service last Sunday night it was decided that a Sunday School be organized before preaching begins next Sunday night. So everybody interested in this movement are asked to be present.



Mr. Jim Rasberry spent the week end in Birmingham.

It contains only such ingredients as have been officially endorsed by the U. S. Pure Food Authorities. An absolute guaranteethat it is pure.

It received highest Awards, World's Pure Food Exposition, Chicago — Paris Exposition, Paris, France—positive proof of its superior merit.

It is used by more housewives and domestic scientists than any other brand.

It is sold at a moderate price. All you have to do is to compare costs to determine how much you can save by buying Calumet.

Black-Draught Is The Best Medicine This Lady Ever Used. Says It Is Only Medicine She Gives Her Children.

Cherry Village, Ark.—In telling of her experience with Thedford's Black-Draught, Mrs. Lottie Ellis, R. F. D. No. 1, this place, said: "I used Black-Draught as a laxative, also for headache, torpid liver and indigestion. It is the best liver medicine I have ever used and is the only medicine I give my children.

"I feel like it has saved me a lot in doctors' bills, for when the children complain of feeling bad or have a cold, I just give them a good dose of Black-Draught and they soon get all right. It certainly cleans the liver and clears up the skin and they are soon out, well again. I wouldn't be without it for anything."

Seventy years of successful use has made Thedford's Black-Draught a standard, household remedy. Every member, of every family, needs, at times, the benefit that Black-Draught gives in helping to cleanse the system and to prevent or relieve the troubles that come from constipation, indigestion, and a lazy liver.

To keep well, your stomach, liver and bowels must be in good working order. To help keep them that way, take occasional doses of Thedford's Black-Draught. Thousands of homes are never without it.

SOME THINGS ABOUT SENATORIAL FIGHT

Clanton, Ala., Sept. 28, 1920.

Editor Union-Banner:

Several have asked me to speak in this county before the election, and I am anxious to make as many speeches as I can, but I am a candidate for U. S. Senator against Senator Underwood, and nearly all my time is taken up in other parts of the State. However, I will be in my office some between now and the election and shall be glad to have any voter who will to come in and talk with me. I will also make as many speeches in this county as I can.

I have just returned from north Alabama, where I have been speaking mostly in Democratic counties. I have been having large crowds at speakings and the people seem to be interested everywhere I go. I believe that 80 per cent of the Democrats are opposed to the League of Nations. I find the people everywhre opposd to this country being tied up with Europe, and being obligated to send our boys back to Europe to fight the battles of those whom we are not really interested in. I have heard every Democratic speech that I could since the campaign opened and about all I can get out of what the leading Democrats want is to help Europe. I think it is time for the American people to think about the needs of America.

The speculators boldly took away a cotton crop from us in 1914, and from all appearances now it seems that the same thing is likely to be done this year. It seems to me that when conditions are such that a few coton seed oil crushers can meet in Montgomery and fix the price of cotton seed, as was done a few days ago, and when the price of sugar can be raised from 12 1-2 cents to 25 cents in one night, as was done some time ago, that it is time for our government officials to give us more than a moment of their time in this country.

I believe the Democratic party has completely forgotten this country. It seems to me that President Wilson has no thought of America for the last twelve months. Since the war was over he has given his entire thought to Europe and if the League of Nations is adopted it means to mortgage every boy in this country, as well as every dollar we have, to foreign power, and the mortgage can be foreclosed at any time the members of the League want it closed.

I think this country has done enough for Europe, but she is not satisfied, so I say, let her strew her own ingratitude, for we have our own difficulties to look after. I am for AMERICA FIRST and stand for America's boys, for I would not give one American boy for the whole of Europe.

We have gotten along splendidly without a League since our independence was won. In fact, we have boasted that our people have more liberties than any other nation in the world and this is because we are free and independent.

It has been the law of our land for 144 years that we could not declare war on any other country without the consent of our Congress and Senate, but now President Wilson has forgotten our people and wants to transfer the power of declaring war to the League of Nations, where there will be 32 votes, and a majority of them negroes. England has six votes and the U. S. has one. (I think it would be well for our people to remember how England treated us when we were a colony of her, and to consider what she would do for us again if she had a chance). Just think of such nations as Liberia, with population of 2,000,000 and all of the dark and mixed race, and 98 per cent of them total illiterates; also South Africa having a population of 5,000,000 and most of them negroes, and each of these countries have the same vote that the U. S. has, and we have a population of 110,000,000 and a large majority of whites.

It seems to me that President Wilson is willing to sacrifice America just to get to be president of the League of Nations, so that he can preside over the destinies of the entire world. But from the way people talk I do not think that he will get to do this, for Senator Harding says that if he is elected he will stay out of the Legaue, and Governor Cox says if he is elected that he will go in, and even the Democratic papers admit that they think Senator Harding will be our next President. So I hope that we will never have a League of Nations but that America will still be free to act in all matters as she has been since her government was established, and I am going to ask that we remember what George Washington said: "Stay out of the Entangling Alliances of Europe."

In conclusion, I want to say that I am making the best fight I can for U. S. Senator. I expect to meet as many people as I can between now and the election. I have sent out over 20,000 pieces of literature and have spoken in fifteen counties. I will go to the southern part of the State the 11th of October and will speak in several counties before I return.

I hope the people of Chilton will roll up the largest majority for the Republican party that they have ever given it. I hope all the ladies will register and vote, for now it is a law, whether they want it or not, and I hope they will exercise the right of suffrage in such a manner as to prove that they are not going to vote just as their husbands do but that they will vote their convictions. And if this is done, they will revolutionize politics in Alabama.

Remember that this county has a chance to help elect a U. S. Congressman. Judge A. P. Longshore is a candidate and it seems that the Seventh District has a good chance to send a Republican Congressman. If we could send two Republican Congressmen to the U. S. Congress in Washington this year it would put Alabama on the map and attract the attention of the powers at Washington, and we would get something from our national government.

Let's lay down our prejudice and vote our convictions. If we do this Harding will carry Alabama and we will send Judge Longshore to Congress from this District.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

H. G. WILLIAMS LEAVES FOR BAPTIST SEMINARY

The following item is taken from the Tuscaloosa News, of Monday, the 13th of September, and will be of interest to the many friends of Rev. Williams in Clanton and in Chilton County.

"Rev. H. G. Williams, for the past year one of the Assistant Pastors of the First Baptist Church, left for his mother's home in Clanton this morning. After a week's visit there he will go to Louisville, Ky., where he will enter the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary for a three-years course of study.

"Tuscaloosa yields this consecrated young pastor with genuine regret, and he will be sorely missed from the circles of the First Baptist Church where he has done a noble work. During the brief year of his connection with the church the contributions of the people amounted to an average of $500 per Sunday, and an addition of 182 members for the whole period. His untiring efforts had much to do with this remarkable record, according to the statement of Pastor Dawson, and others who are in position to know the facts."

Rev. Williams, better known as Greeley, is another product of Chilton County to whom we point with much pride. He started out in the ministry here some years ago just a lad, determined to preach the Gospel as called upon to do by the Divine Spirit. We remember well when he was a student at the public school in Clanton, he took particular delight in preaching sermons to his fellow students as they assembled in the yard every morning before "books". Greeley would secure Prof. Monroe's Bible, take his stand on the upper front porch of the old school building, adopt some suitable text, and shout forth and earnest and heartfelt appeal to his companions admonishing them to strive to live and to walk in the straight and narrow path.

Rev. Williams has already finished his course at Howard College and now goes to the Seminary to put on the finishing touch. We wish him success, and long to see him through with his schooling so that he can get right down to business with his real preaching. When he does you are going to hear from him as one of the greatest preachers of his time.

SPECTACLES

I. T. Garner, Optometrist, will be at B. L. Jones Store in Clanton on second Monday and Tuesday in each month, at Verbena on the following Monday and at Jemison the following Thursdays. 9-30-2t

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to thank our many and loving friends for their kindness shown us during the sickness and death of our precious darling son.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Sanders.

PEOPLE ARE URGED TO MEET THE COUNTY TAX OFFICERS

The annual rounds of the Tax Assessor and Collector for Chilton County will be made next month, in which time they will visit every precinct in the county. It is quite appropriate just now that we urge all the people to take notice of the dates when these officers will be in your precinct, and meet them there and transact your tax matters at that time and be done with it for this year.

Under the present tax laws it is the duty of the head of each family to meet the Tax Assessor on the day of his appointment in their Beat and turn in a complete list of all property owned, WHETHER TAXABLE OR EXEMPT, and save the cost of any fees.

Particular notice should be taken of the above. All property must be given in to the Assessor, whether it is taxable property or not. Do not think just because you have no taxable property that you do not have to give it in to the Assessor.

A good plan would be for every head of a family right now to make a list of all the property owned on the first day of October, and put it down on a memorandum book in good order so that the list may be all fixed up and ready for the Assessor when he comes. Put down everything, no matter what it is. You will only have to pay tax on that which is taxable under the law.

The extra fees for those who do not give in their taxes and have to be taken up as escapes will be a considerable amount, and it could be saved by being on hand the day of the appointment in your Beat and make the assessment. If the Assessor has to go back and get up an assement of a man who ecaped, all his property both taxable and exempt is taxed for five years back.

PROVIDENCE, BEAT 16

Editor Union-Banner:

I will write a few lines again from this place.

We have just closed one of the most successful meetings we ever had at our church. Our pastor, Rev. W. W. Robinson, with the help of Rev. M. J. Parrish, did some of the ablest preaching we have ever heard at this place. They did some real gospel preaching which resulted in the addition of 22 new members in our church. We believe this is the real price they were working so hard for. We believe our church is revived in the true sense. At the close of our meeting we took up a collection and gave our visiting preacher $22.50.

We also have a B. Y. P. U. organized here, which is being well attended. Our Sunday School is progressing nicely.

I believe we ought to look after our political affairs, as far as that is reasonable, but we ought not to forget our Christian duties for any thing else, for the Lord said, "First seek ye the Kingdom of Heaven and all things will be added unto you." Now, understand me, I am not fighting the political leaders at all. I am in favor of the men doing all we can to help our women to get ready to vote. Let's carry them and let them register, and then carry them to the polls with us on election day. We will have to do this in order to defend what we believe to be true and right.

I will close for this time.

R. M. ROBINSON.

—14—

While I was debating the situation in my cell, a keeper opened the door.

"You're wanted downstairs," he announced.

"What is it?" I asked, wonderingly.

"You've got a visitor."

"Who?" I questioned eagerly. Could it, I wondered, be Barbara? Had my sternly repressed longing to see her in some way communicated itself to her through the ether and impelled her to throw caution to the winds and come to the prison to see me?

"I don't know," the keeper answered. "It's a man. I don't know who he is."

A man. Who could it be? In all the monotonous time I had been behind the bars, only two men had come to see me, Gorman and McGregor. It could not be either of them, for both were well known to the prison attendants. As I hastened down the long corridor past the dismal row of barred doors, I was revolving in my mind the possibilities of my caller's identity.

Who could it be? Spurred on by my curiosity, I hastened into the counsel room. There sat my great-uncle Rufus.

He looked in much better physical condition than when I had last seen him, more vigorous and healthier. His skin was browned from exposure to the sun and wind, and his eyes were clearer and brighter. As I studied his face I could trace no vestige there of the terrible fear that had seemed to obsess him on the last occasion of our meeting.

For a moment we eyed each other without speaking. I was wondering—and well I think I might—whether the suspicions I had at times in regard to him had been wholly without foundation. Could it be possible that the crafty, miserly old chap was the master mind at the bottom of all the mystery and plotting? As my previous suspicions came up in my mind I determined to be wary in what I said to him. The fires of anger toward him began to kindle within me as I looked at him. I felt that it was his fault that I was locked up here.

Meanwhile he had been studying me. His keen old eyes had surveyed me from head to foot, returning to rest fixedly on my face, as though he was trying to read my thoughts. I wondered what was passing in his mind. Was he inwardly chortling at the plight in which he found me? Was he distressed to see a blood-relative behind the bars? Did he believe that I was guilty of the murder of Daisy Lutan? How had he learned of my arrest? What was his purpose in coming to see me? But his expression was unfathomable, so far as I was concerned.

He was the first to speak.

"So—you didn't do it, did you?"

"Of course not," I retorted indignantly. "Did you suspect that I was a murderer?"

He shook his head disparagingly, smiling an inscrutable smile.

"The evidence against you certainly looks convincing."

"I don't care," I exclaimed with heat. "I'm as innocent of the killing of Daisy Lutan as"—I hesitated—"as you are."

He nodded his head approvingly.

"There, there, boy, don't get excited. Of course I know you are innocent. You're of the Gaston blood, and there never was a Gaston that was a murderer or a lawbreaker. I never suspected you for a single second. I was off in the Maine woods twenty miles from a railroad. I didn't see a newspaper until day before yesterday evening. My eye just happened to catch a paragraph about the Granddeck. It was about your trial for the murder of Miss Lutan being set for next week. That was the first I had heard about it. I traveled all night to get to you."

My feelings toward him underwent a sudden revulsion. There was every evidence of sincerity in his manner. The knowledge that he believed in me was the most welcome news I had heard since my incarceration.

"We'll soon have you out of here," he went on, "now that I am here to help you. I got you into this, and I'll get you out of it if it takes every cent I possess. There's more than one fight left in old Rufus yet. Now start at the very beginning and tell me everything that has happened since I have been away."

What a relief it was to talk freely! With my mind once and for all cleared of all suspicion toward my old great-uncle, I began my story. Somehow the tie of blood is strong in time of trouble. I found it vastly easier to talk with my aged relative than it had been with either Gorman or my lawyer.

I began with my chance meeting with Barbara Bradford in the park as the blackmailers awaited her there. I told everything that had followed with the utmost detail, even to such small matters as my first meeting with Wick and the undue curiosity he had exhibited as to my acquaintance with the Bradfords. I recited the story of my unaccountable discharge in disgrace from my position and told of Gorman's unavailing efforts to learn the reason.

"The day I was discharged," I went on, "I had drawn out from the savings bank all my money with the purpose of sending it to my mother to whom I was in debt. I still had it with me when I arrived home at the apartment and I decided to put it in the wall safe, to which, you recall, you had given me the combination. Out of mere curiosity"—I made this confession with a blush of shame—"I had inspected the contents of the safe the day of my arrival and had examined the two caskets. The minute I opened the safe this second time I saw that it had been looted."

"What," exclaimed my great-uncle, starting from his seat, "not the pearls!"

I nodded.

"Everything. The casket with the pearls was gone. The other with the trinkets was undisturbed."

"Good heavens!" he exclaimed. "My wife's pearls stolen! Why, boy, I paid a hundred and fifty thousand dollars for that string. Tell me everything about it—everything, at once."

I could only repeat what I had told him already. When I had opened the safe on Sunday the pearls were there. When I had opened it again on the following Saturday the pearls were gone.

"Of course you told the police at once."

I explained to him why I had not done so, and my reason seemed to satisfy him.

"Go on with your story," he calmly directed. He seemed to have himself well in hand again. After the first shock at hearing of the loss of the pearls he showed no sign of emotion or displeasure.

He listened intently as I told him of my second meeting with Barbara Bradford when I had learned that the Bradford wall safe had been looted, too, and the papers abstracted concerning the annulment of Claire's first marriage. He nodded his head slightly when I told him of the anonymous notes found on the floor in both apartments.

"Did you hear the whispers, too?" he questioned.

"Yes," I answered, "I heard them several times. Barbara has heard them, and the laundress, too."

A look of unspeakable relief came over his face.

"I'm glad to know that others have heard them besides myself. When a man gets old his nerves sometimes play him strange pranks. The whispers seemed so unreal and incredible that I feared that I was suffering from the hallucinations of old age. Now that I know that the whispers are real, there is nothing to fear."

"And," I observed, "I believe, I am almost positive, I can explain the origin of the whispers."

"Tell me," he cried, his manner now entirely changed. He seemed elated at discovering that his brain was still dependable. It was as if a burden had suddenly been lifted from him.

Here was my opportunity. Gorman had utterly refused to credit my story of a secret passage and had ridiculed it. There had been no way that I could prove it, nor was it possible for Gorman to have investigated the walls of the Granddeck, even if he had placed any credence in my story. With my great-uncle it was different. As the occupant of the apartment he would have every right and opportunity to explore and verify my statements. I told him how, while speculating as to the origin of the whispers, I had observed the discrepancy in the measurements of the apartment and had verified my deduction that there was space enough for a passageway big enough for a man to traverse in the wall between the room I had occupied and the long hall. He listened intently as I described the plan of the rooms in detail and nodded his approval.

"And what is more," I added triumphantly, "Barbara Bradford and I had just discovered an opening into it by pushing the wall panel in my room back and then sliding it along. We were inspecting it when we heard the shot in the apartment below. I closed the panel and ran downstairs and have had no opportunity since to investigate, but I am sure the passage is there. I am convinced that it was the sound of voices there that made the whispers. I suspect it was used by whoever left the anonymous notes in the room, and that the person or persons who looted the safes entered and escaped by that means. I would not be surprised if it was not by means of this passageway that the murderer of Miss Lutan escaped, after he had left his revolver in the drawer of my dresser."

My great-uncle shook his head perplexedly.

"It sounds improbable—too much like a romance. They do not build modern apartment buildings with secret passageways. Space is far too valuable, and besides, all plans have to be filed with the city's bureau of buildings."

"But it's there," I cried desperately. "I saw it. Barbara Bradford saw it."

"Well," he comforted me, "we will soon find out about it. I have many matters to attend to today, but tomorrow I shall go up to the apartment, and if there is such a passageway I shall find it and see where it leads."

"Then you are not staying in the apartment?"

"No, I shall remain at a hotel until my wife returns."

At this juncture a prison attendant approached and informed him that the time of his visit was up. Imperiously my great-uncle waved the man away. Somehow the possession of great wealth carries with it a manner of expecting obedience from every one that generally is successful. The man withdrew, muttering to himself and left us undisturbed.

"Now tell me about the murder," Mr. Gaston directed.

Concisely I stated the facts as I knew them. It was a shock to him to hear that at least two of the trusted attendants at the Granddeck, Wick and the telephone girl, were of the criminal class.

"Tut, tut, tut," he exclaimed. "Just think of it! That's the worst of living in a big city. You never know what sort of people there are about you. I'll call up Mr. Kent, the owner of the building, this afternoon and have him get rid of them at once."

"Please don't," I cried. "Gorman and I are both convinced that Wick and the girl know something about the murder. Don't do anything to let them know that they are under suspicion. So long as they are employed at the Granddeck we know where to lay hands on them when we want them."

"That's so," he admitted. "I'll say nothing for the present. As I won't be living there until after this is cleared up, it can make no difference. But, look here, young man, why doesn't this Bradford girl come forward and clear you of this charge? She was with you at the time. She knows you didn't do it."

"You're a Wonderful Liar, You Are," Was His Surly Greeting.

"Because I will not permit her to do so," I replied with heat. "I love Barbara Bradford!"

"That's it, is it?" he commented, giving me a quizzical glance from under his bushy white eyebrows.

"I wouldn't for all the world," I continued, "have her mixed up in this. Her sister is to be married tomorrow, and the scandal might stop the wedding; and besides I'm not going to have it known that she was there alone with me that night in my rooms. I love her too well for that. Some day I am going to ask her to be my wife."

He raised his eyebrows.

"And on what do you expect to marry?" he inquired.

"Of course I have said nothing as yet," I hastened to explain; "I've nothing to offer her."

"No," he agreed, "you've nothing to offer her"—and then with a meaning glance he added a little word that in spite of my predicament made my heart sing with joy and stirred my expectations mightily—"you've nothing to offer her—yet.

"But cheer up," he advised as a parting word of counsel, "I'll get in touch with Gorman and your lawyer as soon as I leave here today, and tomorrow we will find out about that secret passage you think you have discovered."

Compunction that I ever had doubted the integrity of his purpose toward me smote as he departed. I tried to think of something to say to express my gratitude to him, to let him know how much I appreciated his coming at once to my aid, but the only thing I could think of slipped from my lips:

"I am sorry about the pearls."

"So am I," he answered grimly, and went his way.

One thing now I certainly was sure of—his was not the master-mind that had planned all the criminal deeds, but the mystery of the Granddeck was still as much of a mystery as ever.

CHAPTER XII.

It was the second day after this—the day set for Claire Bradford's wedding—that in the morning, much earlier than customary, Gorman came to the prison to see me.

I met him jubilantly. My uncle's unexpected return to the city and his generous and convincing offers of aid had filled me with new hopes. I trusted, too, that old Rufus' keen eyes quickly would discover the secret passageway now that I had indicated to him where to look for it. I was confidently expecting that the resulting developments quickly would free me from even the suspicion of being a murderer. The minute, however, that I laid eyes on Gorman I knew that something had gone wrong.

"What is it?" I cried. "What's the matter now?"

"You're a wonderful liar, you are," was his surly greeting, "with your pipe dreams about secret passageways and stolen pearls."

"What do you mean?" I replied. I had not the least idea what he was getting at.

"You almost had me believing you," he said savagely. "If it wasn't that I knew that Wick and that girl up there were crooks I would wash my hands of the whole affair."

"I don't understand," I answered indignantly. "Every statement I have made to you has been the absolute truth."

"Yes, it has!" he sneered.

Ordinarily I would have resented anyone talking to me in this manner, but I felt that under no circumstances could I afford to quarrel with Gorman. He was the only friend I had in the whole city that I could rely on, excepting of course my great-uncle. I contented myself with merely reasserting:

"I tell you it is all true—every word of it."

"The old man's home—old Rufus," he responded irrelevantly.

"I know," I replied. "I saw him for a few minutes day before yesterday. He promised to do everything in his power to free me as speedily as possible. After talking with him I am confident that he had nothing whatever to do with any part of the plot. Have you seen him?"

"Yes," said Gorman, significantly, "I've seen him. He looked me up yesterday and we went over the case together. He suggested that we go up to the Granddeck and look over the apartment, and we did. The minute we got in he went to the wall safe and opened it up and—"

Gorman stopped short and looked at me. It seemed to me that there were doubt and distrust in his expression.

"Go on," I cried, "what did you find?"

"We found," he said, speaking slowly and putting special emphasis on his third word, "two jewel boxes there, the one with the pearls and the other one."

"What," I cried, aghast at this incredible bit of news, "two jewel cases!"

"Sure we did," he announced triumphantly. "And the pearls were there as safe as when the old man went away. Now what have you got to say to that?"

What could I say?

I knew as positively as I knew that I was alive that on that Saturday when I had opened the wall safe to put away my money there had been but one of the jewel boxes there. I had taken it out and had examined its contents again. With the aid of a lighted match I had explored every corner of the steel-lined receptacle. The box containing the pearls and the rest of the valuables in the Gaston collection was gone. Now the pearls were safely back there again. How could that be explained? The mystery was too much for me.

There was not the slightest reason for me to believe that Gorman was lying to me now. I had found him in all our dealings straightforward and candid. If he said he had seen great-uncle Rufus find the pearls there it must be so, but how could they have got there? Could it be possible, I wondered, that subconsciously, burdened with the responsibility of the custody of such costly gems, I might have risen in my sleep and in a somnolent state removed the pearls to some other hiding place. No, I decided, that theory was too preposterous and absurd for even a moment's consideration. If I had done that in my sleep I must also have restored them to the safe again in my sleep. It was far more likely that the thief, becoming alarmed over the publicity brought to the Granddeck by the murder, had been afraid to attempt to dispose of gems so well-known as the Gaston pearls and had restored them in the same mysterious way that he had abstracted them. I suggested this theory to Garman.

Lead and Steel.

Lead is said to act like steel at ordinary temperatures in liquid air. It will serve as a helical spring, for example. This behavior of soft non-elastic metals is interesting. It shows how very important temperature is. Just as iron is soft and inelastic at a high red color, so lead is dull and soft at ordinary temperatures, for it is well on its way to be melted.

After Thorough Trial a Detroit, Mich., Man Endorses Pe-ru-na

The following letter written from Detroit, Michigan is no snap judgment expressed on the merits of Pe-ru-na, the well-known catarrh remedy, but rather a mature, sober opinion formed after a full year's trial.

This is the way Mr. Michael Fako of 906 East Palmer Avenue, in the Michigan Metropolis, writes: "After using PE-RU-NA for about one year will say I have found it a very good medicine for catarrh. It has helped me a great deal and I am very well satisfied. I have gained in weight, eat and sleep well, my bowels are regular and better color in my face.

"PE-RU-NA has done wonders and to me is worth its weight in gold. I shall continue to use PE-RU-NA as long as I live and recommend to my friends who are troubled with catarrh."

Nothing can be more convincing than an endorsement of this nature from an actual user. There are many people in every community whose experience, in using Pe-ru-na, has been identical with Mr. Fako's. It is the standby for coughs, colds, catarrh, stomach and bowel disorders and all catarrhal conditions.

T. E. WILLIAMS ON CITY COUNCIL AT ALBANY

We are in receipt of a copy of the Albany-Decatur Daily of last week which gives the result of the municipal election of Albany on Monday. We are particularly impressed by the fact that Mr. T. E. Williams was elected Councilman of the First Ward of the City of Albany by a good plurality over two opponents. Mr. Williams received 686 votes, his nearest opponent received 558, and the third man received 448.

Mr. Williams is a Clanton man who is now connected with the Morgan County National Bank at Albany. It is useless to state here that he is making good in the north Alabama city, as the vote which he received in the municipal election is sufficient testimony to his standing. Mr. Williams was born and reared on a farm in Chilton County. Upon reaching young manhood he engaged in teaching in the county public schools, and later went into the employ of the Peoples Savings Bank. When the First State Bank was organized here in 1917 he went with that institution as Cashier. From that position he went to the army and was commissioned a lieutenant. At the close of the war when discharged from the service he went with the Morgan County National Bank at Albany, where he has attained imminent success.

The many friends of Mr. Williams throughout Chilton County will be pleased to learn of his good fortune.

Mr. W. Y. Nix of Maplesville was a visitor to Clanton last Monday. His short visit to the Banner office was enjoyed by the editor.

After several hours spent in playing "42" and Bridge the hostess assisted by Mrs. Will Adams, served an ice course. Each guest of honor was presented a lovely box of powder, while the consolation of dainty crepe de chine hendkerchief was drawn for and fell to Miss Lessie Reynolds.

THE JOINT DEBATE

On Wednesday of last week there were quite a number of political fans who went from here to Columbiana to hear the joint debate between Judge Reynolds and Senator Underwood, and Judge Longshore and Judge Brandon. The reports which they brought back indicate that it was a mighty interesting speaking with all the campaign orators on both sides fighting desperately to sway the sentiment in their favor.

Senator Underwood was the first to speak. He, like Fritz Thompson, was in the biggest kind of a hurry, and as soon as he had made his speech had to leave. It is a pity he could not stay and hear Judge Reynolds reply to him. We wish Osker and Fritz would not get in such hurry to go after they make their speeches. If they would stay and hear some good Republican doctrine, and a little real American ideas about the League of Nations it would do them good.

When Judge Reynolds and Fritz Thompson have their debate at Centerville on October 9th we are going to try to build a fence around the Bibb County Court House so high that Fritz can't jump out and get away just as quick as he makes his little speel.

Rumors are rife in Washington that the Democrats are about to stage a break between President Wilson and Candidate Cox in an eleventh-hour effort to save the Democratic candidate from the terrific handicap of "Wilsonism," which, like a thorn under the saddle-weights, is goading Cox to desperation. It is freely admitted by Democrats that Wilson is Cox's "old man of the sea," and they believe that the political Sinbad of Ohio must rid himself of the Wilson incubus if anything is to be salvaged from the wreckage of Democratic hopes.

A NIGHTMARE

Some Democrats of the South, and especially the hide-bound "solid" news papers, are seeing snakes, nightmares, niggers and many other imiginary scare crows in the report that is coming out from the Democratic notional committee to the effect that Representative Siegel, of New York, has already drafted a bill to go before the next Congress (provided it is Republican) cutting down the representation of Southern States, or forcing these States to let the negroes and illiterates vote. We don't believe the negroes of the South ought to vote and we don't believe a white man or woman ought to be denied the right of suffrage because he or she may not be able to read and write. But if the Northern States are going to be represented in Congress according to the vote they poll, then we do not see why the South should not be willing to come under the same rule.

Prof. H. C. McDonald of Wetumpka was in Clanton last Friday. He came up to see the foot ball game between Wetumpka and Clanton. His many friends here were glad to shake hands with him again.

Trend Growing Toward Republicans in the Senate Fights in Several States

USUAL CLOSE STATES RALLY AGAINST LEAGUE

WOMEN A BIG FACTOR

Republicans Hoping to Gain Seven Seats, Including Kentucky And Maryland.

ILLINOIS IS IN DANGER

Lenroot Looks Safe in Wisconsin, and Spencer Runs Well In Missouri.

Washington, Sept. 19.—Within the last few days reports have been received by political managers in Washington from states where close Senatorial contests are being waged giving for the first time what is regarded as a fairly accurate indication of the political complexion of the Senathe in the next Congress. These reports are especially encouraging to the Republican managers who a few weeks ago were worried about the Senate, in spite of their confidence in the success of the presidential ticket.

Until recently the Democrats seemed to have some ground for their hope that they might be able to overturn the slim Republican majority of two in the Senate, because of the factional differences over purely local questions in several close states and the uncertainey as to which way the new women voters would go on the paramount issue of the campaign—the Wilson League of Nations.

But it now appears that except in one or two instances these differences have been ironed out, and at the same time the women have shown in the Republican landslide in Maine, as well as in the New Hampshire and other primaries, that they will go to the extent of forgiving Republicans who opposed giving them the vote in order to register their overwhelming disapproval of the Wilson policies.

Not only are the Republicans now less apprehensive of losing any of their forty-nine seats in the Senate, but they believe they have a splendid chance to increase their majority. For instance, they are turning their attention to Maryland and Oklahoma, two states which were not seriously taken into their calculations of the Senate situation several weeks ago, but which now hold out possibilities of Republican Senatorial gains. As a further illustration of the increasing confidence of the Republican managers they are getting under way a vigorous campaign against Senator Overman of North Carolina on the admittedly remote chance of picking up a Republican Senator in that Southern State.

Trend Toward Republicans.

While bending their principal effort to elect Senator Harding and Gov. Coolidge on the presidential ticket, the Republican managers are not losing sight for a minute of the fact that it is the Senate that must decide the question of this country's future relations with the war torn world, whether the United States shall remain true to its traditional policy of absolute independence of action, or enter the Wilson League of Nations. While it would be too much to say that the Senate is not in doubt, the trend noticeable within the last two weeks toward the Republicans.

Upon the league issue alone the Wilson Democrats are finding themselves in a worse hole than ever. Senator Hoke Smith, a lukewarm or half way opponent of the Wilson League, was defeated in the Georgia primaries, which are equivalent to an election, by Tom Watson, a bitter end opponent of the league. So that it appears that the league advocates cannot find much comfort even in the Democratic outlook.

Of the thirty-four senatorial elections to be held this autumn, fifteen are in states now represented by Republicans and nineteen in states now represented by Democrats. Only one third of the Senate or thirty-two members are regularly elected every two years, but on this occasion there are two vacancies to be filled for the long term, or six years, caused by the death of Senator Bankhead of Alabama and Senator Martin of Virginia.

The Republicans have good chances to gain Senators in Kentucky, Nevada, South Dakota, Idaho, California, Maryland, and Colorado, as things look now, and they may make a gain of one each in Oregon and Oklahoma if there should be a Republican landslide for the presidential ticket. In Florida, Louisiana, Arkansas, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Arizona, and Alabama (two senators) the election of Democrats is conceded, with the possible exception of North Carolina as explained above. That is to say the Republicans have hope in nine states.

Democrats Not Disheartened.

To offset this situation the Democrats are encouraged by Republican factional troubles to hope for gains of one each in North Dakota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Utah and Missouri, five states while they are making claims of further Senatorial gains in Indiana, Ohio, Connecticut and New York, four states more.

There is conceded to be no real chance for Democratic gains in Iowa, Kansas, Washington, Pennsylvania, Vermont and New Hampshire. The Democrats thought they had a chance to defeat Senator Moses (N.H.) on account of his bitter end fight on the league and his opposition to woman suffrage, but the wise heads among their managers have lost this hope since the big victory of Senator Moses in reecnt primaries.

Although vigorous Senatorial campaigns are being fought in fully 20 states, both sides admit that the complexion of the Senate after March 4, 1920, will be decided probably in about twelve state. Only two states east of the Mississippi River hold out hopes of Republican gains—Maryland and Kentucky. Senator John Walter Smith, Democrat, is a candidate for reelection in Maryland, but internal Democratic strife promises a close race between him a nd O. E. Weller, Republican, formerly State Attorney General. Kentucky has a Republican Governor for the first time in many years, and the Republicans have a strong hope of electing Richard P. Ernest of Covington, who is running against Senator Beckham, Democrat, George Morrow and "Tobe" Hert, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, have taken their coats off and are doing their level best to win their home state for the Republican ticket. Both sides admit that it is a close race.

In Souh Dakota Gov. Norbeck, Republican, is opposing U.S.G. Cherry, Democrat, and is a very strong candidate. Were it not for the fact that there are two independent candidates in the field, one on the Non-Partisan League, which defeated Senbeck's election to the Senate would seem to be a certainty. In North Dakota the complication of the Non-Partisal League, which defeated Senator Gronna for the Republican nomination, putting E. F. Ladd, a college professor and farmer, on the combined ticket, gives the Democrats a very good chance for a gain, for it is expected that a good many old line Republicans will support the Democratic nominee, H. H. Perry, rather than Ladd.

Lenroot's Chances Improve.

Senator Lenroot has won the Republican nomination in Wisconsin over the bitter opposition of Senator La Follette, and the Democrats think they have a chance to profit by the Lenroot-La Follette squabble and to elect Paul S. Reinsch, former Ambassador to China, but the latest information is that Senator Lenroot is getting the best of it.

The acrimonious battle between Gov. Lowden of Illinois and Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago for control of the State has put Illionis in the doubtful column. The contest between Representative Frank B. Smith, who is the Thompson candidate for the Republican Senatorial nomination, and Representative William B. McKinley, supported by Lowden, probably will not be decided until certain sealed ballot boxes are opened this week. The Republicans will have to get busy "making up" in order to prevent the loss of a Senate seat here to the Democrats.

The Democrats have a good fighting ground in Missouri, where former Assistant of State Breckenridge M. Long is running on the Democratic ticket against Senator Spencer, Republican. The state is always close. Scandal in the Republican camp in connection with the pre-convention campaign of Gov. Lowden of Illinois for the Republican presidential nomination has disturbed the situation, but on the other hand the Democrats are in a turmoil because of the bitter opposition of Senator Reed, Democrat, colleague of Senator Spencer, to the Wilson administration, and particularly the League of Nations.

Idaho, home of Senator Borah, leader of the anti-league forces in the Senate, is torn wide open with a contest between Senator Nugent, Democrat, and former Gov. Frank Gooding, Republican, who is running on an anti-league ticket. The issue is clear cut and the Republicans are bending every effort to make a gain there, as they also are in Nevada, where the present incumbent, Senator Henderson, is being opposed by former Gov. Tasker Oddie, Republican. The National Womens party is supporting Anne Martin.

Anti-Wilson Revolt in Colorado.

There is a wide-spread revolt against the administration in Colorado. Senator Thomas, the present incumbent, is a strong opponent of the league and refused to stand for renomination on the Democratic ticket. The Republicans hope to elect Karl C. Schuyler of Denver. Representative John W. Harreld is the Republican candidate for the Senate in Oklahoma. He has a better chance to win than any Republican has had in recent years in that State because of the intense feeling engendered in the Democratic ranks when Senator Gore was defeated for reomination on the Democratic ticket by Representative Scott Ferris.

Senator Reed Smoot of Utah is having the fight of his political life to keep his seat on the Republican side of the Senate. The radical element in the State is after his scalp and the Democrats think they have a good opportunity to elect their man, Representative Frank Welling. The personal popularity of Senator Chamberlain of Oregon makes it hard for the Republicans to gain a seat there, but they are making a hard fight in behalf of their candidate, Robert L. Stansfield.

The Republicans are practically certain to gain a Senator in California. Every county in the state has many more registered Republican voters than Democrats. Senator Phelan, Democrat, who is running for re election, only won in 1914 in a three-cornered fight and received but a little more than one-third on the total vote. The Republican candidate is Samuel Shortridge, who is regarded as a reactionary and may lose some liberal Republican votes on that account.

Big Battle in Three States.

New York, Ohio and Indiana are, as usual, the scenes of big Senatorial battles this year. It is practically conceded, however, that whichever party elects its presidential ticket this year also will win the Senatorial contests in these States. Former Gov. Frank Willis, a pronounced "dry" is the Republican candidate in Ohio against William Alexander Julian, Democrat, a "wet", and at the present writing the trend is toward Willis. Former Senator Tom Taggart is running on the Democratic ticket in Indiana against Senator Watson, Republican. It is expected that Taggart will make a fine showing, running ahead of the national Democratic ticket, but the latest reports indicate the election of Senator Watson.

In New York the Senatorial race is between Senator Wadsworth, Republican, and Lieut.Gov. Harry Walker, Democrat. The former's opposition to woman suffrage may hurt him, although there has been no indication to date that the women are letting this interfere with their judgment of the candidates, now that they have won the ballot. It is doubtful whether Tammany can make a good enough showing this year to overcome the normal up-state majority for Mr. Wadsworth. An interesting phase of this contest is the candidacy of Dr. E. A. Boole on the Prohibition ticket.

Senator Brandegee, Republican, has a fight on his hands for re-election in Connecticut, but the situation is beginning to look brighter there for the Republicans.

TEACHERS INSTITUTE OCTOBER 7 AND 8

County Superintendent of Education, Howard L. Foshee, has been informed by the State Department of Education that October 7 and 8 have been set for the date of the Chilton County Teachers Institute for this year. The place of holding the Institute will be the Chilton County High School Building.

It is suggested by the State Department that all the District School Trustees of the county be present at the Institute on the closing day at the eleven o'clock hour. The purpose of having the trustees present is in order to have an opportunity to discuss with them some of the problems that are now confronting the cause of education. This discussion with the trustees will be made by a representative of the State Department of Education and the county superintendent. It will be a valuable and very helpful thing for the trustees.

All white teachers of the county are expected to attend all the sessions of the institute on these two days, October 7 and 8.

We hope that an agreement will be made between the speakers in advance that Fritz must stay in the house and hear Judge Reynolds reply to him. He should not be allowed to run away like he did over at Columbiana.

Wonderful Running Races to Mark Fair

Speedy Horses Will Compete for Splendid Purses in Series of Events On Alabama Track.

Alabama's most brilliant, most entertaining, most helpful state fair is well on its way toward completion. Arrangements for the biggest exhibition ever attempted in the state are almost complete and little remains to be done to put the finishing touches to the most spectacular program ever to mark a Southern fair.

The dates, October 4 to 9, already are fixed in the minds of Alabamians all over the state and Birmingham is expecting the greatest crowd ever to pour into the Magic City for the annual exhibition.

In addition to a wonderous display of agricultural exhibits the fair management has arranged one of the most attractive programs ever attempted at a similar exhibition. It includes five days of horse racing and a sixth day of marvelous automobile races.

The first day's program includes a three-quarter mile dash for a prize of 250; a five-eighth mile dash for a $100 prize and a one and one-eighth mile dash for a purse of $100. The second day will see a five-eighths mile dash for a $100 prize, a seven-eighths mile dash for a prize of $200, while another $200 purse will be awarded in the one-mile dash. For the third day a one-mile dash for $250 in prize money, a three-fourths mile dash for a $250 purse, a seven-eighths mile dash for a prize of $250, and a one-half mile dash for a $100 prize have been arranged. The fourth day will be marked by a seven-eighths mile dash with a prize of $150, a three-fourths mile dash for a prize of $200, a five-eighths mile dash for prize money amounting to $150, and the Alabama State Fair Derby, a one and one-fourth mile dash for a purse of $500. The fifth and final day of the horse racing will see a one-mile dash for a prize of $100, a three-fourths mile dash for $150 in prizes and the one-mile dash, consolation race, for a purse of $200.

Keep Your Blood Pure Nature Will Do the Rest

Did you know that ninety per cent of all human ailments depend upon the condition of your blood?

Nature gives her warnings in various unmistakable ways, so that when the appetite fails, and you become weak and listless and a general run-down condition seems to take possession of the whole body, it is an unfailing sign that impurities will steadily accumulate until your general health will be seriously affected. You should recognize the importance, therefore, of very promptly cleansing out the system, and keeping the blood supply pure and robust.

Get a bottle of S. S. S. at your drugstore to day, and note how promptly it builds up the appetite and gives new strength and vitality. Write for free literature and medical advice to Chief Medical Adviser, 153 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta. Ga.

AFTER any serious illness, the first thing you notice when you begin to get around is your lack of strength and energy—a tired, weak feeling.

The sooner you get your strength back the better. The thing to do is to eat plenty of good, nourishing food, get all the fresh air you can, exercise conservatively, and take Ziron Iron Tonic three times a day.

Your doctor will tell you this is sound advice, and urge you to follow it.

Read this letter from Mr. J. B. Kelly, vice-president of the First National Bank, Graceville, Fla.: "My daughter had been in bad health since last April. She was operated on for appendicitis. Thrills Will Follow Fair Auto Polo Games

WORSE THAN BUCKING BRONCHOS.

There is a thrill that is irresistable, a tense, gripping attraction about auto polo that never has been equalled for lovers of skillful sports. The swift turning of the miniature motor cars, the desperate chances taken by the players, the constant danger, all combine to make up a pastime that can not be surpassed.

Some of the finest auto polo players in the world have been engaged for the games at the Alabama State Fair which takes place at the Fair Grounds in Birmingham October 4 to 9. These men will engage in a series of games that have made the modern version of the old pony, mallet and ball pastime the king of all sports.

One of the features that makes auto polo so fascinating is the almost superhuman control of motor cars required. Where in the old type of auto polo the player may largely depend upon the intelligence of his mount, the new game requires minute and constant attention to the machine. The well trained polo pony often of his own volition will turn upon his heels and scamper off down the field in pursuit of the elusive white sphere. But the auto polo player must throw over his wheel, turn his car upon the smallest possible space and steer his conveyance after the ball without anything except his own skill as a driver to depend upon.

Automobile polo has become a popular pastime in the South and has been specially well received by visitors to the Alabama State Fair. The fair management this year has arranged a series of games that is far above the ordinary for skill, daring and fascination. No one who dotes on blood-pulsing situations, daring flirtations with death, unsurpassed motor driving can afford to miss these games.

This one attraction, aside from the multitude of other drawing cards at the State Fair, is calculated to bring to the Fair Grounds thousands of thrill seekers, and none of these visitors will be disappointed when the auto polo games actually get under way.

The Facts of the Telephone Situation in Alabama

By J. Epps Brown, President.

SOUTHERN BELL TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY

What The Company Asks

The Company asks to earn only such profits as are necessary to protect the rights of the public.

The public needs and demands adequate and efficient service, now and in the future.

To furnish this service, additional facilities, costing many million dollars must be constructed.

This money must be gotten from the investing public.

Investors will not put their money into an established business unless they are sure of a fair and adequate return upon their investment.

They cannot receive a fair and adequate return upon their investment unless the business earns a fair and just profit.

The investor is guided by the profits earned in the past, and the prospects of profits to be earned in the future.

When the Company's profits are such as will enable it to obtain from the investing public the money needed to furnish adequate facilities to supply the demand for service, its earnings will be fair and reasonable.

A fair and reasonable profit is as necessary for the protection of the rights of the public as it is for the protection of the property rights of the Company.

What return is a fair and just profit depends upon general economic conditions.

What was a fair and just profit in 1914 is not a fair and just profit in 1920.

The investor is entitled to, and demands, the same return upon his money invested in the telephone business as he receives on money invested in other businesses.

The profits earned in other businesses determine what profits the telephone business must earn.

The available supply of money for investments is limited. The opportunity and demand for new capital is unprecedented.

The telephone business must compete with all other businesses, public and private, for this money.

The investor will put his money in the enterprise which assures him the best return.

To protect the rights of the public to receive adequate service, the profits of the Telephone Company must be sufficient to attract the investing public.

To do this the Company must earn as much as ten per cent upon its investment.

The Company's investment is all physical property: poles, wires and equipment exclusively used in furnishing telephone service. No franchise, going value or any intangibles are included, nor is there any bonds, stocks or other forms of capitalization involved.

The amount of the Company's investment is what it originally cost to construct its physical property; the "bare bones" of its telephone plant. Practically all of the plant was constructed at low pre-war prices.

Its present value today is much greater than its original cost.

To reproduce the Company's plant at today's prices, after making full allowance for its present condition, would cost 80 per cent more than the investment.

Ten per cent return upon the investment is less than 6 per cent upon the value of the Company's property.

No one questions the right of the Company to earn a fair and reasonable return upon the value of its property.

Measured by the profits earned today in other business in Alabama, the return the Company is asking to earn is a fair and just profit.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(By Ewell Robinson, Editor.)

The entire student body has been very busy for the past week standing monthly examinations.

The attendance of the school is almost perfect. Out of a total of nearly one hundred and sixty pupils only a very few are absent or tardy each day.

Seniors.

The Seniors recently met and organized their class. Officers were elected as follows:

President, Jewel Davis; Vice President, Claudie Pipes; Secretary, Joe Higgins; Treasurer, Vera Gillespie; Class Prophet, Jewel Popwell; Poet, Estelle Webb; Musician, Ruth Aldridge; News Reporter, Jewel Popwell; Orator, Leon Evans; Goat, Jewel Gore.

Records show that the Senior Class is the largest in the history of the school.

Juniors.

The Junior Class has been organized and officers elected, as follows:

President, Jennye Robinson; Vice President, Cleo Broadhead. Secretary Hoyt Reynolds; Musician, Eufala Mahan; Poet, Mary Kennedy; Historian, Clara Crumpton; Class Reporter, Bertha Dennis; Goat, Norman Roberts; Colors, Black and Gold; Flowers, Black eyed Susans.

Sophomores.

The Sophomores have elected the following officers for the term:

President, Elly Daniel; Vice President, John Burnett; Secretary and Treasurer, Gertye Mae Davis; Musician, Edythe Robinson; Poet, Clara Vines; Class Reporter, Maud Wagoner; Goat, Eloise Kemp; Class Colors, Pink and Green; Class Flowers, Dorthy Perkins Roses; Motto, "B2."

Athletics.

On last Friday the Wetumpka Aggies encountered the strong line of the Chilton County Foot Ball Team. The game was very clean and well played throughout.

In the first quarter the Aggies managed a forward pass for only touchdown, then the Chilton lines of defense tightened and did not allow the Aggies to cross the goal line again.

During last half the ball remained in the center of the field, changing hands often but without much progress by either team.

Wetumpka Boys Entertained.

The boys of the Wetumpka team were delightfully entertained by a social given by Miss Jewel Gore. On arrival of guests punch was served by Miss Jewel Minor.

Many games were enjoyed throughout the evening.

Girls Team Organized.

The girls have organized an Athletic Association and are planning to play several games soon. All the girls seem to be interested and we expect to have a winning team this year.

Literary Society.

Both the Julia Tutwiler and the Lanerian Societies held their first meeting on Friday p.m. Splendid programs were rendered by both.

Rivalry between the two societies causes much interest to be taken and good work to be accomplished.

Judge Reynolds went up to Oak Grove above Jemison Monday night and made a speech. He states that the crowd was good, a great number of ladies present, and much interest manifest. The women of Chilton County are deeply interested in politics and they will be quick to register and take advantage of their suffrage privileges.

FEDERAL ROAD BUILDING AID

Highway Construction Hampered by Transportation Difficulties and Lack of Material.

In addition to $19,000,000 for forest road construction, congress has made available to July 1, 1920, the sum of $275,000,000 for federal aid roads. Of this sum $175,000,000 was available up to and including June 30, 1920. Of this amount the states had made application covering $152,193,040 as of April 30. This federal aid is to apply on 27,796 miles of road estimated to cost $355,754,799. As of May 1st 13,540 miles of federal aid road were under construction, involving over $86,000,000 in federal aid. The total mileage of completed road built under the federal aid law since it became operative in 1916 is 4,301.15 miles, as of May 1, 1920, an average rate of construction of over 1,000 miles a year.

The difficulties of transportation, the lack of materials, the insufficient number of contracting organizations, the scarcity of adequate equipment and the general shortage of engineering personnel in connection with highway construction during the past two years have reduced road building activities to about 3-7 of the full program. The bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture is ready, the states are ready, the funds are available to push highway construction on a 100 per cent program as soon as the national economic conditions will warrant.

MAINTENANCE OF DIRT ROAD

Essential That No Water Be Permitted to Remain on Surface—Repair Ruts Quickly.

To maintain an earth road so that it will adequately take care of heavy traffic it is essential first that no water be allowed to stand on the road surface or in the ditches, and secondly that defects occurring in the surface be repaired immediately and in a manner that will form a crust sufficient to maintain the loads and resist the wear caused by traffic.

The first can be accomplished only by grading and draining the road in a manner that will permit water to drain quickly from the surface after every rain, and the second by adding clay and sand in the proper proportions as required, shaping up the surface with a light grader, and keeping the traveled surface smooth and even with the road planer, after which the earth surface eventually becomes smooth and impervious to water. The result is an extremely satisfactory road at a very low cost to the public.

SAVE KANSAS MANY DOLLARS

Engineering Experiment Station Tests All Materials to Be Used in Road Building.

The road materials laboratory of the Kansas engineering experiment station is in charge of the testing of all materials for use on federal aid roads in the state of Kansas. More than 75 car loads of defective cement and bricks submitted for test in the past year have been rejected, thus saving the state many thousands of dollars.

FINANCING SYSTEM OF ROADS

Proper Procedure of County or District Is Matter Open for Much Discussion.

Just how a county or district should proceed to finance a system of roads is a matter open for discussion. It depends upon how rapidly they need them and upon how well they are able to pay, in other words on their valuation and the cost of the work contemplated.

Crown for Earth Roads.

Well maintained earth roads need very little crown. The wider and flatter the earth road, the better, if it has good drainage and is kept constantly smooth.

Calomel loses you a day! You know what calomel is. It's mercury; quicksilver. Calomel is dangerous. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

When you feel bilious, sluggish, constipated and all knocked out and believe you need a dose of dangerous calomel just remember that your druggist sells for a few cents a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone, which is entirely vegetable and pleasant to take and is a perfect substitute for calomel. It is guaranteed to start your liver without stirring you up inside, and can not salivate.

COX GAINING VOTES ON HIS STUMPING TOUR

The West Likes His Col. Rooseveltian Ways, But Not Enough to Turn From Harding.

The following information about the Western tour of Gov. Cox, was sent to the New York Herald by one of their staff correspondents who is assigned to go with the Governor on his speech-making journey:

If the Democrats are to win this election it will have to be done in the East. The West, which put over Mr. Wilson in 1916, is overwhelmingly Republican and determined that there must be a change in the administration. The League of Nations is unpopular. This is the plain situation as it confronted Governor Cox as he traveled along the Pacific Coast. After two days in Southern California the Presidential candidate turned eastward hoping to find better results on the other side of the Rockies.

This Western trip which began on Sept. 2, so far has extended into eleven states—Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Utah, Nevada and California. This group polls eighty-five votes in the electoral college.

Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, Washington, Oregon, Idaho and California seem surely Republican. These states poll seventy-four electoral votes.

Montana, Utah and Nevada may go Democratic, with eleven electoral votes. Montana seems surely Democratic. In Utah the race will be close, with the odds favoring the Democrats owing to Mormon sentiment for the League of Nations. So far as Nevada is concerned, the population is too widely scattered to permit anything like a reliable estimate, but the Democrats claim this state on past results.

The Democrats feel that they may have a chance in the state of Washington, but frankness requires the statement that the hope seems false. Everywhere the sentiment is primarily against the Wilson administration, this including the League of Nations looked upon as a piece of Wilson idealism likely to embroil the United States in every foreign quarrel. The people want a change. It is in the air that this is a Republican year.

Gov. Cox personally is popular. The trip has made him friends. The West likes his scrappy punchy way and his platform actions remind the people of Theodore Roosevelt. In November he will get a bigger vote than if he had not come out this way, but unless there is a complete reversal of sentiment in the remaining weeks of the campaign, the West will go for Harding.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

Next Sunday will be an interesting day at this church. During the Sunday School hour in the morning instead of the regular lesson a special programme will be given by the children in the interests of State Missions and Rally Day. Following the Sunday School hour there will be a Roll Call service of the church, when the names of the membership will be called, and a sermon appropriate to the occasion will be preached. It is hoped and expected that there will be a large representation of the membership present. The morning service will then be followed by the Ordinance of the Lords Supper. This should make a very profitable and enjoyable programme and an impressive morning worship. The interest of the membership of the church will be manifested by their presence at this service.

The Sunbeam Band will meet at 2:30 p.m., Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 and the Senior B. Y. P. U. at 6:45 p.m. Preaching service at night beginning at 7:30 p.m. Some special music will be rendered at the night service The nature of this music will be a surprise to those who attend. We cordially invite the general public to all of our services.

The Unity Association meets at Verbena next Tuesday and Wednesday and it is hoped that a large delegation will be present from the Clanton Baptist Church.

ARMON WAGONER RAISES SAND HERE SUNDAY

Last Sunday about noon Mr. Armon Wagoner, after drinking up all the white lightning he could find, proceeded to get rough with everything in the community and tried to tear up the town in general. The first act of violence which he pulled off was to hit Joe Gray over the head with an automobile crank, breaking Joe's arm and cutting a gash on his scalp. Further activities of Mr. Wagoner brought him into contact with the officers of the law, and when they started to jail with him the racket began in grand style. Those who witnessed the spectacle assert that they never heard anybody so completely cuss out the country in general and the sheriff in particular as did Mr. Wagoner.

After the prisoner had been placed in jail he tore up everything that was not nailed down, but he must have finally decided that he could not get out of "86" so he cooled down to spend the night. Monday morning he was released on bond to await his turn before the bar of justice to give his account of the deeds done during his rampage.

GRAND JURY SAYS LAW MUST BE ENFORCED IMPARTIALLY

Reports Poor House in Bad Condition; Roads in Bad Shape; County Offices Neatly Kept.

The report of the grand jury of Chilton County last week was short but very pointed in some of its recommendations. The document did not employ great profusion of words, but the things which are said in the report are clear and concise, and easily understood.

Following is the report in full:

To the Honorable B. K. McMorris, Judge of the 19th Judicial Circuit of the State of Alabama.

We, the Grand Jury duly empanneled and sworn for the July term, 1920 of the Circuit Court of Chilton County, Alabama, beg leave to submit to your Honor this our final report. We have investigated -8 alleged violations of the law and return herewith to your Honor 10 true bills.

We have examined the books of the various county officers and find them correctly and neatly kept so far as we were able to ascertain. The report of the County Treasurer is hereto attached and marked Exhibit "A".

We find that there is sore need for teachers in our public schools. We believe that this is largely due to the inadequate salary paid them.

We have examined the county jail. We find the sanitary condition good and the prisoners are well fed and cared for. One of the cells is in bad need of repairs due to the actions of a drunken prisoner who was recently incarcerated there.

We have the information from reports that have come to this Grand Jury that some of the roads of the county are in bad shape. We believe that this is in a large measure due to the overseers not doing their duty in the enforcement of the road law. There are many who are subject to road duty who have not been required to work at all this year. We wish a more strict enforcement of the road law.

The Grand Jury has received letters and witnesses have appeared before us and reported general violations of the law. We ask that in future those who write letters to this body sign their names and that witnesses who voluntarily come before this body will have something specific to present.

Information has been received that the Sunday law has been enforced with partiality. We warn the law enforcing officers that in the future all laws must be enforced impartially.

We have investigated the conditions at the County Poor House We find the conditions there very deplorable The inmates are poorly clothed and have practically no place to sleep The buildings are in sore need of repair There are 19 inmates, 6 men 12 white women and one colored woman. We ask that the proper authorities take this matter in hand at once. There is immediate need of fuel.

Feeling that we have accomplished all that could be required of us at this term of the Court, we respectfully ask that we be discharged with our thanks to the court solicitor and the county officials for their valuable assistance in our work, subject to the further orders of this court.

B. J. SESSIONS,
Foreman.

LETTER FROM MR. COLLIER

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 6, 1920.

Editor of the Union-Banner:

I shall thank you to allow me a little space in your paper to say to those who voted for me in my recent race for Mayor that I feel under very deep obligation to them for their support, and especially do I thank the good ladies for their support and participation in the election. I feel that I made an excellent race, having been beaten by the small majority of four out of a total of 248.

It has been my intention to contest the election, but I have today definitely decided not to do so. The contest would engender much turmoil and strife and the litigation incident there to would be long-drawn out. Should I win the contest, I would win only a thankless job.

In passing, however, I want to state that I am not quite satisfied with the manner in which the election was pulled off. I am against permitting Ruben L. Reynolds and Dr. Will S. Wilson to vote, when absent from the county, unless they first comply with the absent voting law. Neither of them did this, yet they were permitted to vote. I am also against permitting any one to vote who has not registered in Chilton County. W. A. Wingard and Frank Lockhart voted and so far as I am able to ascertain neither of them has ever registered in Chilton County. It is my understanding Mr. Wingard had not even resided in Chilton County for a year at the time of the election. Frank Lockhart was moved into Clanton on Friday before the election.

However, regardles of what I may think as to the illegality of some of the votes cast against me, I want to felicitate the city's new officials, and here's honing they will have easy sailing.

Yours very truly,
F. B. COLLIER.

PLEASANT GROVE—JEMISON

Editor Union-Banner:

Please allow me to report our singing society and other items of our community.

Our society met Sunday p.m. and sang well, considering the practice we have had. The songs were led by Prof. James Franklin, Messrs Archie Cleckler, J. S. Wright, and George Spivey. The organists were Misses Nora Franklin and Bevie Childress and Mrs. Eddie Childress.

There was a number of visitors from Pates Chapel, among them Mr. and Mrs. Cleckler, the Misses Pate and Maddox, and several young men.

We very cordially invite them to come again. There is nothing that helps like co-operation, so we as a singing society thank these people for their help to try to praise our Creator through our song service. This is one of the greatest parts of the work of the Master for whom the stars and angels once sang together.

Rev. J. D. Deason filled his place as pastor of this church on the fourth Sunday and Saturday before. He has done a good work as pastor, and has been called to serve here for another year. We hope for another successful year of service through his guidance and the co-operation of the church.

WEST CHILTON

Editor Union-Banner:

Woman Suffrage has been a prominent subject quite a while. And we doubt if the ladies of Chilton County have given it very much consideration. However, the privilege of exercising the right of franchise is now legally theirs.

Woman has worked for this privilege for probably one hundred years; finally she has achieved the victory through her own efforts. Now the ladies have the opportunity of manifesting their appreciation of those efforts of a century by going to the polls and voting their convictions.

Some of the most important questions that have ever confronted America are to be settled this year. How needful that they be settled right. Then regardless of political persuasion, let the ladies take those paramount questions to heart, and vote as they see proper, thus aiding the men in giving America a government truly of the people.

Dr. Dwight of the long ago said "the reign of America is the last and noblest of time." Then in voting for home and American interests let the ladies of Chilton freely exercise their privilege.

FORD TURNED OVER

Frank Patterson related to us Tuesday the story of how a Ford in which he was riding turned over on the road south of Clanton Monday evening. The car was driven by George Guy and Mr. Patterson and Luther Yeargan, postmaster at Verbena, were gassengers with him. They were meeting another car on a fill when their machine got too far out on the edge and turned up on one side spilling the men out in the ditch. No one was badly hurt. The car was slightly damaged. Mr. Patterson said the fright was about the worst feature of the accident.

J. N. SCOTT IS STILL ALIVE

Irondale, Ala., Oct. 1, 1920.

Dear Editor:

It has been some time since I wrote anything for publication, but here I come for a space in your valued paper.

I want to say that I was glad to know that the Republican party had nominated Judge L. H. Reynolds for U. S. Senator from Alabama, as I know there is not a better man in Alabama for the place, and I am assured of the fact that if he is elected that when he gets to Washington all classes of people in Alabama will get a spuare deal. Because I know that in the past he has stood for justice toward all men alike; and if we had a Republican Senator from Alabama he would do something for the State. Brother voters, we have plowed with that old Democratic plow over forty years, and I have known for several years that it was almost worn out. Why? Because it is not giving results. Tell me one good deed that Senator Underwood ever did for the people of Alabama, and I will give you two bad ones.

I want to say that the people up in this part of the State are finding out that we need a change, and the most of them that I have talked with say that they are going to vote the Republican ticket this time. As for parties, I want to say that there is not so much in parties, but it is in the man's principles and what he stands for, and a man who will do just what he tells the people he will do. Just as long as we don't have two strong parties we are going to be slaves to our officers. They are bosses instead of servants. We want to vote for men who will serve the people best regardless of party, just like they do in the northern states. When we are willing to do that we will have better times here in the South. Yes, if we would send a majority of Republican Representatives to Montgomery next time we would have things managed better than we have for many years, for they stand for economy and would cut down the expense of the state, until I am sure our dogs would not have to be taxed, and our chickens would be freed from the tax books.

Now, Brother voters, with a prayerful heart, believing that it is the best I ask that we all elect Judge L. H. Reynolds and try a new horse in the City of Washington next time. I will say that I have been rightly informed, as well as know myself, that most of the women voters of Birmnigham are for L. H. Reynolds, because he is for prohibition and for the common people.

Well will close, and if I see this in print I may write again.

Success to all the readers and the Editor, I remain,

J. N. SCOTT.

—15—

"Nothing doing," he sneered. "Any crook daring enough to steal those pearls, once he had got his hands on them, never would return them. Pearls are too easily disposed of. You've got to dig up a better explanation than that."

"What did Mr. Gaston think? What did he say when he found them here?"

"He had nothing to say. He was so tickled at finding them again that he hustled with them right away to the safe deposit vaults and did not rest until he had them safely locked up. He took both jewel cases with him and made me go along with him to protect them."

"Didn't you look at all for the secret passageway I told you about?"

"Still dreaming about that, are you?" scoffed Gorman. "No, we didn't. On the way up to the Granddeck the old man spoke about it and I told him that in my opinion there was nothing to it. After he recovered the pearls he was too excited to think about anything else. It seemed to break him all up, and I took him back to his hotel and left him there. He said he had some writing to do, and that he would meet me at my office at noon today."

"How do you account for the return of the pearls?" I cried desperately. "What's your theory about them?"

"I haven't any," he replied. "It's up to you to explain it. Maybe by the time I come to see you tomorrow you'll have thought up a new yarn to spin."

"Please, please," I called after him as he turned away, "do look tomorrow and see if that secret passage is not where I said it was."

He walked away without answering. Back once more in my cell, I stretched myself despondently on my little iron cot, and closing my eyes, tried to concentrate my thoughts on an attempt to solve this new mystery, which I could plainly see had all but destroyed Gorman's faith in my honesty. I must solve it if I was to retain him in aiding me to get free, yet the whole thing seemed inexplicable. I could hardly blame him for doubting me. The great value of the pearls had been motive enough for their theft, but what possible motive could there have been for the thief returning them?

With a shock it came to me, too, that the restoration of the pearls practically upset the whole theory of my defense. If I could have established the fact of this theft, a jury might be persuaded to believe my tale of anonymous notes, mysterious whispers, and a secret passageway by which the thief had gained access to the apartment, but without the motive of theft, my story, unsupported by witnesses and uncorroborated by other evidence, surely would be incredible of belief.

I had just one hope left. Old Rufus must find that secret passageway and see whither it led. That, with our knowledge of the identity of the telephone girl and the possibility of proving Gorman's belief that Wick was an ex-convict, seemed likely to be my only salvation. Old Rufus must find that passageway. He must! He must!

For hours I lay there racking my brains over the unsolvable problems. My luncheon was brought in, but I waved it away untouched. Wearily I wondered whether the recovery of the pearls had destroyed my aged relative's faith in me, as it seemed to have destroyed Gorman's. I could hardly blame him if he doubted me after finding that my story of the disappearance of the pearls was apparently untrue. In my brief experience as a prisoner I had learned all too well the bitter fact that once a man is discredited, henceforth no one trusts him. If Rufus Gaston failed me at this juncture I did not see how I could possibly extricate myself unscathed from the web that unseeen hands had so skilfully and maliciously woven around me. The only ray of comfort that I could find anywhere in the whole situation was in my firm belief that though old Rufus and Gorman and the whole world doubted me, Barbara Bradford—my Barbara, I ventured to call her in my innermost heart—would continue to believe in me. She would be sure, no matter how much appearances went against me, that I was telling the truth. Barbara and I knew. Even if she had not known that I could not possibly have fired the shot that killed Miss Lutan, I was certain that she still would have trusted me.

Thinking about Barbara I recalled that it was the day of her sister's wedding. I had one of the prison attendants get me the evening papers to see what they had to say about it, for I was fearful lest some breath of scandal at the last moment involving the Bradfords might bring about a postponement. Eagerly I was hoping that nothing had happened to prevent the marriage taking place. With the fortunes of her sister assured and her mother's future safe, I realized that the course of my relations with Barbara would be likely to be much smoother sailing, provided of course that I was acquitted. In the few chats I had had with her, I had realized that wealth and luxury and social position meant nothing to Barbara's happiness. She was the sort of girl who for a man she loved gladly would brave poverty, hardship, everything—a sincere, true-hearted woman with a clear vision of the real values of existence.

My messenger returned with the newspapers, and as I picked them up, everything went black. "Millionaire Gaston Found Murdered," was the startling headline that flashed before me, right there in the column next to the account of the Bradford wedding.

The sinister effect of this terrible news dawned on me instantly. With my great-uncle Rufus dead, without the possibility of his corroborating any part of my story, my case was hopeless, desperate. Unquestionably it would mean that I would be found guilty of murder and sentenced to death in the electric chair. As soon as I could sufficiently compose myself I read every word there was in the newspapers about this new tragedy, smiling grimly at the thought that at least they could not blame this murder on me.

Mr. Gaston, it appeared, had come to the Granddeck about ten o'clock in the morning and had gone at once to his apartment. On his arrival he had been greeted by the telephone girl and had informed her that he was only in the city for a few days and was staying at a hotel. He had added that he would not be occupying the apartment for several weeks until his wife's return to the city. About half-past twelve there had come a telephone call for him. The girl had been unable to get any response from the apartment. Knowing that he had not gone out, and fearing that he might have had a sudden attack of illness, she had become alarmed and notified Mr. Wick, the superintendent.

The superintendent, the account continued, had summoned Mr. Henry Kent, the owner of the Granddeck apartments. Together they had gone to Mr. Gaston's rooms. Being unable to get any reply to repeated rings and knocks they had finally let themselves in with a pass key in possession of the owner of the building.

In his study in the rear of the apartment they were horrified to find old Rufus Gaston, fully clad, lying on the floor, face down, stone dead. A great wound on the back of his head showed that he had been killed, probably instantly, by a terrific blow from some sort of a blunt instrument. A search of the rooms failed to show any sort of a weapon.

The police theory was that the crime was undoubtedly the work of a burglar who had been trapped by the return of Mr. Gaston so unexpectedly to his apartment. How the murderer escaped after attacking Mr. Gaston was a puzzle to the detectives at work on the case. The superintendent of the building expressed the opinion that the murderer had gained access in the guise of a meter inspector. Attendants in the hall recalled that there had been such a man in the building that morning. As he wore the usual uniform and presented the customary credentials, he had been permitted to enter and leave the building unmolested.

There followed a long review of Rufus Gaston's business career and an estimate of some of his extensive holdings in stocks, bonds and real estate, from which it appeared that his fortune was likely to run to over ten million dollars. It was with some surprise that I learned that a score or more of years ago the old man apparently had been a powerful figure in the life of the metropolis, active both in its business and social life.

"Millionaire Gaston Found Murdered," Was the Startling Headline That Flashed Before Me.

What interested me most was the attention paid to the remarkable coincidence that only a few weeks before a murder had taken place in the apartment just below, under practically the same circumstances. The police, the account stated, were inclined to believe that the murderer was one of the gang to which young Nelson, now in prison charged with the murder of Miss Lutan, undoubtedly belonged. Their theory was that a burglar gang succeeded in planting Nelson in the apartment as a caretaker, and that this enabled them to get their bearings in the building and provide themselves with false keys for ransacking the rooms at their leisure. The guilt of young Nelson, the police say, is established beyond question, and they are hopeful of being able to round up his associates.

There was also a brief interview with Wick, in which he was quoted as saying:

"I was suspicious of Nelson from the start and tried to keep an eye on him. He was very secretive about his comings and goings and was always prying about trying to learn something about the other tenants. How Mr. Gaston came to employ him as caretaker I never learned, but it would be no hard matter for a slick young crook like him to impose on so old a man as Mr. Gaston with a cock and bull story."

I sniffed indignantly as I read this. I knew that Wick was deliberately trying to still further discredit me. I recalled that he himself had told me that Mr. Gaston had mentioned our relationship. It was obvious that he was deliberately withholding this information with a sinister purpose.

That Wick knew well who had killed Rufus Gaston, just as he knew who had shot Daisy Lutan, I was morally certain. I was inclined to agree with Gorman that Wick himself was not the murderer. The fact that he was of a cowardly and cringing nature seemed to argue against associating him actively with crimes of violence. Yet the virulent way in which he was adding to the evidence against me showed plainly that he was industriously engaged in masking the real murderer.

Who could the murderer be? I was confident that the same person who had killed Miss Lutan had killed my great-uncle. I could only conjecture as to the motive. The police theory that it was burglary seemed as logical as any. The more I pondered over the matter the more firmly I became convinced that there was a numerous criminal band at the back of it all. No one man or two men could carry out all the deviltry, even with the help of the telephone girl.

I recalled, too, how I had been skillfully shadowed, work that evidently required organization and employees. I was convinced that Wick and the telephone girl were only two—more than likely two minor members—of a powerful body of criminals. That it was this same sinister force that had caused my discharge from the office I was equally sure. This sort of thing took brains—far bigger brains than Wick gave any evidence of possessing.

A peculiar apathy came over me as I finished reading the account. Never before had I so fully understood how thoroughly an innocent man could be damned by circumstantial evidence. I knew—Barbara knew—that I was absolutely innocent. I doubted much if we could get anyone else to believe it.

The cunning web had been woven with such malicious thoroughness that escape seemed impossible. What was the use of my fighting further?

CHAPTER XIII.

Coming as it did as a dire climax to all my other troubles, the shock of old Rufus Gaston's murder sent me into an apathetic state from which it seemed impossible for me to arouse myself. Without hope and even without interest I dully awaited the approach of my trial for murder.

While there never had been an opportunity for any bond of affection to become established between my aged relative and myself—in fact, I had seen him only three or four times in my whole life, and then only for brief periods—still his unexpected and dreadful end had bereft me of practically every hope of being acquitted of the absurd charge against me. Wick, it was plain, intended to disclaim all knowledge of my relationship to Mr. Gaston, and now there was no one else to explain how I happened to be living in the building at the time of Miss Lutan's murder. Unfortunately I had destroyed both Mr. Gaston's letter to me and the note from my mother which had first told me of the old man's intention. My great-aunt, I learned from the newspapers, had been completely prostrated by the tragedy and had been unable to come to the funeral. The shock of the news of her husband's violent end had left her in a very critical condition. It seemed to have wholly deranged her aged brain, and the physicians summoned to the Maine camp where she was refused to permit her to be removed from there or to let anyone talk with her, declaring that the least excitement of any sort would be apt to have fatal results.

To be sure there was my mother, who could prove my relationship, but I felt there was little use of dragging her into it. On reading of her uncle's death she had hastened on from the West to attend his funeral and had been puzzled and alarmed by not finding me there. All the time I had been in prison I had been writing her my usual weekly letter, affecting a cheerfulness I was far from feeling and telling her nothing of what had happened. Her letters to me, addressed to the Granddeck, had been forwarded by the post office, so that until after she arrived in the city she knew nothing of my plight. It had been my hope that I would be able to conceal everything from her until after I had been triumphantly acquitted. If I were not she would know the worst soon enough.

When she first learned, or from what source, of my predicament I was unaware. I did not even know of her presence in the city until the day after my great-uncle's funeral, when—just twenty-four hours before my trial was to begin—a keeper brought me word that she was waiting downstairs to see me.

I steeled myself for the interview with her. Naturally I expected that she would be terribly horror stricken and shocked at my plight, but what her attitude toward me would be I could not conjecture. I fully expected nothing but reproaches from her. She had been so opposed to my coming to

"Oh, My Boy, My Boy!" She Had Cried as She Saw Me, "I Know You Didn't Do It."

New York that I felt certain that she would insist that my conduct must be responsible for my being where I now was. For years, it seemed to me, the relations between my mother and myself had been nothing but continuous misunderstandings. To my great amazement and bewilderment not an unkind word nor the suggestion of a reproachful thought came from her lips.

"Oh, my boy, my boy," she had cried as she saw me, "I know you didn't do it. I know my boy is innocent! What can I do to help you?"

In that glorious, wonderful moment of reaction all resentment I had felt toward her forever vanished. I had one sacred, unforgettable glimpse of the eternal greatness of the Mother heart, ever ready to forgive, ever quick to comprehend, ever prompt to aid. For one sweet hour we talked together, more understandingly than ever before in our lives. Freely and fully I told her everything, even to my wonderful but hopeless love for Barbara Bradford. She was willing, anxious, eager to aid me—but what was there that she could do?—what was there that anyone could do?

It was hopeless for a lone woman of limited means, unacquainted with the big city and unused to its ways, to attempt to battle against such powerful and desperate criminals as were concerned in the far-reaching plot to make me the scapegoat of their heinous misdeeds. I could only advise her that she see McGregor and Gorman and be guided by what they suggested.

When the morning of my trial actually arrived I entered the courtroom in a state of dull apathy. The night before I had not slept at all. I had spent all the black hours reviewing my life, especially the last year, thinking with what high hopes and great expectations I had come to the metropolis and how miserably everything had turned out for me. Step by step I had reviewed the events that had brought me, discredited, all but friendless, all but penniless, into this dismal courtroom accused of a horrible, cowardly deed, seeking to see wherein I might have altered my recent actions or changed the course of my life to avoid having arrived at this shameful goal. Yet, strange to say, I found myself after mature reflection convinced that had I this last year to live over again not in one iota would I have done differently—no, not even if I could have foretold what the future had in store for me.

The teacher gave Margaret some yarn and cardboard, and after showing her how to work a design, told her to finish it at home. When she came to school the next day with the half-finished work, the teacher asked her why she had not finished it; if she had run out of yarn. "Oh, no," answered Margaret; "I just run'd out of time."

ROCKING CHAIR IS INDORSED

French Authorities Declare Great American "Institution" to Be Physiologically Correct.

Nobody who has studied the rocking chair will be surprised to hear that the French Academy of Science has declared it the most hygienic of all seats instead of a mere American fad. It is, as the academy says, physiologically correct. The trouble with it is that it is not always psychologically correct. Its baneful effects are not on the rocker, but on the beholder. It is an all-around joy only when it is not rocked. New England ladies used to test a new neighbor by getting her to sit in a rocking chair. If she could resist rocking she was of the elect. This simple test of the nerves has made or marred a great many newcomers' popularity.

The advantage of the rocking chair is that it puts the body in the proper balance. The skull is kept in the proper position. But oscillation does not add to the benefit. It is good to find an invention which has been maligned because of misuse indorsed by the scientists. Let these gentlemen next find something good to say about silk hats.

A woman may listen to her husband's advice, but she does as she pleases anyhow.

The man who never looks up is a rank failure when it comes to lifting up.

True love and ghosts are often talked about but seldom seen.

"Pape's Diapepsin" for Indigestion

"Pape's Diapepsin" is the quickest, surest relief for Indigestion, Gases, Flatulence, Heartburn, Sourness, Fermentation or Stomach Distress caused by acidity. A few tablets give almost immediate stomach relief and shortly the stomach is corrected so you can eat favorite foods without fear. Large case costs only 60 cents at drug store. Absolutely harmless and pleasant. Millions helped annually. Best stomach corrective known—Adv.

Rents Hurt Ghost Industry.

In England desperate people in search of houses to rent or buy are advertising that ghosts are no drawback. Any one who happens to own a hitherto unrented house because tradition says it is haunted is assured that the seekers for a domicile will accept it at the rental asked for regardless of the haunter or hauntess. It is suspected that in England, as in several other countries, ghosts of landlords would be less objectionable than those of other folk. Whatever his losses in the past, the landlord as a rule is regarded in these days with deep suspicion as a profiteer. In many cases this attitude is probably unfair; there are some considerate landlords.—Toronto Globe.

All in the Open.

He is a big-game hunter, and was talking of his happy experiences in the out of doors. Then the talk drifted to old friends back in the old home town.

"Whatever became of So-and-So?" one friend asked the hunter.

"Oh, hadn't you heard? He's in jail."

"You don't tell me?"

"Yes; I went down to the jail to see him the other day."

"That was a friendly thing to do. What did you talk about?"

"Oh, outdoor life."

All He Did.

"How did you spend your vacation?" "Going for ice and cleaning fish mostly."

SOUR STOMACH INDIGESTION

Thedford's Black-Draught Highly Recommended by a Tennessee Grocer for Troubles Resulting from Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.— The efficiency of Thedford's Black-Draught, the genuine, herb, liver medicine, is vouched for by Mr. W. N. Parsons, a grocer of this city. "It is without doubt the best liver medicine, and I don't believe I could get along without it. I take it for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver.

"I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Many other men and women throughout the country have found Black-Draught just as Mr Parsons describes —valuable in regulating the liver to its normal functions, and in cleansing the bowels of impurities.

Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine is the original and only genuine. Accept no imitations or substitutes. Always ask for Thedford's. E 88

Last Monday night Sheriff Gore went over to the western part of the county between Billingsley and Pletcher and located a big moonshine still. He destroyed the outfit with about 200 gallons of beer. Owing to the pressing duties of the Sheriff at court this week he was unable to stay with the still and wait for the operators to start up the works. He had to tear it up and come back to Clanton in order to be here at court Tuesday morning.

THINGS MUST BE EQUALIZED

Everyone who gives any thought to the conditions that now exist in the commercial world must have long ago reached the conclusion that something must be done to equalize conditions or else there is going to be a congestion of business by an over-due amount of unrest and dissatisfaction.

Farmers of this section of the country have made this present crop of cotton at great expense, and of course they very rightfully feel that they should have a price for the staple that will return to them the money spent in making the crop with a fair profit for living expenses.

On the side of the merchant we find them stocked up with houses full of goods that cost them far above normal prices, and of course very few of these men are able to let their goods sell at a loss and continue to live.

The situation demands steady nerves. We must not get frightened. Some erratic movement migth develop into a whirlwind of desperate temperament and organized violence. The farmer should understand that the local merchants are in a tight place as well as himself. The merchant must be as lenient and sympathetic with the farmers as possible, for any merchant must surely know that the farmers of the south must have all the rope possible right now in order to get by the rocks.

If our farmers will go just as far as they can to help the local merchants, and in turn if the local merchants, bankers and business me will go the limit of their ability to help our farmers and mutual confdence and sympathy is maintained among these men, the problem will be far more easily solved. But if the farmers and local merchants and business men attempt to cut each others throats, the situation will become more puzzling and the result will be that the big sharks of the commercial world will swallow us all together.

If we keep peace among ourselves we will be better able to weather the storm.

DOG REGISTERING SLOW

Circuit Clerk, M. D. Fohee, calls our attention to the slow progress of dog registration in Chilton County this year. There are so far only a small number registered as compared with the number registered last year.

We urge the owners of dogs to take notice of the requirements of the dog registration law, and comply with the same in order to avoid any trouble. Of course we don't care whether the dogs are registered or not, but we want to see the people saved from as much trouble as possible. The law is law, and the easiest way out is not through neglect but through prompt compliance.

Those dogs not registered by Oct. 15th will be taxed double the regular amount, and the sheriff will be required to see that all dogs are tagged or killed.

The enforcement of the dog law this year is going to be more rigid than it was last year, and these who do not register dogs in the required time are courting trouble.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

At the service last Sunday morning some very interesting facts were made known as presented in the letter to be read at the Unity Association that convenes this week, as showing the progress of the church for the year just closed. Thirty-eight members have been added to the roll, sixteen of them by baptism and eighteen of them by letter. The Senior B. Y. P. U. has been re-organized with some 25 members. The Junior B. Y. P. U. has also been organized with some fifteen members. A new church site has been purchased for the sum of $3,500. For the new building enterprise $25,500 has been subscribed. The amount actually cashed in by the church for all purposes, including the campaign and local expenses amounts to the grand total of $9,960.57, or an increase over last year of $6999.17. Ninety-four visits have been made by the pastor during his present period of nine months. This is a very creditable report and is an evidence that the church is accomplishing much that is really worth while for the kingdom.

Last service a very interesting programme was rendered by many of the members of the school during the morning session of the Sunday School. Songs, readings and dramatised pieces were much appreciated.

The roll call service of the church was an interesting occasion when a goodly number of the membership answered to their names when called. An appropriate sermon was preached by the pastor and followed by the observance of the Lords Supper which made it a fitting and impressive climax to the morning worship.

The service will be held next Sunday as usual. Morning at 11 a.m. and evening at 7:30, p.m. Sunbeams will meet at 3 p.m. and the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m. The Senior B. Y. P. U. at 6:45 The public is earnestly and cordially invited to these services.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

BLOOD IS FUEL TO THE BODY

Pumped Through the System by the Heart, it Sustains the Muscles and the Tissues.

PEPTO-MANGAN HELPS BLOOD

Keep the Quality of your Blood at its Best—It means Vigorous Health and Ability to Accomplish.

Blood acts like a fuel. Pumped through the body by the heart, it sustains the muscles and tissues. It renews them. It feeds the brain—the tissues of the eye and face. That is why people look so pale and lifeless when blood is impoverished. The body tissues are being supplied with weak fuel. The blood has not enough red corpuscles. You would not eat poor food with no nourishment in it; no more should you let the fuel that supplies sustenance to your entire body be inferior. Have good blood. Improve the quality and keep it at its best.

If you look pale and feel weak, if you have lost your enthusiasm and energy, if your blood is clogged with poisons, your system is being fed with a poor rade of lood. That is no way to go around. If yu are not at your est, get at the source of the trouble right away. Put an end to half-living.

Take that ideal tonic, Pepto-Mangan to tone up your blood and purify it. Get the full enjoyment out of living. Breathe fresh air, take exercise.

eB sure to ask for "Gude's Pepto-Mangan." It comes in convenient tablet form and in liquid. One has the some medicinal value as the other. There is only one genuine Pepto-Mangan and the name "Gude's" is on the package.—adv.

JUDGE REYNOLDS OF CHILTON RUNNING AGAINST UNDERWOOD IS VISITOR TO DALLAS COUNTY

Judge L. H. Reynolds of Chilton, who is a candidate on the Republican ticket for the United States Senate against Senator Oscar W. Underwood, was a visitor to the city today and is accompanied on his rounds by W. C. Roper, W. F. DeShazo, and A. B. Manning, all leading Republicans of Chilton County.

Judge Reynolds said he wanted Selma and Dallas County to see what "a live, kicking Alabama Republican" looked like, and that his delegation had been moving around freely without invoking the protection of the game laws. Judge Reynolds volunteered the information that he would defeat Senator Underwood in the November election. He said he would address the people at Plantersville tonight.—Selma Times.

185 times - no difference!

Miss Betsy Lane Shepherd, famous concert soprano, has made this test 185 times. 185 public audiences, in 185 cities, have heard her compare her voice with its RE-CREATION by the New Edison. No one, out of a total of more than 100,000 listeners, has been able to tell when Miss Shepherd was singing, and when the New Edison — except by watching her lips.

4,000 similar tests of direct comparison, made by over fifty other celebrated vocalists and instrumentalists, have given this same result.

The New Edison is perfect realism achieved!

What kind of music "gets" you?

Tell us—and we'll show you how all its emotional power is RE-CREATED by the New Edison

Is it the soulful violin?—a mellow contralto?—the scintillating flute?—a sweet, soothing tenor?—that draws the quickest emotional response from you.

Let us play your favorite voice or instrument in a new kind of Realism Test. See whether you are touched by the RE-CREATED music in the same way that you are touched by the living music.

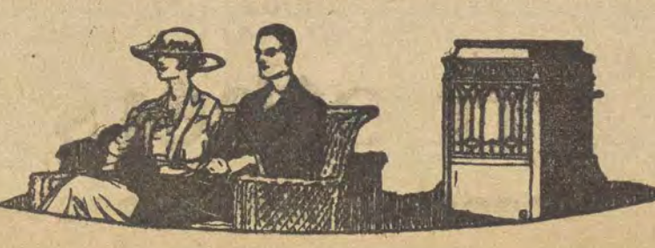
We want to show you that the New Edison RE-CREATES all the vital power in all music.

Remember what to ask for—"personal favorites" Realism Test!

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

Perfect realism is your one vehicle to the inner joys of music which you crave.



Mr. Edison spent three million dollars in the research work which gave the New Edison perfect realism. He did this in order that the phonograph might transcend its former limitations and (here we quote Mr. Edison's own words), "bring into every American home, music so realistic and so perfect in its rendition as to be an unending source of benefit and pleasure."

The instruments which proved this perfect realism in Miss Shepherd's 185 tests were all exact duplicates of the original Official Laboratory Model on which Mr. Edison spent his three million dollars. You can also have an exact duplicate of this three million dollar original. We have it in our store, and guarantee it to be capable of sustaining the same test of direct comparison.

Our Budget Plan brings your New Edison for immediate enjoyment, without asking for immediate payment. Ask about it when you come in to hear the "Personal Favorites" Realism Test.

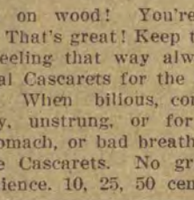
Relief for Torpid Livers and Habitual Constipation

The liver is the largest and most important organ in the body, and when the liver refuses to act, it causes constipation, biliousness, headaches, indigestion, gas, sour stomach, bad breath, dysentery, diarrhoea, pains in back and under shoulder blades and under ribs on right side. These symptoms lead to colds, influenza or other serious troubles unless corrected immediately.

An inactive liver places an extra burden on the kidneys, which overtaxes them and causes the blood to absorb and carry into the system the impurities that the liver and kidneys have failed to eliminate.

When you treat the liver alone, you treat only a third of your trouble, and that is why you have to take purgatives every few nights. Calomel or other ordinary laxatives do not go far enough. If you would treat your kidneys and blood while treating the liver, you would put your entire system in order and frequent purgatives would then be unnecessary.



Dr. W. L. Hitchcock many years ago recognized these important facts, and after much study and research, compounded what is now known as Dr. Hitchcock's Liver, Kidney and Blood Powders, three medicines combined in one. This was the Doctor's favorite prescription for many years, being used by his patients with marked success. It is a harmless vegetable remedy that will not make you sick, and you may eat anything you like while taking it.

Get a large tin box from your druggist or dealer for 25 cents, under his personal guarantee that it will give relief, tone up the liver, stimulate the kidneys to healthy action and thereby purify the blood. Keep it in the home for ready use whenever any member of the family begins to feel "out of sorts." It will prove a household friend and a valuable remedy.

Some people seem to have no use for anything common—not even common sense.

CASCARETS

"They Work while you Sleep"

Knock on wood! You're feeling fine, eh? That's great! Keep the entire family feeling that way always with occasional Cascarets for the liver and bowels. When bilious, constipated, headachy, unstrung, or for a cold, upset stomach, or bad breath, nothing acts like Cascarets. No griping, no inconvenience. 10, 25, 50 cents.—Adv.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcels Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

There could be no better testimony of the value of this remedy for these troubles than the fact that its use for the last fifty-four years has extended into many thousands of households all over the civilized world and no indication of any failure has been obtained in all that time. Very desirable as a gentle laxative. Sold everywhere.—Adv.

DODSON WARNS CALOMEL USERS

It's Mercury! Attacks the Bones, Salivates and Makes You Sick.

There's no reason why a person should take sickening, salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel.

It is a pleasant, vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick and can not salivate.

Children and grown folks can take Dodson's Liver Tone, because it is perfectly harmless.

Calomel is a dangerous drug. It is mercury and attacks your bones. Take a dose of nasty calomel today and you will feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No more biliousness, constipation, sluggishness, headache, coated tongue or sour stomach. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than horrible calomel your money is waiting for you. —Adv.

Thousands of Women

Owe Their Health To

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—overshadowing indeed is the success of this great medicine. Compared with it, all other medicines for women's ills seem to be experiments.

Why is it so successful? Simply because of its sterling worth. For over forty years it has had no equal. Women for two generations have depended upon it with confidence.

Thousands of Their Letters are on our files, which prove these statements to be facts, not mere boasting.

Here Are Two Sample Letters:

Mother and Daughter Helped.

Middleburg, Pa.—"I am glad to state that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did me much good when I was 35 years old. I was run down with female trouble and was not able to do anything, could not walk for a year and could not work. I had treatment from a physician but did not gain. I read in the papers and books about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and decided to try it. The first few bottles gave me relief and I kept on using it until I got better and was able to do my work. The Vegetable Compound also regulated my daughter when she was 15 years old. I can recommend Vegetable Compound as the best medicine I have ever used."—Mrs. W. YERGER, R. 3, Box 21, Middleburg, Pa.

Fall River, Mass.—"Three years ago I gave birth to a little girl and after she was born I did not pick up well. I doctored for two months and my condition remained the same. One day one of your little books was left at my door and my husband suggested that I try a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I started it immediately and I felt better and could eat better after the first bottle, and I continued taking it for some time. Last year I gave birth to a baby boy and had a much easier time as I took the Vegetable Compound for four months before baby came. On getting up I had no pains like I had before, and no dizziness, and in two weeks felt about as well as ever."—Mrs. THOMAS WILKINSON, 363 Columbia Street, Fall River, Mass.

Experienced Mothers know the wisdom of assisting nature before Baby's coming

IT is natural to think of the expectant mother's influence upon the unborn babe. Her food, her habits, her hygiene, and even the condition of her mind, all have a part in determining the well-being or ill-being of her infant before birth.

No woman awaiting the joys of coming motherhood should allow the days to pass without giving nature a helping hand—because the conditions of pending motherhood, existing as they do, over a protracted period of months, create almost a new state of being for a woman.

Just as she prepares herself for it, so will most favorable conditions prevail when her child is born.

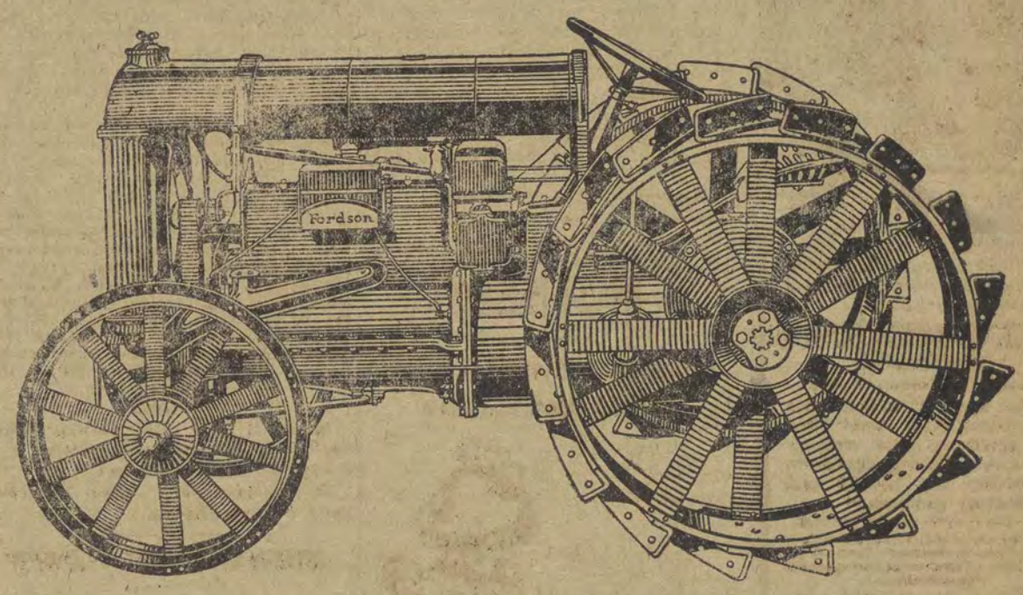
Farm Tractor

Henry Ford is Hand in Hand With the Farmer

Mr. Ford has always shown an unusual interest in the welfare of the farmers, and at this critical time in the history of the world he has shown his deep concern in the prosperity of the farmers by declaring that "War prices are no longer necessary." He has reduced price of Fordson Tractors and all Ford productc back to the pre-war figures, and still offers "SERVICE" to the Fordson owners.



When Mr. Ford set about building the Fordson tractor he had a thorough understanding of just what it should be and what it shohuld do. His early life on the farm gave him a deep insight into the daily life of the farmer; his mechanical genius saw the type of tractor needed. He began work on a farm tractor thirty-five years ago, and for more than twelve years he experimented over more than 7,000 acres of land in different kinds of soil, with different crops.

So he built the Fordson. It is so simple that a schoolboy can operate it. It is low in first cost. It is lowest in operating cost and Fordson parts and Fordson service are always to be had promptly from the dealer.

The Fordson is a profitable investment. It can be used every working day in the year. It is an inexpensive power plant that will lighten your farm work. It has proven its worth on more than one hundred thousand farms not only! in operating implements in the fields, but also in belt and pulley work. And it doesn't eat when idle.

Don't delay ordering your Fordson tractor. The demand is greater than the supply.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

The music furnished last Sunday by Mrs. Clint Jones, who is visiting her parents, and solo rendered by Miss Roberta Curry, was much appreciated by all present. A fairly good congregation was present at the morning service, and a good congregation at night. The Pathe Phonograph rendered some fine music of a sacred nature at the night service and the sermon on "Almost a Christian" was listened to with good attention by all present. The services will be held next Sunday as usual. Morning at 11 a.m. and evening at 7:30 p.m. The Sunbeam Band will meet at 3 p.m. and the Junior B. Y. P. U. at 4 p.m. The Senior B. Y. P. U. will meet at 6:30 p.m. Quite an enjoyable social occasion was spent at the home of Mrs. A. N. Miner when the B. Y. P. U. Seniors were entertained. Delightful refreshments were served to the guests present.

There are two interesting services to look forward to in the near future. At the night service next Sunday week a B. Y. P. U. Wedding will be observed. An Automobile Service will also be inaugurated two or three weeks from now. Look out for further announcements of these two services.

The regular church conference will be held at the close of the morning service next Sunday.

We regret to have to announce that for the present, owing to the slump in business and the price of cotton, the building enterprise is postponed. We trust it will not be very long.

If you are a member of the church and negligent in your attendance at its services we urge your hearty cooperation and support with your presence and gifts, a duty which you owe to your Master, and His church and Kingdom.

Everyone is cordially invited to the services of this church.

REYNOLDS AND THOMPSON SPEAK AT CENTERVILLE

According to schedule, Judge Reynolds and Fritz Thompson hooked up in another joint debate over at Centerville last Saturday afternoon in the Bibb County court house. There was a good sized audience of Bibb County citizens there to witness the contest, and great interest was manifested in the discussion.

Mr. Thompson spoke first, employing thirty-five minutes in presenting the arguments with which he supported the Democratic party and its ideals. A very forceful comparison was made by him of the record of the two parties in the past history of our country. Of course he made it look like the Democratic party had given the country every thing that was worth while, and that the Republicans were responsible for all the iniquities under the sun. During the whole of his address Fritz made a fine display of that superb ability of his to make a mountain of a mole hill. For any body who would undertake the task of defending the Democratic record of the past eight years must first of all be able to make something of nothing. Mr. Thompson concluded the first part of his speech with the challenge to Judge Reynolds to show anything constructive that the Republicans had ever done for the country in any of their administrations.

The speech of Judge Reynolds occupied forty-five minutes, all the time that was allotted to him. He went directly into a discussion of the sins of the Democratic party in Alabama in the past years of its dominance here. His treatment of national issues was directed at the League of Nations, in which he bitterly condemned the Democratic party for its efforts to entangle our country with the European nations and nullify our constitution by obligating us to the terms of the international instrument.

All the time of Judge Reynolds was consumed in telling of the utter failure made in our government by the Democratic party. Just as he was getting ready to tell of the good things that have been done by the Republicans his time was called. Then when Mr. Thompson came back with ten minutes rebuttal he was delighted to call the attention of the audience that Reynolds could not tell him one single thing worth while that had been done for the country by the Republicans.

After the speaking was concluded, a great number of those present, includng a number of ladies, personally assured Judge Reynolds of their support on November 2nd in his candidacy for the U. S. Senate.

Saturday night the two speakers engaged each other again at Blocton in one of the most pleasant and interesting joint discussions we ever listened to. Judge Reynolds spoke first, taking forty-five minutes. He made one of the most forceful presentations of the Republican cause in our country at present. Mr. Thompson followed with one hour devoted to clearing the Democratic party of all that Judge Reynolds had charged. In addition he heaped up some rather burning coals on the heads of the Republicans. But all was set right in Judge Reynolds's fifteen minutes closing speech.

It was a mighty pleasant discussion and was highly enjoyed by a number of people of both political parties. There were no ladies at the Blocton meeting.

Judge Reynolds will have the support of several voters in the city of Blocton and West Blocton.

No sense of shame nor of guilt possessed me. I was aware of having done wrong to no one. A clear conscience kept assuring me that it was misfortune and not error on my part that had brought me here. At every point in the strange chain of circumstances I felt that I had acted as a man of honor should have acted. My sense of innocence upheld me even though the deliberate malicious plotting of evil men might make it appear to the judge, to the jurors, to the whole world that I was a murderer. Even though I should be sentenced to death for killing a woman I never had seen the knowledge that at every point I had done what I still believed to have been right, brought me strong comfort and filled me with new courage.

Yet it was with lack of interest that I listened to the monotonous questioning that formed a part of the selection of a jury.

"So far as I am concerned," I had said to my counsel in our last chat, "any sort of a jury will do. Unless we succeed in upsetting the evidence against me with a crash that all the world can hear it makes no difference."

"I guess you are right," he answered, despondently, it seemed to me, "and if the worst happens, we always can take an appeal."

His reply convinced me that he, too, was anticipating the result, which I long ago had decided to be the only outcome, unless something unforeseen happened—a verdict against me of murder in the first degree.

I heard, almost with amusement, the district attorney, with eloquent oratory, tell the jury the crimes he expected to prove against me, even smiling a little at the picture he painted of a gangster seeking employment in an apartment occupied by families of wealth that he might find opportunities for plundering them, and when he was surprised in the midst of his burglarizing, brutally choking the unprotected woman whose home he was despoiling and then as she lay there, helpless and insensible, shooting her through the heart.

In fact, I quite agreed with all he said, even to his most strenuous adjectives—except for the one fact—that I knew I was not the man he was talking about. It had been a brutal, cowardly murder, and I was fully as anxious as the district attorney could possibly be to see the miscreant who had killed Miss Lutan brought to book.

The testimony that was to come, I devoutly hoped, would give some clue that would lead to the unmasking of the real murderer. The first witness called was one of the detectives who had arrested me. He told concisely, as though repeating a well rehearsed story, of having been summoned to the Granddeck and finding there the body of Daisy Lutan. He said that she had been shot through the heart.

"Was there anyone in the apartment when you arrived?"

"Yes, a doctor."

"Anyone else?"

"Yes, Mr. Wick, the superintendent of the apartment, and the prisoner."

"What did they say? How did they explain their presence there?"

"They said they had heard a shot and had come in to investigate."

He told of examining the body, questioning the physician and of making a search of the apartment for the murderer, but finding no one else there.

"What did you do then?"

"My partner and I followed the prisoner to his apartment and placed him under arrest. We searched his room and in the dresser I found a revolver with one chamber recently discharged."

"What made you suspect Nelson? Why did you arrest him?"

"My partner and I talked it over, and we both were of the opinion that it was an inside job. A burglar would have no chance to get into a building like the Granddeck and make his getaway. It was between the superintendent of the building, who was a man of responsibility, and this young fellow—who was only a caretaker."

"Had anything in Nelson's actions made you suspicious of him?"

"I noticed that he was greatly excited."

"Anything else?"

"After Nelson had gone upstairs to his own apartment, I questioned Mr. Wick. He said he had been in the elevator when he heard the shot. He had gotten out at the fifth floor, where it seemed to have come from. At the door of Miss Lutan's apartment he had found the prisoner."

"That's all," said the district attorney triumphantly.

My attorney waived cross-examination. The second detective was put on the stand and corroborated his partner's evidence in every respect. Both of them told of finding blood on my coat. The physician whom Wick had summoned gave a somewhat technical description of the bullet wound, and the prosecution put in evidence the bullet extracted from the body and the revolver the detectives had found, pointing out that they were of the same caliber.

"Call Mr. Wick," said the district attorney.

I leaned forward to listen to every word of Wick's testimony. In fact from the moment he was brought in I never took my eyes from him. It would be black enough for me if he merely stated the facts as they actually had happened, but I doubted if he would be content with that. If, as I felt certain, Wick was in the employ of the conspirators, it was more than likely that they would seek to clinch the case against me with his testimony.

He gave his name, James Wick, and his occupation as superintendent of the Granddeck.

"How long have you been employed there?"

"Ever since the building was opened."

"Where were you employed previously?"

Wick hesitated. I wondered if Gorman's surmise that he had been in prison were true, what he would say.

"Before that," he stammered, "I was in the employ of Mr. Kent in the West."

"Who is Mr. Kent?"

"He owns the Granddeck. He had known me for years. He brought me on when he built this building."

While his answer seemed to satisfy the district attorney, I was convinced from Wick's nervousness that he was concealing something, that further questioning into his past might lead to unexpected developments.

"Are you acquainted with the defendant?"

"Very slightly."

"How long have you known him?"

I was listening intently. Would he admit knowing that I was a relative of old Rufus Gaston?

"I don't really know him," Wick explained. "I've seen him two or three times. Mr. Gaston, one of my tenants, told me that he was going away and that he had given the key of his apartment to a young man named Nelson whom he had employed as caretaker. He said that the caretaker would arrive at ten o'clock on the Sunday morning that the Gastons went away."

"And did the defendant arrive at that time—at the time he was expected?"

"He did not. What first attracted my attention to him was that he sneaked into the building earlier than he was expected."

"You say he sneaked in," the district attorney's voice expressed a proper horror of such conduct. "Please explain to the jury what you mean by that."

"Instead of announcing his arrival, he watched his chance and waited till one of the tenants was coming in. He slipped in beside her and went up in the elevator without being announced. Naturally the elevator man thought he was a friend of the young lady tenant."

"How do you know he was not a friend of the young woman with whom he entered the building?"

"I asked him if he was acquainted with her, and he said he was. Later that same day she passed him in the hall of the building. I noticed that she did not speak to him or recognize him in any way."

The prosecutor waved his hand to the jury as if to say, "You see, gentlemen," and followed on with another question.

"Was the defendant's conduct in the building in any other way such as to arouse your suspicion?"

"He'd hardly got located before he began buzzing the telephone girl, asking her all kinds of questions about the other tenants in the building. He kept trying to get her to go out to dinner with him."

"Did she go?"

"Yes, she did. She reported his actions to me, and I suggested that she go with him and try to find out what his name was."

"What else do you know about the defendant?"

"That's all—except—"

"Except what?"

"What I saw on the night Miss Lutan was murdered."

"Tell the circumstances."

"I was in the elevator coming down from the top floor. I heard the sound of a shot. It seemed to come from the fifth floor. I got off there to investigate. As the door of the Lutan apartment stood Mr. Nelson."

"What was he doing there?"

"Just standing there. It looked to me as if he had just been coming out and that when he saw me he had stopped suddenly."

"What was his manner? Describe the position in which he was standing to the jury." Again there was in the district attorney's voice a triumphant ring.

"He was all excited and tremblylike," Mr. Wick went on, "and his eyes seemed to be bulging out of his head."

"What did he say?"

"I asked him if he had heard a shot and he said that he had. I asked if it had not come from the Lutan apartment and he said that it had seemed so to him. I wanted to keep my eye on him, so I took out my pass-key and suggested that we investigate together. He did not seem at all anxious to go back into the apartment with me, but the elevator man was standing there, so he came along and was with me when I found the body. I kept him there until the police came."

"Is That Your Real Name?"

I had expected that my counsel would offer objections to Wick's testimony, especially to his having said that I did not appear anxious to "go back" into the apartment, but McGregor contented himself with two questions.

"Do you not know that Mr. Spalding Nelson is a grand-nephew of Mr. Rufus Gaston? Did not Mr. Gaston tell you of this relationship?"

"He did not," lied Wick calmly.

"How was Mr. Nelson first standing—when you got out of the elevator—when you first saw him?"

I recalled my attitude distinctly. I had been standing facing the door, straining my ears to catch any sound in the apartment. When I heard the elevator stopping, I had looked around over my shoulder as Wick emerged.

"He was standing," said Wick, of his own accord, speaking direct to the jurors, "with his back against the door. One hand—his right hand—was behind him. I thought at first he might have a revolver in it and drew one I always carry, but he had not. It looked as if he had just slipped out of the door and was reaching behind him to close it when I discovered him."

"That will be all," said my counsel, to my great disappointment. Throughout the mixed medley of truth and lies that Wick had been telling, there had been manifest to me his deliberate purpose to discredit me and cast suspicion on me. I felt certain that an abler lawyer could quickly have riddled his testimony, but McGregor showed no disposition to take advantage of his opportunity.

Nellie Kelly was called. Briefly she told of her job—switchboard operator at the Granddeck. She corroborated Wick's story of my first arrival at the Granddeck and bore out his statements about my having chatted with her and also told of having gone to dinner with me. When I had begun questioning her about other tenants, she said, she excused herself and went to the telephone and called up the Granddeck for advice as to how she should answer. For some reason, she said, when she returned after phoning, the defendant had not questioned her further but had seemed anxious to get away from the restaurant.

"You say," said McGregor, as he began her cross-examination, "that your name is Nellie Kelly. Is that your real name?"

My counsel's unexpected question came as a thunderbolt to the opposition. The whole courtroom seemed to sense that something crucial was about to be brought out. The jurors to a man leaned forward to listen for her answer. The district attorney, plainly puzzled, half rose in his seat and then subsided. Wick's face went white, and the girl herself started and her eyes turned helplessly to Wick, as if seeking instructions as to how to answer.

"Is that your real name?" McGregor repeated, this time a little more emphatically.

"It is—that is—it was," she stammered.

"It was your name," said McGregor sarcastically, "and what might be your name now?"

"My name," the girl hesitated, as if struggling with herself, and then casting a defiant look in Wick's direction, she answered with pride rather than with boldness, "my name is Mrs. Edward Moore."

"The wife of Lefty Moore, the burglar in Sing Sing, you mean, do you not?" sneered McGregor.

"I am," she replied with a proud lifting of her chin and a flash in her eye. "I'm Lefty Moore's wife, and I'm proud that I am—his lawfully wedded wife and I don't care who knows it. I love Lefty Moore."

There was instant consternation in the district attorney's camp. With visions of discredited testimony confronting him, he was on his feet roaring objections. Throughout the whole courtroom there was a sibilant stir, and the judge began rapping for order.

Close behind my counsel my mother had been sitting, accompanied by some woman wearing a heavy veil. I had paid little attention to her hitherto, supposing that it was some hotel maid whom my mother had hired to accompany her to court, for so far as I knew my mother had no women acquaintances in New York. This woman now, to my amazement, reached forward and plucked McGregor by the sleeve. As she pushed back her veil to whisper to him, to my utter surprise and consternation I saw that it was Barbara Bradford.

How had Barbara come to be sitting there in court at my mother's side? Delighted as I was at seeing her, I was puzzled and perplexed. I had sternly forbidden both Gorman and McGregor from making any plans to call her as a witness. I had urged her to keep silent and not become involved in any way in the case. My eyes sought hers for an explanation, but after that one whispered word, that I was unable to hear, she had quickly drawn her veil over her face.

"Your honor," said McGregor, rising, "in view of this unexpected testimony, I should like to request a recess."

"Granted," said the judge. "Adjourned until two o'clock."

CHAPTER XIV.

Impatiently I waited for the recess to be over. I could not understand what was happening. Neither Gorman nor my counsel came near me. Even my mother made no attempt, so far as I could learn, to see me. The one glimpse I had had of Barbara there in the courtroom had fired me again with wild desires to see her. My feelings were equally divided between hoping she would and hoping she would not make any effort to reach me—at least not until my trial was over.

That something was happening to keep them all away—something perhaps vital to my freedom—I was certain. On no other ground could I explain the fact of none of them seeking me for consultation. Yet what it might be I could not possibly conjecture. Eagerly I hurried into the courtroom again as soon as the recess was over, at once turning my eyes to see if the girl I loved was there.

Quickly I located her still sitting beside my mother. Her veil now was boldly thrown back, and as she gazed at me with sparkling eyes and a confident smile, I felt sure that across the distance she was trying to send some message of good tidings. My mother's face, too, I observed, now wore a happier look, and about Gorman and McGregor both was an air of greater confidence than either had manifested before.

What had happened? What had they found out? Eagerly I waited developments.

The telephone girl was recalled to the stand and her cross-examination resumed.

"Mrs. Moore," began McGregor—and I observed curiously that his voice in addressing her no longer was harsh and sarcastic but merely suave and impelling—"you have testified here as a witness against Mr. Spalding Nelson, accused of having murdered Daisy Lutan, have you not?"

Chautauqua or Circus.

The manager was strolling about the big Chautauqua tent, which had just been set up in a small Missouri town, and the boys were laying the plank seats, when the whir of engines was heard, and two automobiles appeared, racing furiously toward the Chautauqua grounds. They stopped side by side in the dust and smoke of heavily set brakes, and the drivers leaped from their seats and ran at top speed toward the astonished Chautauqua manager.

"I'm a butcher!" gasped the first.

"I'm a butcher!" cried the second.

Then both together they shouted, "I want the contract to furnish meat for the animals!"—Youth's Companion.

Short Story About Shellac.

Shellac is the joint product of insects and plants and comes from India. The lac insects are about 1.25 of an inch long, a bright red in color. They suck the juices of plants, digest them and exude them in the form of resin, which soon encases the whole insect. When the young insects have swarmed out, the resin is scraped from the branches, ground, washed mixed with colophony and orpiment cooked slowly and drawn out into the thin sheets we know as shellac.

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS TEACHING CITIZENSHIP

The newly organized Alabama League of Women Voters is very busy conducting Schools of Citizenship in various sections of the state for the purpose of educating the newly enfranchised women in their rights and duties as citizens. The League, which is a purely non-partisan body, standing for no political party, has for its objects education in good citizenship and the promotion of improved legislation.

Already seven large Citizenship Schols have been held under direction of Mrs. T. T. Cotnam of Arkansas, who is an official of the National League of Women Voters.

In Birmingham, a series of Citizenship Schools is in progress. Two have already been held most successfully. Another begins on Oct. 11, in the rooms of the Civic Association, from seven to nine P. M. Mrs. Neil Wallace is also conducting a school at New Castle, and one is planned for Warrior, and another at East Lake. The topics covered in the Schools are: Outlines of the City County, State and National Government, the Courts, Married Women's Property Laws; the Laws particularly affecting women and children; and most interesting of all, a demonstration in voting, using real ballots and ballot boxes.

What The League Stands For.

These are some of the things that the League of Women Voters stands for: Child Welfare, Education, Reduction of the Cost of Living, Protection of Women in Industry, Public Health and the Protection of Public Morals, Independent Citizenship for Married Women. A number of cities and counties have already organized Leagues of Women Voters notably: Birmingham, Montgomery, Mobile, Gadsden, Huntsville, Selma, Gadsden, Jasper, Anniston and others are planning immediate organization.

The chief work of the League at present is urging the qualified women in Alabama to come out and register between now and Oct. 26th. Their slogan is: "Every qualified Alabama Woman Registered." The headquarters of the League is 1818 Second Avenue, Birmingham, where those who care to, may write for further information and literature, as well as to secure teachers for Citizenship Schools. Mrs. Jack Bowron of Birmingham is State President.

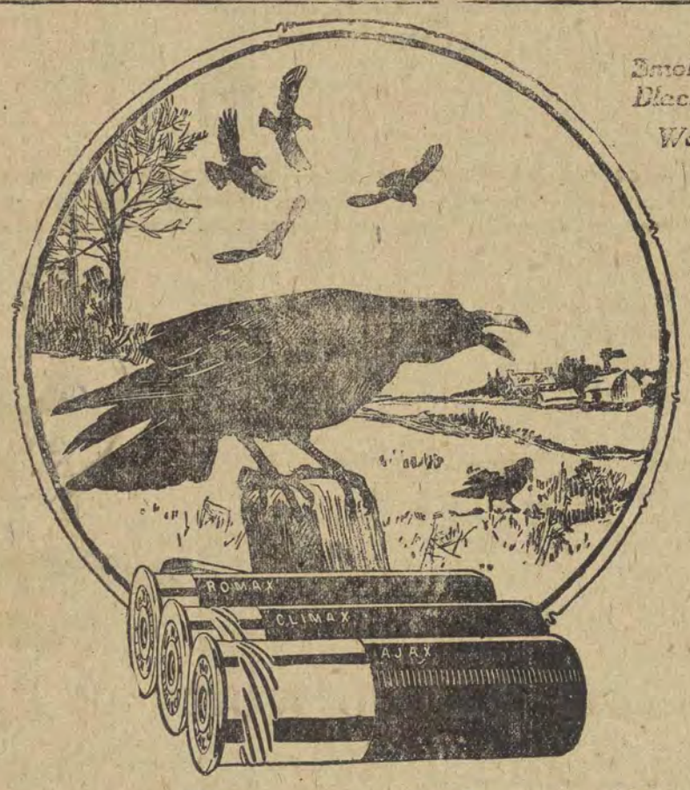
3. That the known bondholders, mortgagees, and other security holders owning or holding 1 per cent or more of total amount of bonds, mortgages, or other securities are: none.



4. That the two paragraphs next above, giving the names of the owners stockholders and security holders, if any, contain not only the list of stockholders and security holders as they appear upon the books of the company, but also, in cases where the stockholder or security holder appears upon the books of the company as trustee or in any other fiduciary relation, the name of the person or corporation for whom such trustee is acting, is given; also that the said two paragraphs contain statements embracing affiant's full knowledge and belief as to the circumstances and conditions under which stockholders and security holders who do not appear upon the books of the company as trustees, hold stock and securities in a capacity other than that of a bona fide owner; and this affiant has no reason to believe that any other person, association, or corporation has any interest direct or indirect in the said stock, bonds, or other securities than as so stated by him.

Another Reason Why Alabama Farmers and Merchants are Backing the Seaport Amendment

This is the big cotton warehouse built at the port of New Orleans by the Harbor Commission of Louisiana without any cost to taxpayers of that state. It has a capacity of 275,000 bales of cotton, and is serving cotton growers over a wide area. Its value to the farmers of Louisiana is shown in the fact that additional units, with a capacity of 184,000 bales, are now under construction.

Alabama farmers need a big bonded warehouse at the State's only port, Mobile. A bonded warehouse where cotton can be assembled and prepared for export. A warehouse where cotton can be stored and receipts issued which can be either sold or used as collateral for loans. Cotton growers and dealers recognize as a first step the plan of the American Cotton Association to federalize cotton warehouses throughout the State. The efficient operation of a system of such warehouses will require a publicly owned cotton warehouse at Alabama's seaport to act as a reservoir to the marketing of the crop.

The way to secure this needed facility is to vote YES for the Seaport Amendment, November 2nd. A cotton warehouse, and other needed port facilities, earn enough to pay for themselves and can be built without a cent of cost to taxpayers and without any appropriation from the State's Treasury.

WOMEN VOTES AND POLITICAL PARTY HOPES.

The enfranchisement of women and their exercise of the ballot represents immensely more than the mere mechanical process of their going to the polls and casting their votes along with their husbands, fathers and brothers. Leaders of the political parties in Chilton County see capital for their political future in the voting of the women. The Democrats, if the thing were managed according to their own plans, would operate the registration and suffrage of women to the undoing of the Republican strength in our county. On the other had, the Republicans have plans which if perfected, would not only hold the present Republican majority but greatly increase it.

It is a dead certainty that the most of the women who register between now and October 26th will vote on November 2nd. No one can tell in advance how they will vote. Many political wise-acres persist that they will just vote like their husbands do, and that will end the argument. But that is not a rule that can always be relied upon. They may do that in party questions but when it comes to moral questions, they will vote their womens instinct. That will frequently go against the grain with some husbands.

Democrats are hustling to register Democratic women. Republicans are hustling to register Republican women. If both parties in this county register their women, there will be no difference in the result on November 2nd than if the women had not voted at all. If the Democrats get the best of the Registration in numbers, they will have the same margin of advantage in the voting. If the Republicans would hold to what they have in Chilton County, their women must be registered now and voted on November 2nd.

The speculation as to what will be the effect on the final result is interesting to those who see any sport in watching political activity.

TO ALABAMA WOMEN:

The books are open for the registration of the new voters, and will be open until October 26. After that date they will close. Alabama women should know that women who fail to register by the date named cannot register till January, 1922, unless the books shall be specially ordered open in July, 1921. That means that if women fail to grasp this opportunity to register they cannot vote in the general election in November and cannot vote in any other elections which may be held in the State. It is therefore the plain duty of Alabama women to register promptly, and thus equip themselves to take part as they should in their State elections.

To vote is a high privilege; to vote righteously is a sacred duty; to vote always, whenever opportunity presents itself, upon all questions, is a long-delayed right. Our women should seek to inform themselves upon all questions relating to good citizenship, that their votes may be for the betterment of their State. They should vote seriously, using their vote like a prayer for the good of future generations.

It is unthinkable that Alabama women will fail to do their duty.

STOP THE NOISE

The Town Council of Clanton is to be commended for its steps in the effort to cut out some of the useless noises on the streets of the town. The following ordinance relative to the subject, will if properly enforced, relieve us from many of the useless noises that seem to be inflicted upon the innocent public with pleasure by some of the truck drivers and autoists:

"That it shall be unlawful for any person to run or operate an automobile or truck, motor cycle, or any motor driven vehicle upon or along the streets and alleys of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, unless said automobile, automobile truck, motor cycle, or motor power driven vehicle is equipped with a standard muffler or device commonly known as a muffler and so attached to same that the exhaust from the motor of same shall go through said muffler in such a manner as to reduce the noise of said motor." A penalty of from $1 to $100 is provided for violations of the ordinance.

To the officers of the town who will have the enforcement of this ordinance in their hands, we respectfully refer those drivers of trucks who persist in running recklessly up and down our streets with the thottle wide open and causing the thing to shoot and pop equal to a major offensive against the Germans. Also there are some of the grass hopper drivers who have got awful noisy whistles on their cars, and they frequently get up a full head of steam on one side of town, turn loose the wild cat, and proceed to paint a red streak clear through to the other limit of the city.

These sportive gentlemen need the above ordinance to teach them some public manners, and the people need it for protection. May the Town give us a rigid enforcement of the same.

AN ORDINANCE

To prohibit the running or operating of automobiles, automobile trucks, motor cycles and motor power driven vehicles on or along the streets and alleys of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, unless same is equipped with a standard muffler or device commonly called a "muffler" to reduce the noise of the exhaust of the motor of same and to make it unlawful to operate any of said vehicles with the "cut-out" open or exhaust pipe open.

Be it ordained by the Town Council of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, as follows:

1. That it shall be unlawful for any person to run or operate an automobile, automobile truck, motor cycle or any motor power driven vehicle upon or along the streets and alleys of the Town of Clanton, Alabama, unless said automobile, automobile truck, motor cycle of motor power driven vehicle is equipped with a standard "muffler" or device commonly known as a muffler and so attached to same that the exhaust from the motor of same shall go through said muffler in such manner as to reduce the noise of said motor.

2. That it shall be unlawful for any person to operate or run any automobile, automobile truck, motor cycle or motor power driven vehicle of any kind upon or along the streets and alleys of the Town of Clanton, Alabama with the exhaust pipe of said car open by a "cut-out" or with the cut out open, on said exhaust pipe.

3. That any person violating either of the foregoing sections, upon conviction must be fined not less than $1.00 and not more than $100, and may also be sentenced to hard labor for the Town of Clanton, Alabama, for not more than thirty days.

APPEAL FROM THE SHERIFF

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 12, 1920.

Registration of dogs is from Oct. 1 to 15, 1920. After this date all dogs not registered become delinquent. I will prosecute every person who harbors a dog on his premises not registered. I did not make this law, but it is a law and I think it should be enforced as other laws. All owners of dogs will be governed accordingly. Be sure when you register dogs to put the tag on to stay. The law requires the dog to be tagged. If you lose your tag you will have to register again.

Yours respectfully,
J. L. GORE, Sheriff.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

ALABAMA WOMEN NOW ENTITLED TO VOTE---SHOULD REGISTER IMMEDIATELY---INSTRUCTIONS TO FOLLOW

Women Voters of Alabama.

You should not fail to register! You should not fail to vote! You owe it to your State! You owe it to yourself!

The Federal Suffrage Amendment, which passed Congress in June, 1919, has been ratified by thirty-seven states, and thus becomes a part of the Constitution of the United States. Under its terms, "the right of Citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged on account of sex."

Thus automatically the qualified women of all the states of the Union are enfranchised. The Amendment having been ratified by the necessary three-fourths of the state becomes in this way the law for Alabama as well as for all the other states. It supercedes and sweeps aside any state laws that prohibit women from voting. It strikes the word "male" out of the Constitution of the State of Alabama, and all Alabama women who are otherwise qualified now possess the right to the ballot.

Women, Register to Vote!

Women of Alabama, you may now vote. The privilege of the franchise is yours, but, in order to exercise it, you must first register. A special session of the Legislature has just been held in order to provide machinery for the registration of the newly enfranchised women. This should have been done at the regular session in 1919; in fact, bills providing for registering the women in case of the ratification of the Suffrage Amendment were introduced, but the legislators, the majority of whom were opposed to giving the vote to women, did not forsee the early ratification of the Amendment, and hence refused to pass these enabling laws. If they had at that time listened to the pleas of the suffrage sympathizers in the House and Senate, no extra session would have been necessary, and the State would have been saved an expense of approximately $50,000.00.

Necessary Qualifications.

Under the registration bill passed last week by the special session of the Legislature, the qualifications of women are the same as those for men, as follows:

1st. A woman must be 21 years of age or over.

2nd. A woman must have lived in the State at least two years, in the county at least one year, and in the precinct or beat at least ninety days.

3rd. A woman must be able to read and write, or must pay taxes on property assessed at $300.00.

Any woman who possesses the above qualifications may register between now and October 26th and vote in the general election on November 2nd, and in all local elections.

What About the Poll Tax?

All women in Alabama between 21 and 45 years of age who wish to vote in future must pay a poll tax of $1.50 per year. This money goes to help support the public schools in which women are most vitally interested. This tax became due on October 1st and will become delinquent on February 1st. It is desirable that every woman voter pay her poll tax as soon as possible. She must pay it to the county tax collector. However, she cannot be kept from voting on November 2nd because she has not paid it. If she has not paid her poll tax by February, 1921, her name will be dropped from the voting list and she will not be allowed to vote after that time until she has paid it. However, it is certain that every loyal and law-abiding woman voter between 21 and 45 will be glad to pay her poll tax for the support of the public schools and will do so before February 1921.

Where and How to Register.

The Governor will appoint registrars for each county in the State. These registrars will sit at the County Court House (or some other designated place) from now until October 26th. You must go before the registrars and register and they will issue you a certificate which will entitle you to vote. You must vote at the same place where the men of your family, your husband or brother or father vote.

It Is Your Duty to Vote.

Women of Alabama, remember that the ballot is a privilege, since it represents a greater measure of freedom than ever enjoyed before by women; that it is a duty, since the vote was given that you might aid in the great work of law-making and building up the State; that it is a benefit, since you who vote attain a definite rank as citizens in return for the service rendered by the casting of your ballots.

Vote for your homes and for your children. Vote honestly, vote intelligently, vote independently, for the most honest, the most able, the most upright candidates.

Register—Vote.

UNITY BAPTIST ASSOCIATION

The sixty-sixth session of the Unity Baptist Association met at the Verbena Church on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 5th and 6th, and a large delegation of messengers was present from the various churches of the Association. The Introductory Sermon was preached by Rev. W. A. Goss and was well received by all present. The honor as moderator of the association was given to Rev. W. J. Ruddick, who has been the efficient secretary for some thirty one years. Mr. Grady F. Harris of Clanton was elected as the successor to Bro. Ruddick as clerk and Mr. Judson Strock of Verbena as treasurer.

It was a matter for regret that most of the reports furnished for the various interests of our state in the work of missions and other enterprises were not original reports, but such as were furnished from the head quarters of the state. While such reports furnished were good and contained much useful and valuable information they lacked the original and personal touch of the persons appointed to furnish these reports. The reports read however showed much progress and encouragement in the work through the Seventy Five Million Campaign. The need for the prompt payment of pledges now due on the campaign was specially emphasized in order that our Home, Foreign and State Boards may not be embarassed or handicaped in the enlargement of the work they have plenned and already undertaken.

Two representatives of our State workers were present. One in the person of Mr. D. F. Green, the Secretary of the State Convention who at considerable sacrifice financially has accepted this responsible position. The address given by him was full of pathos and devotion as he appealed to the people for their co-operation in the great work of the kingdom. Mr. E. G. Moore, the Secretary for our Sunday School work also made good address in the interest of this work, and for the organization of an Associational Sunday School convention.

The report on the Digest of Letters and Documents showed that 180 had been received for baptism during the year, a regrettable decrease of 47. That thirteen only out of the thirty churches reported prayer meetings. Approximately $6,300 had been paid in on the Seventy Five Million Campaign leaving over $4,000 yet unpaid of the apportionment asked for from this association.

During the session of the association spirit of liberality prevailed when the sum of $110 was laid upon the table as voluntary offerings from the people for the following causes: Orphans Home $30; assistance of two ministerial students at Newton College $55; and the roofing of the White Pond Church $25.

A recommendation for the adoption of an honest church letter form showing the proper standing of a church member when transferred to another church, was endorsed by the association, also the alignment of two or more churches, to call and support the same pastor, to give his entire time to the work of the ministry and the development of the churches he is called to serve, was endorsed by the association.

The Association will meet next year with the Ebenezer Church and the Introductory Sermon will be preached by Rev. P. G. Carter of Clanton. A very fine spirit of harmony and unity prevailed throughout the meeting, and the entertainment of the Verbena Church and community was all that could be desired.—(Contributed).

VERBENA SCHOOL NEWS

Every effort is being put forth by the people of Verbena in the establishment of a full affiliated high school. They are hoping to have the building erected and everything ready for work by the beginning of the next school session.

WOMEN VOTERS MUST REGISTER BEFORE OCTOBER 26

Under the new election law which was passed by the Legislature recently in special session, and signed by the governor on October 4th, the time set for registering all voters who have become qualified since Jan. 5, 1920 (which includes all women voters) covers the days from now until midnight of Tuesday, October 26th. It will thus be seen that the time is short. Those women who fail to register during this time will have no further opportunity to do so until 1922, unless, at the discretion of their county Board of Commissioners, the books are open for ten days during the month of July, 1921. This is permitted, but is left entirely to the County Commissioners as to whether or not it shall be done.

Time Is Short.

There is only a little over two weeks left in which women can register this year, to vote in the important November elections. The woman who loses this opportunity will not be able to vote at all for at least one year, and probably two, and cannot cast her vote for president of the United States for four years. Therefore, it behooves every patriotic, home-loving woman to get busy and register. Registering and voting is a very simple matter, although it is a most important duty as well as privilege. If a woman is 21 years old or over, if she can read and write or if she or her husband pays taxes on property assessed at $300.00, and if she has lived in the state at least two years, in the county at least one year, and in the precinct at least ninety days, she is entitled to register, and all that is necessary is for her to present herself before the Board of Registrars betwen now and Oct. 26th.

Board of Registrars.

The Board of Registrars is composed of three members for each county, appointed by the Governor, State Auditor and Commissioner of Agriculture and Industries. They are allowed to meet in different parts of the county at their discretion, except that they must met at the county seat from Oct. 19 to Oct. 26th. They must give notice of their meeting places. and are required to register all qualified persons who present themselves. They will give each person who is rgistered a certificate which will serve as a permit to vote. If any woman is in doubt as to where and when to register, it will be safe for her to come to her county courthouse on any day except Sunday, between Oct. 19th and Oct. 26th, and there she will find the Board of Registrars in session.

Nothing is more important just now than getting the women registered. Wide awake women should inform themselves as to the movements of their Board of Registrars and go to meet them without fail.

CHILTON COUNTY SINGING CONVENTION

Tells How Ziron Iron Tonic Helped His Daughter After Operation for Appendicitis.

AFTER any serious illness, the first thing you notice when you begin to get around is your lack of strength and energy—a tired, weak feeling.

The sooner you get your strength back the better. The thing to do is to eat plenty of good, nourishing food, get all the fresh air you can, exercise conservatively, and take Ziron Iron Tonic three times a day.

Your doctor will tell you this is sound advice, and urge you to follow it.

Read this letter from Mr. J. B. Kelly, vice-president of the First National Bank, Graceville, Fla.: "My daughter had been in bad health since last April. She was operated on for appendicitis. She has been taking Ziron for two weeks. Her appetite is better than it has been. Her nerves are better, and she says she feels better . . . I know that Ziron is good for weak and feeble people."

Ziron is a scientific, reconstructive tonic, prepared from valuable strength-building ingredients, for weak people with thin blood. Druggists sell Ziron on a money-back guarantee. Try it.

185 audiences tried it this way

MOST people know that the musical enjoyment which they get out of a phonograph depends upon one thing. That thing is the phonograph's realism.

This picture shows the best way to test a phonograph's realism. Miss Betsy Lane Shepherd, the famous soprano, is standing beside the New Edison, and singing in direct comparison with the New Edison's RE-CREATION of her voice.

185 audiences, aggregating more than 100,000 people, have actually heard this comparison. None could distinguish between her living voice and its RE-CREATION.

This is one of the phenomenal records of realism. The New Edison holds all other records of realism, too, because no other phonograph attempts this comparison-test—or could sustain it.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

You try it this way

—the way we use in our store!—the Realism Test! Test the New Edison's Realism against the pleasure you know music can bring.

Tell us what kind of voice or instrument gives you truest musical enjoyment. Listen while we play your favorite on the New Edison. The Realism Test will enable you to gauge whether the New Edison's RE-CREATION gives you all of this enjoyment.

This is your test! It will help you determine what the New Edison's Realism means, in terms of your own musical enjoyment.

Ask for it! The "Personal Favorites" Realism Test.

Another thing to ask about is our Budget Plan. It disposes of the money question, in a way that will appeal to your common-sense and to your pocketbook.

No More Misery After Eating

Just Takes An Eatonic

"The first dose of Eatonic did me wonders. I take it at meals and am no longer bothered with indigestion," writes Mrs. Ellen Harris.

Thousands of people, like this dear lady, gratefully testify about Eatonic, which does its wonders by taking up and carrying out the excess acidity and gases which bring on indigestion, heartburn, bloating, belching and food repeating. Acid stomach also causes about seventy other non-organic ailments. Protect yourself. A big box of Eatonic costs but a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.

WHERE TOMMY MADE A POINT

Remarkable That School Teacher Had Never Noticed That Quite Simple Truth Before.

Arithmetic, according to the average small boy, was simply invented in order to give teachers a good excuse for punishing their unhappy pupils. And certainly little Tommy Smith found it the unpleasant feature of his young life.

"Now, Tommy Smith," said the school teacher one morning, during the usual hour of torture, "what is the half of eight?"

"Which way, teacher?" asked the youngster cautiously.

"Which way!" replied the astonished lady. "What do you mean?"

"Well, on top or sideways, teacher?" said Tommy.

"What difference does that make?"

"Why," Tommy explained, with a pitying air, "half of the top of eight is nought, but half of it sideways is three."—London Answers.

COMMON ERROR IN GRAMMAR

Words "Begun" and "Began" Are Wrongly Used by Those Careless in Their Speech.

It is quite common to hear some one say, "I begun to do that work yesterday," "the battle begun between the two armies," etc. This use of "begun" to express the past tense (sometimes called the preterit) of "begin" is not incorrect, according to some authorities on the uses of words, but there is a fairly general agreement that the better word to use is "began." If you wish to safeguard yourself against possible criticism, say "I began to do that work yesterday," "The battle began between the two armies," etc., not "begun."

Richard Grant White, in "Words and Their Uses," a high authority, criticizes and condemns the use of "begun" instead of "began" to express the past.

Of course, it is incorrect beyond any doubt to say, "I have began" to express the perfect tense of "begin." Say, "I have begun," never "I have began."—Columbus Dispatch.

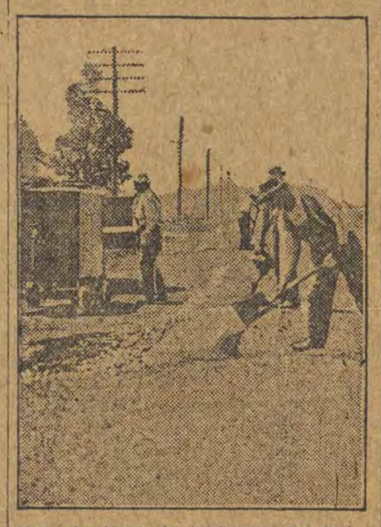
IMPROVED HIGHWAYS



INCREASE IN MOTOR TRAFFIC

Statistics Show Increase of 1,418,829 Cars Over 1918—Roads Must Be Maintained.

That the present interest in the construction of new highways should not divert attention from properly maintaining highways already improved is a point which the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture, has had occasion to emphasize many times in recent months, particularly in view of the enormous increase in motor vehicle traffic which is taking place. The bureau recently completed a compilation of statistics from all the states of the Union showing that there were a total of 7,565,446 registered motor cars (including motor cycles and trucks) in the United States in 1919. This is an increase of 23 per cent, or 1,418,829 motor cars over 1918. Such figures indicate that the country's highways are being used far more than in the past, it is pointed out, and in consequence added attention must be given to the repair problem. The increase in the number of cars for 1919 over 1918 represents about 10 per cent more cars than the total number registered in the entire United States for 1913.

Additional use of roads and streets has, of course, been accompanied by additional revenue paid to state and local governments in the form of license fees, which in nearly all states are devoted to highway needs. The registration and license fees for automobiles, trucks, and motor cycles in use in 1919 totaled $64,697,255.58—an increase of 20 per cent over 1918. The total revenues for New York and Pennsylvania the past year were about double the revenues received for all motor vehicle registrations and licenses in the entire United States in 1912.

Certain of the states, notably Maryland, have experienced difficulty in securing road-building materials owing to labor shortage, hampered transportation facilities, etc. Maryland has had to make a special appeal to the interstate commerce commission for aid in getting enough material shipped in to properly care for road repairs.

ALL RECEIVE SOME BENEFIT

Good Roads Are Advantageous Alike to Producer and Consumer—Storage Charges Less.

When the roads of the great producing zones of this country are improved, benefits will accrue not only to producers, but to consumers. When marketing is distributed throughout the year, storage charges must decline. This country is paying at present large storage prices on foodstuffs. The disadvantages of freight congestion in the fall cannot be entirely eliminated in many places, but good roads will certainly have a marked tendency to distribute hauling over longer periods.

It is reasonable to say, therefore, that good roads mean that diversified farming will be encouraged, the area of profitable production increased, the opportunity for favorable marketing improved, and more uniform distribution of farm products secured.

MUCH DEPENDS ON HIGHWAYS

Prospective Purchaser of Farm Is Concerned About Many Things, More Especialy Roads.

A prospective purchaser of a farm is concerned about the adaptability of the soil to specific agricultural activities such as general farming, stock raising, dairying or market gardening, and must inquire into conditions affecting such industries. He is also concerned about suitable home life for his family, schools, churches and community social life, all of which are very much dependent upon roads.

COUNTRY'S FIRST CORN MILL

Recent Discoveries Establish Its Site at a Point on the St. Croix River, Eastport, Me.

The site of what undoubtedly was the first tidewater mill on the American continent has been discovered at Red Beach, Me., where Low's brook empties into the St. Croix river at a point nearly opposite the southern end of Dochet's island, where De Monts and his men settled in the year 1604, three years before the settlement of Jamestown. In excavating for a fish pond near his summer home, R. S. McCarter of Cambridge, Mass., unearthed the unmistakable remains of an ancient dam of stone and timbers. Comparing the site with the original map of the island, authorities agreed that it must have been the site of the water mill mentioned in the old records as employed by Sieur De Monts and his men to grind their corn, being the largest stream within an area of several miles on either side of the river.

REPORT COTTON GINNED IN CHILTON COUNTY

The report of the census bureau sent out on October 4, 1920 given the following figures relative to the ginning of cotton in Chilton County this season.

Number of bales ginned prior to September 25, 1920 was 843;

Number of bales ginned prior to September 25, 1919 was 2,049.

By comparrison of these figures it will be seen that from some cause or other, there are not nearly so many bales ginned this year as there were at the same date last year. There is either a great falling off of production this year, or else the people are not having it ginned. Probably both conditions exist.

WHAT you lose thru baking failure must be added to baking costs—it has to be paid for.

Calumet Baking Powder will save you all of that. Because when you use it—there are no failures—no losses. Every baking is sweet and palatable—and stays moist, tender and delicious to the last tasty bite.

That's a big saving—but that isn't all. You save when you buy Calumet and you save when you use it.

It is reasonable in cost and possesses more than the ordinary leavening strength. You pay less and use less. You get the most in purity, dependability and wholesomeness.

In every way—it is the best way to keep down baking costs. That is what has made it the world's biggest selling baking powder—has kept it the favorite of millions of housewives for more than thirty years.

Good wholesome bakings can be made only of good materials, no other way, so use only good baking powder and good plain flour (not self-rising flour).

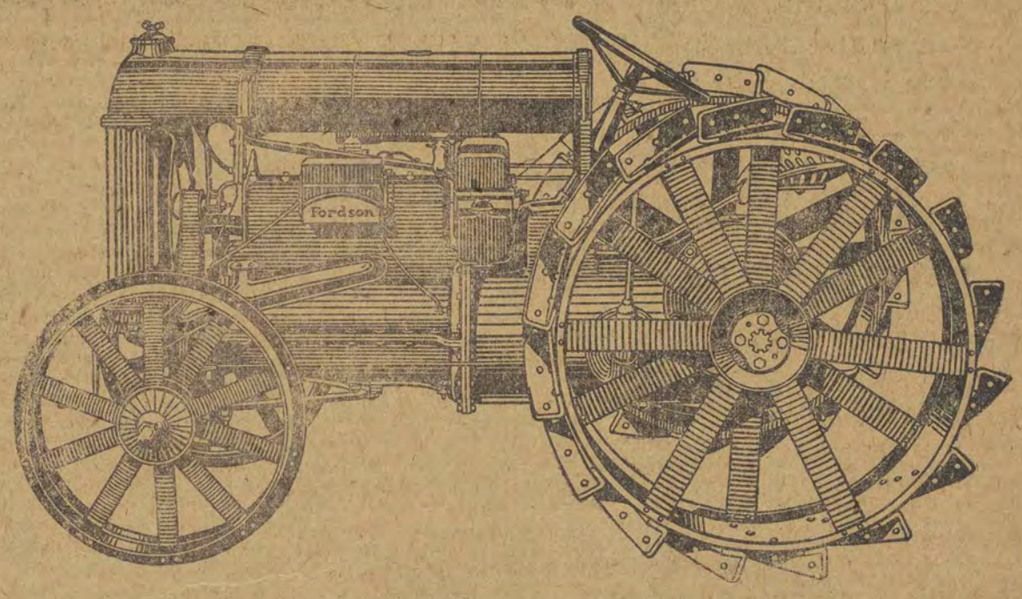
Farm Tractor

Henry Ford is Hand in Hand With the Farmer

Mr. Ford has always shown an unusual interest in the welfare of the farmers, and at this critical time in the history of the world he has shown his deep concern in the prosperity of the farmers by declaring that "War prices are no longer necessary." He has reduced price of Fordson Tractors and all Ford productc back to the pre-war figures, and still offers "SERVICE" to the Fordson owners.



When Mr. Ford set about building the Fordson tractor he had a thorough understanding of just what it should be and what it shohuld do. His early life on the farm gave him a deep insight into the daily life of the farmer; his mechanical genius saw the type of tractor needed. He began work on a farm tractor thirty-five years ago, and for more than twelve years he experimented over more than 7,000 acres of land in different kinds of soil, with different crops.

So he built the Fordson. It is so simple that a schoolboy can operate it. It is low in first cost. It is lowest in operating cost and Fordson parts and Fordson service are always to be had promptly from the dealer.

The Fordson is a profitable investment. It can be used every working day in the year. It is an inexpensive power plant that will lighten your farm work. It has proven its worth on more than one hundred thousand farms not onlyl in operating implements in the fields, but also in belt and pulley work. And it doesn't eat when idle.

Don't delay ordering your Fordson tractor. The demand is greater than the supply.

We have as our teachers this year, Prof. H. A. Harris, Mrs. Bessie Hays, and Miss McMae McNeill, and we are sure that we can never give them too much praise, for they are certainly competent for the positions they occupy in the school.

We have a large attendance now, but hope it will increase.

PROVIDENCE, BEAT 16

Editor Union-Banner:

You may become worried at me for writing so much from this place, but allow me this space please.

I wish to say that I don't think the Registration Board has treated us fair by not coming to our Beat; but that is all right. We will register just the same. I want to say that anyone in our Beat who can't conveniently get a way to go to Clanton to register if they will let me know by Tuesday morning, October 26th I will see that they get a way to go. We will get a truck load and send them. They may think that because we are in the "sticks" we can't come to town, but what it takes to get our women there we have just even got it. Stick to me boys, and let's see that there is not a single one left out. Take all the boys and girls, young and old, and let's keep old Sixteen in front and let the good work pass on. We want to double our vote in this Beat this time by registering our wives and our girls. If we fail to register them they can't vote in November. Come boys, rain or shine, hot or cold. If it is the Lord's will, we will be right there with the goods.

Yours sincerely,

SHOULTS

Literary school will begin here next Monday, October 25th. Every body should send their children the first day and try not let them miss one single day during the school term. One day missed means that some lessons have been missed that might have been of great benefit to the child. Parents should visit the school. Show your child that you are interested in the teacher. Alwayss praise the teacher before your children, this helps to make the child love and respect the teacher. Mr. Howard Oden is principal, Mrs. Bessie Garner assistant. Both reside in this community. They are enthusiastic workers for the upbuilding of a community, and we feel that this session will be a great success. But the parents must cooperate with them if they expect success.

Mr. Mack Oden received, one day last week, a telegram stating that his son, Lee Roy, who had a position some place in the north, was dead. As yet the body has not been received, tho it is expected this week. The facts concerning the death have not been learned. We will probably know by next week the facts. There are many friends of this young man who are grieved to hear this sad news. He made friends every where he went.

Mr. C. T. Walker reported a nice time at the association last week.

Many from here attended the big circus at Maplesville last Saturday.

Mr. Davis King, of Camden, Ala., visited Mr. Perry Hicks last Sunday night. Mr. King was en-route from Tuscaloosa to Camden, his home town. He says the roads are in bad condition in some places between Tuscaloosa and Camden.

Mr. George Lawrence and sister, Myrtle from Plantersville spent a few days of last week with their cousins, Mr. Martin, and Miss Drucilla Lawrence.

Miss Myrtle Lawrence spent Friday night with Miss Lucy Walker.

Miss Eva Hall, who has been nurse for Miss Pearl Kelley during her illness, was back to teach her Sunday School class again last Sunday, after being absent for several Sundays. She said Miss Pearl Kelley is doing nicely now. Her friends hope to see her out soon.

Mr. Freeman Sewell is visiting his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. John Sewell.

Many of the ladies from this community went to Maplesville last Friday and registered. They want to give Judge Reynolds their support in his candidacy for the U. S. Senate, also for Warren G. Harding for President and Calvin Coolidge for Vice President. Women are asked in this campaign to vote for the Democratic candidate for president, because he is pledged to the Treaty of Versailles and the covenant for a league of nations. They are told it is a covenant of peace that will end all war. Four years ago the same party asked for votes for the Democratic president because "He kept us out of War." He got the votes and five months later the United States entered the world war. We will vote the Republican ticket. Let Congress in each case of war decide what to do, without a pledge in advance.

MUSIC RECITAL & HALLOWEEN STUNTS AT THE HIGH SCHOOL

At 7:45, p.m. Friday, October 29, the music pupils of the Chilton County High School will render a short program. This entertainment will be free and everybody is most cordially invited. Following the program a good time Halloween party will be enjoyed by all present. A genuine Halloween frolic will be indulged in. Come have your fortune told. Try your luck at fishing, comunicate with the uncanny spirits. In this age of enlightenment, of course, no sensible person believes in witches, but still we follow out many old rites and customs merely through a spirit of fun and jollity. Sandwiches, hot chocolate, punch, candies and other confectioneries will also be sold by the high school girls. Come. Let's make this a big get-together and get acquainted meeting.

ELECTION OFFICERS FOR THE GENERAL ELECTION IN CHILTON COUNTY ON NOV. 2.

NO REASON AT ALL.

Our friend Ira Champion of the Governor's office has gone back into the newspaper game, starting up the Citizen-Examiner at Hayneville in Lowndes county. He begins his latest editorial venture with a long exhortation to the people to vote for Cox, setting out as the main reason the promulgation of the Federal Reserve Banking System by the Democrats.

To our way of thinking, it is idle folly to tell the people of the South that they should vote the Democratic ticket because the Democrats have made the Federal Reserve Banks.But if you think the Reserve Banks are such a great thing for the Southern farmers, Ira, just go ahead and tell us how the cotton growers were benefitted this year by the great Reserve Banks. Do you think the cotton growers got enough assistance from the Reserve Banks to cause them to vote the Democratic ticket on the strength of it?

We don't think so.

Now you may say, like the other Democrats who have been put in the nine-hole on this Federal Reserve argument, that it was not within the legal province of the banks to help the farmers with their cotton. Well, if the banks can't help the Southern farmers with their cotton crops, how in the name of high heaven do you figure that the farmers ought to fall over themselves to vote for the daddies of the banks?

Maybe you want them to vote for Cox on the promise that is being published now, saying that the Federal Reserve Banks are going to be revised a little bit so they can help us out with our cotton. But that is all rot. The South is not going to get anything from Washington that is worth anybody's vote, so long as we bear the political stigma of the solid Democratic South.

Foot Ball Team Wins.

On last Friday our Foot Ball Team accompanied by a few students, left for a game with the Wetumpka Aggies.

The game began at three-thirty, a large crowd of spectators on the side lines.

In the first quarter both teams played hard. Chilton came near to crosssing the goal line, but was held within two feet of the goal on fourth down.

In the first part of the second quarter Gardner came across with a touch down for Chilton, which was the only touch down of the entire game. Reynolds kicked good for Chilton.

The final score was Chilton 7, and Wetumpka 0.

The girls have arranged to order a basket ball this week. Practice will begin Monday, and games will be arranged with other High Schools soon.

"I have," she answered, looking at him steadily in the eye, but speaking with a slight tremor in her tones. I wondered to what it might be due. Was it because she feared the consequences of the revelation as to her identity, or was it that she feared she might be trapped by his questions?

"Now tell me, Mrs. Moore," he shot at her explosively, "who really murdered Daisy Lutan?"

"Henry Kent," she answered quickly, before the district attorney had time to stop her.

"What's this?" exclaimed the judge. "What did you say?"

"Object! object!" vociferated the district attorney, striving in vain to catch the attention of the judge presiding. McGregor, apparently well satisfied with the results of his question, stood there, smiling assurance at me.

"Young woman," directed the judge, "will you kindly repeat your last statement—louder. Who did you say killed Daisy Lutan?"

The girl turned to face the judge. Her lips were set as if she had determined to carry out some fixed plan, cost what it might.

"Daisy Lutan," she repeated, "was murdered by Henry Kent, who owns the Granddeck. He's really Orville Granders, the bank president who got away with eight hundred thousand dollars and was sent up for seventeen years."

There was a commotion in the rear of the courtroom. A dapper little old gentleman with neatly trimmed white whiskers rose hastily and made a dash for the door. Gorman, who had been sitting behind him, sprang after him and pinioned him by the arms:

"Nothing doing, Granders. I've got you."

Wick, sitting up near the counsel table, at the same time showed evidence that he, too, was contemplating hasty flight, but a husky chap whom I suspected of being one of Gorman's aides, seized him, too.

"Your honor," cried my counsel, "I demand the issuance of warrants at once for Orville Granders, alias Henry Kent, and his confederate, James Wilson, alias James Wick and 'Stuffy Jim,' on the charge of having murdered Daisy Lutan and Rufus Gaston. I further urge the immediate release of my client, Mr. Spalding Nelson, in my custody. Testimony that we already have obtained will establish that he was an innocent victim of the dastardly plots of these two ex-convicts."

The reaction that came from this sudden clearing of my name left me in a puzzled daze from which I hardly recovered until late that evening, when, once more free, I found myself in the Gaston apartment. Granders, his tool, Wick, and practically every employee of the Granddeck were under arrest, and warrants were out for other members of the band whose identity had been revealed by the former telephone girl.

And there in the apartment with me were my mother, Gorman, McGregor—and to my surprise and delight, Barbara Bradford. After her sister's wedding, it appeared, Barbara's mother had gone away for a brief rest, leaving her alone in the apartment with the servants. She had welcomed the opportunity to work undisturbed on the mystery that had landed me behind the bars. Thinking that at Rufus Gaston's funeral she might pick up some clue that would be of service in unraveling the tangled skein that held her and me together, she had gone thither, and seeing my mother there, and suspecting at once who she might be, had introduced herself. Quickly they had become good friends and she it was who had informed my mother of my plight.

Present also with us, despite the lateness of the hour, was the district attorney and two of his aides, and Nellie Kelly, or as she much preferred to be called, Mrs. Moore. The girl was technically a prisoner, but her services in bringing the real criminals to book had been so exceptional that she had been released on her own recognizance. Hither she had been brought that the district attorney might check up with her the marvelous tale of criminal conspiracy that she had unfolded to my counsel in the brief recess of the court that day.

Orville Granders, it appeared, had been the master-mind that had directed all the plotting. A score of years before he had been president of one of the metropolis' biggest banks. He had been discovered to have embezzled nearly a million dollars. He had been tried and sentenced to seventeen years' imprisonment, but no one ever had been able to find what he had done with the money, so safely had he hidden it away.

In his long years in prison, associating daily with criminals of the worst sort and listening to their plans for further crime on their release, his own criminal instincts, already developed, had grown stronger, and he had spent his time planning a new system of crime of which he was to be the head, using as his confederates certain evildoers with whom he had become acquainted in prison. When he had been released he had slipped quietly away to the West and lived in close retirement until he had been forgotten. The white whiskers he had grown so changed his appearance, too, that he had little fear of being recognized. Recovering such part of the stolen money as was left to him, he had come to New York in the guise of a prosperous Western investor and, purchasing a plot of land, had erected the Granddeck apartments, designed for the occupancy of the wealthiest class of tenants.

In this building, sitting like a little white spider in his web, he planned to prey secretly on all who came to live there. Every attendant in the building was either a criminal or an associate of criminals, reporting to him daily all that went on, and obeying his orders implicitly. A special switchboard in his apartment enabled him to listen in at will on all telephone conversations that went on. Every letter delivered at the Granddeck went through his hands before reaching the tenants. For every wall safe in the building he held a master combination and his pass-key would unlock every door there was. And in addition to all this—

HE HAD BUILT A SECRET PASSAGEWAY.

We found it that night and explored it, familiarizing ourselves with all its exits, greatly to the amazement and confounding of Gorman. Connecting with the service elevator by a masked opening, it ran along the hall of each apartment, with entrances concealed in wall panels. It enabled Granders to wander at will through the apartments at night, leaving mysterious notes to terrify his tenants, prying into the secrets hidden in their wall safes, listening when he chose to their most private conversations, examining the contents of their pockets. As he had planned from the beginning, he gained in this way much information that he was able to utilize to his financial profit without arousing suspicion. He had discovered, Mrs. Moore said, secret stock market movements one of his tenants was planning and had made a small fortune out of the advance information. Several injudicious women he had successfully blackmailed, turning over to agents who never came near the Granddeck the secrets he learned from letters he opened and telephone conversations he had listened to.

In the case of Rufus Gaston, he had plotted to steal the Gaston pearls, Mrs. Moore explained, first terrifying the old couple into leaving the apartment, the whispers that had been heard coming of course from the secret passageway.

"But I can't understand," I said, "why, after he had once got hold of the pearls in Mr. Gaston's absence, he should have restored them to their hiding place."

"He had a duplicate made of phony pearls," explained Mrs. Moore. "It was part of his plan not to have any of the tenants discover the thefts for a long time after they occurred."

"If he was so cautious," said the district attorney, "I am puzzled as to why he killed Miss Lutan and Mr. Gaston. He must have realized that both murders would be thoroughly investigated."

"Both were accidents, so to speak," the girl explained. "Each of them surprised him in their apartment, and he had to kill them to make his getaway. I suppose he had been roaming around so much he had got careless."

He Had Built a Secret Passageway.

"How about the revolver?" asked Gorman. "How did he come to plant it in Nelson's room?"

"He was puzzled by Mr. Nelson butting in on the Bradford case, and it made him sore. I heard him and Wick talking about it one day, and he said that he'd teach Mr. Nelson not to interfere. 'How?' asked Wick. 'I'll frame him for the goat if anything happens.'"

"And was it he who had me discharged from my office?" I asked, eagerly.

"Sure it was. He wrote a note on Mr. Gaston's stationery saying that you had forged a check after he had befriended you. He wrote in the letter that he was not going to prosecute you because of your mother, but that he felt that you were unworthy of employment anywhere."

"I believe," said the district attorney, "that that clears everything up, except for one thing—why. Mrs. Moore, did you aid him and Wick in all these crimes?"

"He promised that if I would help him he would get Eddie out," she cried. "I was desperate. I'd do anything to get my husband back."

Gorman and the district attorney exchanged meaning glances. While nothing more was said, I felt sure as they departed that both were thinking that this brave young woman who had solved the mystery for them certainly deserved some reward, and I think we all realized that the only reward life ever could hold for her was the freedom of her husband.

Presently they went and left us alone, Gorman, my mother, Barbara, and I.

"There are still two things I cannot understand," I said, as we sat talking it over. "The first is"—and I turned to Barbara—"what was your sister doing in this apartment on the night of the first murder? When I came up from the Lutan apartment I caught her just coming out of my door. I could not help wondering if they had made her plant the revolver."

Barbara started up, blushing.

"Oh, no," she cried, "it was nothing like that. You remember a few moments before you and I had been in your room, looking at the secret pas-

"If Only I Had Something to Offer You Besides My Love!"

sageway. Claire just then had come into my room looking for me. She was puzzled by my absence, and the only solution that came to her was that I must be in your rooms. Alarmed at what she considered my imprudence, she had slipped out into the hall, and seeing your door open, had investigated. Of course she did not find me, for I had returned by way of the window ledge. She told me about it the night before she was married. I don't wonder, though, that you suspected her."

"I didn't suspect her," I cried. "I just wondered what she had been doing there."

"That's right," said Gorman. "He wouldn't believe for a minute that she had had anything to do with it."

"But what puzzles me most," I went on, "is how you ever persuaded the telephone girl to give Granders away. It must have been done after she had given her first testimony. How did it happen that she changed so suddenly over to our side?"

As I looked from one to the other for an explanation, Gorman burst out laughing.

"You'll have to ask Miss Bradford about that," he said. "She did it all."

I turned again to look at Barbara, expecting her to speak, but she merely blushed and was silent.

"Go on, tell me," I urged her.

"Well," she said hesitatingly, "as I heard her testifying, I had an inspiration. I heard her say that she loved her husband, and that she did not care who knew it—and—and—and—all at once I realized that love was the strongest influence in the world, so I had Mr. McGregor ask for an adjournment, and then—"

She stopped in confusion, the rosy blushes once more mantling her cheeks.

"Go on," I insisted.

"I can't tell it," she cried.

"You must tell," I urged. "I have a right to know it. What did you do?"

"I managed to see her alone."

Again she hesitated.

"What did you say to her?" I demanded.

"I just told her," she faltered, lowering her eyes as she spoke, "that—that I loved you just as much as she loved her husband, and I begged her for love's sake not to help send you to the chair, and she broke down and told everything."

"Oh, Barbara, my Barbara!" I cried, springing up and clasping her in my arms. "If only I had something to offer you besides my love—"

"I wouldn't worry about that just now, Spalding," interrupted my mother's voice. "They found your great-uncle's will today. He made you his sole heir."

But Barbara and I hardly heeded her good news. We were too busy telling each other the world-old story.

Formation of Asbestos.

Asbestos is found in fissures of rock and it is believed that, when the rock was forming and still hot, water penetrated the fissures, widened them and dissolved some of the silica and magnesia. On drying, these crystallized as a hydrated silicate of magnesia, forming threadlike crystals building up from opposite walls of the fissure and meeting in the middle.

FREEDOM FOR ARAB WOMEN

May Go Forth to Shop in the Business District Like the European Women.

While the Arabs of Algeria, in turbans and gracefully draped burnouses come out from their silently swinging doors, and with their staffs stroll into the European quarter of the city to buy food at some French shop, the Arab women who leave the Kasbah, the native quarter, are now enjoying a newer freedom.

The war has done it. The women are now allowed to go to other places than the baths and the cemeteries, the two traditional rendezvous where their husbands heretofore permitted them to gather. Many sally forth to shop in the downtown district like the European women. Some go to take tea at a fashionable French pastry shop, where they take off their veils, safe from the sight of Mohammedan men, and eat sweet cakes the Christians make. Then they put on their veils again, and, "shrouded in white mystery," go home to their hidden doors, Veiled to the eyelashes in "haicks" as white as snow, they undulate slowly in the billowy, baggy trousers of 1,000 folds, and pass into the heavy wooden doors, brass studded, that swing noiselessly shut.—Century Magazine.

The Best Thing He Did.

A melancholy looking man tetered into the establishment of a photographer.

"I should like to have a picture of myself weeping beside my wife's grave," he explained.

"I fear I have not the necessary accessories here," said the photographer. Then he added, facetiously: "Couldn't we arrange to have the portrait made at the grave itself?"

"No," said the man; "that's in New York state. It would be too expensive to go there. Just you fix up some kind of a grave here in the shop. I could weep on that. It's no trouble for me to weep anywhere."—Everybody's Magazine.

Rubbing It In.

Sternly the prosecuting counsel cross examined the witness for the defense. At last the latter got so confused that instead of replying audibly to one question he nodded his head.

Whereupon the counsel demanded sternly:

"Why don't you answer the question?"

"I did answer it," the witness replied, "I nodded my head."

"Yes," was the retort, "I heard it rattle, but could not tell whether it was up or down or from side to side."

Skin Sufferers Do Not Want Mere Temporary Relief

Of course, if you are content to have only temporary relief from the terrifying itching and burning of fiery, flaming skin diseases, then you are satisfied to remain a slave to ointments, lotions and other local remedies applied to the surface of the skin.

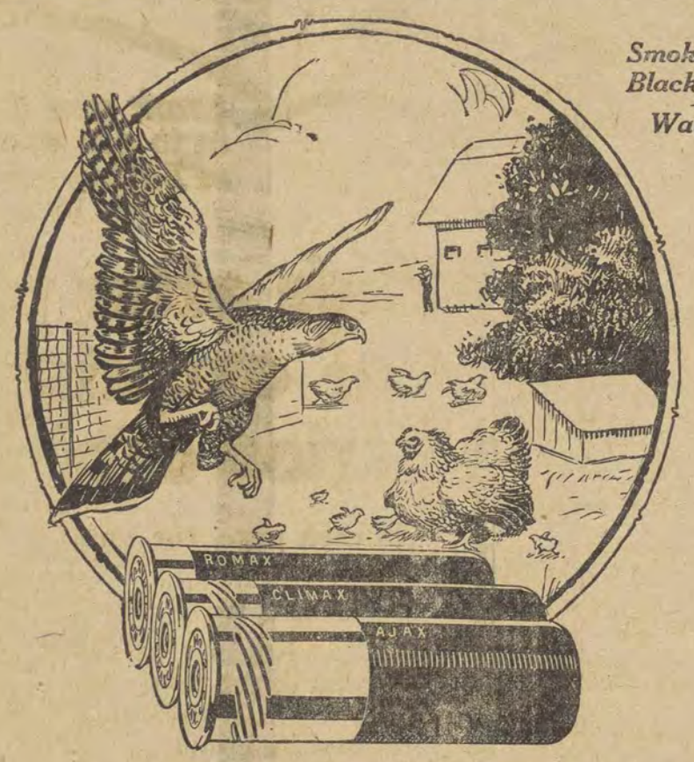
Here are the facts about Amendment Number Two



1. It applies only to Jefferson County.
2. It merely permits her citizens to decide whether they will make permanent the improvement of the railroad, loading and shipping facilities on the Warrior-Tombigbee River system.
3. It adds no burden either on the state treasury or on any taxpayer.
4. It means a 20% saving in freight rates to shippers in nearly every section of Alabama.

BEAT 16 TO THE FRONT

We are pleased to note the determination that exists in Beat 16 for the registration of their women voters. The people in that Beat have even been conscientious and consistent believers in the Republican party, and their loyalty to same has been attested by a regular expression of their suffrage for the Republican candidates. We are glad to know that the good women of the Beat are going to add their strength to that of the men and increase the percentage of Republicanism in Beat 16.

Our correspondent from there this week says he thinks in fairness to the women of the Beat, the Board of Registrars should have come there on their round of the county. But he does not waste any words arguing that question, proceeding into the expression of a rigid determination to bring the women to Clanton and register them.

The editor of The Union-Banner and Mr. M. D. Foshee likewise thought the registrars ought to go to Beat 16 and offered them every inducement to get them to go, but the board did not see fit to do so. Now, there is no use to argue with them. Beat 16 has decided rightly. The thing to do is to bring the women here and register them.

We are banking on you men and women of Sixteen! We want to see you maintain your ancient prestige as the banner Republican Beat of the County. The men have kept the record up to now. The women will join them here and keep it together in the future.

Come on to Clanton and register. If you can't come, just say the word and there will be a way provided to get you here and carry you back home.

Hurrah for Beat 16!

A DEVIOUS DOCUMENT

President Wilson declares that the people of the country are being deceived regarding the provisions of the league of nations. Well, why don't he make the language so clear that no one could be in doubt as to the meaning? If the covenant is so uncertain that the people of the country can be deceived by Americans, it is uncertain enough to involve us in trouble when foreign nations begin to interpret it in their own interests and try to hold us to its terms.

Those women who would vote on November 2 this year must come and register before the night of the 26th, or else they can not vote.

UNCLE DOCK WELLS SAYS:

He is in no sense a politician nor does he care to make any attempt to forecast the future either politically or otherwise, but that the experience of his long years as an humble minister of God has thoroughly convinced him that in the Bible can always be found a way bill to guide our footsteps safely here and to land us at last in a happier land to come.

In view of the great and universal unrest and discontent that is presaging calamitous times for our country and the entire world at present, he suggests that every one and especially the rich mercantile, banking and industrial class, read and ponder carefully and prayerfully the Fifth Chapter of Nehemiah and Fifth Chapter of James. Get your Bible, or borrow one, and take time from the counting of your profits to read these two passages fairly and honestly, and then see what you think about it. These words of God will stand when all your silver and gold has been burned up. Let all read the above scriptures and ponder them well, and surely we will exclaim, "My God, my God, is there no help for the poor distressed farmers, and especially the widows and orphans?"

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE ORGANIZED AT THORSBY

One of Thorsby's progressive citizens informs the Banner that a live wide-awake Chamber of Commerce has been organized in that little city, and that they "expect to have a strong organization and also expect to do some great things for Thorsby and Chilton County."

There is no doubt but that the possibilities for such an organization at Thorsby are good, and there is much room for the same to reach out and benefit the entire county. We have to admit that Thorsby is about the most wide-awake town in the county, and it would be no surprise to see her walk away with big advantages from the Chamber of Commerce. If Clanton don't wake up we may expect some day to see those Thorsby fellows start a movement to locate the court house there and take it away from us.

The Witches and Wizards will meet at the Chilton County High School on Friday, October 29th, at 7:45, p.m. So, don't be late.

ODD FELLOWS HALL BURNED

Mr. J. S. Headley of Billingsley brings us the information that the Odd Fellows Hall of Mayflower Lodge No. 417 at New Cedron was destroyed by fire at midnight last Tuesday night. There had been meeting of the lodge in the hall that night, and the fire occurred after all the members had gone home. The building was completely destroyed, together with all its contents, and property of the Lodge. The property carried insurance for $1,000, and the loss to the lodge will be about $2500, according to Mr. Headley.

The New Cedron church building nearly was not damaged.

Mr. E. L. Jones of Corinth was a visitor to Clanton last Thursday. He made the Union-Banner a present of some nice Ben Davis apples of his own growing and also a pocket full of chinquapins.

PLEASANT GROVE.

The Singing Society met here Sunday p.m. and showed marked progress in singing. The crowd was not as large as we have had, but the singing was excellent.

Prof. James Franklin led the songs, and Mrs. Eddie Childress was organist for the occasion.

There were no visitors this time, but we hope to have other societies with us next time, which will be the first Sunday afternoon in November. We know that in unity there is strength, and also beauty.

We realize that music makes sad hearts glad, and cheers lonely souls when many other things fail.

We cannot imagine an education of man without music. It is the gymnastics of the affections. In suitable connection with exercises—it is necessary to keep body and soul in a healthy condition. One of the sweetest singers was the Psalmist David. He said "I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever. With my mouth will I make known my faithfulness to all generations."

The more real singing we have, the more happiness we will have.

A LETTER OF GENERAL PUBLIC INTEREST AND THE REPLY

The Following Correspondence is of Vital Interest to Every Telephone User, Present and Prospective.

"New Orleans, La., October 12, 1920.

Mr. J. Epps Brown, President,
Bell Telephone Co.,
Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Sir:—

I have read the advertisements of your Company, but I do not understand why you must raise your rates now, when the prices of every thing else are falling.

Will you please explain this?

Yours truly,

....."

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 16, 1920.

Mr. .....,
New Orleans, La.,
Dear Sir:-

Your letter of October 12th asks a very natural question, and one which demands a full and frank reply, which I am glad to make.

While the prices of a great many things have, apparently, been reduced, these reductions in prices do not apply to articles used by the telephone company, or affect the expenditures necessary to the construction, maintenance and operation of the telephone plant.

The following classes of expenses constitute more than ninety-five per cent of the cost of furnishing telephone service:

Labor.

More than fifty-five per cent of the total expenditures of the company in rendering service are for wages and salaries; less than one-tenth of one per cent. of this being for executive and general salaries.

The wages paid to our employees can not, and should not, be reduced. On the contrary, they must be increased, in many cases, to bring our wage scale on a level with wages paid by unregulated businesses, so that we may retain our skilled employees necessary to give you efficient service.

Material and Apparatus.

Many items of material and apparatus are involved in the current maintenance of the property, entirely apart from the enormous quantities involved in the construction of new property, and this represents a large item of expense.

There has been no reduction, nor any indication of reduction, in the price of these essential articles, in practically all of which the labor, the freight and hauling cost is by far the largest proportion of the total cost.

We know that the manufacturers of telephone equipment and material have orders for two years in advance with a constantly increasing demand, and which in turn makes a reduction in price in the near future most improbable.

Freight and Passenger Costs.

Our annual expense for the transportation of freight and passengers is more than one million dollars. No one expects the railroads to reduce their charges under the level of costs in rendering their service.

Rent.

Except in the larger centers our central offices and stocks of material are housed in rented buildings, and even in the larger centers we rent varying amounts of properties.

Like everyone else, our rents have been greatly increased, with no prospect of any reduction. Even in prewar days all leases for property occupied by us were renewed only at higher charges than for the previous rental period.

Hotels.

The board and lodging bill for our men who must travel in connection with the operation and maintenance of the property, costs many thousands of dollars every year, and we can see no prospects of the hotels lowering their charges. Until they do we must pay the present high charges.

Electric Power and Light; Street Car Fare.

We spend many thousands of dollars every year for these services rendered to employees engaged in the maintenance of the property. Practically every year the rates charged by these companies have been substantially increased, and there is no thought of any reduction. The Telephone Company, like all others, must pay these increased rates.

Paper, Printing and Stationery.

We consume tons of paper for our book-keeping, correspondence and directory purposes, and pay many thousands of dollars for printing annually. This item of expense has increased in percentage, more than the others, and no one has suggested that any reduction in these costs is probable.

Coal Bill.

The Telephone Company purchases coal in large quantities to heat the buildings occupied by its employees in rendering the service.

We, of course, must pay whatever price is necessary to secure coal for this purpose.

Insurance.

Even where the actual rate per one thousand dollars has not been increased, we are compelled to carry a larger amount of insurance than in the prewar days in order to protect ourselves in the reproduction of any of the property which may be destroyed by fire, and this is reflected in a very large increase in the total insurance bill.

Taxes.

This expense, both Federal, State, County and City, has increased every year we have been in business; the increase this year being unusually high. There is no probability of this expense being reduced.

We do not pay any excess profit tax because we have never earned enough to be subject to that tax.

Buildings.

It is common knowledge that the cost of erecting any kind of building now as well as making alterations and repairs, which constantly confront the Telephone Company, and which involve material, labor, freight and hauling, is on an enormously higher plane than ever before. Insofar as the cost of materials may be reduced will this total cost be reduced.

The only way we can furnish adequate facilities for your use from year to year is by constructing the buildings in which to house the central office apparatus in the larger centers; as well as enlarging existing buildings to serve the increased needs and this work must be carried on from year to year without delay. This involves hundreds of thousands of dollars in expense to the Company.

There are of course many other items of expense all of which are now at the highest level in prices, and none of which show any sign of reduction for fundamental reasons.

Until these necessary costs of operation are materially reduced we can not reduce the COSTS of furnishing telephone service.

We have carefully studied and analyzed the advertised reduction in prices and find that they are upon articles of which we make but little, if any use. Applied to the Telephone business, all known reduction in prices would not reduce the cost of furnishing telephone service one-twentieth of one per cent.

This is many times offset by the increase in wages which, in many places, we must make during the current year.

Our present operating revenues are practically equaled by our operating expenses. If the present let down in general business continues for any appreciable time we will lose a material part of the gross revenue now received, which will make a still higher rate necessary if a deficit is to be avoided.

We are not asking higher rates for the SAME SERVICE we furnished one, two or five years ago; but for a MUCH GREATER SERVICE which we now furnish, consisting of facilities to add many additional telephones to our system during the past one, two and five years.

This fact should be considered when comparing the increase in rates we ask with the increase in charges of railroad, epress and other public utilities for the same quantity of service.

We hope, as everyone does, that in the relatively near future, prices and the costs of operation, except labor, will be lower but we see no immediate prospects of this result as far as the Telephone Company is concerned.

The increased rates we are now asking are based, in a measure, upon this hope. If the present level of costs of operation go higher through causes beyond our control, the proposed rates will not yield a fair profit.

It is important to remember that no rate for a public utility is permanent. If conditions and prices so change in the future as to make the rates we are now asking yield too high a return, and if the Telephone Company should not reduce the rates voluntarily, the Public Service Commission would.

Conditions as they are must be met, not as they may or should be.

The highest and best interest of the public is conserved in having the Telephone Company in position to supply facilities adequate to the demand for telephones and service, and in this way be prepared to render at all times an adequate service. No community can expand and grow without adequate telephone service, which in turn means adequate plant facilities.

With inadequate returns upon the bare cost of the physical property already in service,—the Company's credit has disappeared.

With no credit the Company cannot secure the millions of dollars required to provide the additions and extensions to its plant, which must be provided if the public demand for telephones is supplied.

Respectfully yours,
J. EPPS BROWN, President.

A WAY TO WIN

To the land owners and cotton growers of the South:

The time has come when we should stop, think and figure with the man that has been figuring with us all this time. In the year 1914 the farmers took from 5 to 8 cents for their cotton; they haven't raised a crop since. Farmers, can we stand for that any more? I say no.

Now, the question is, what steps are we going to take?

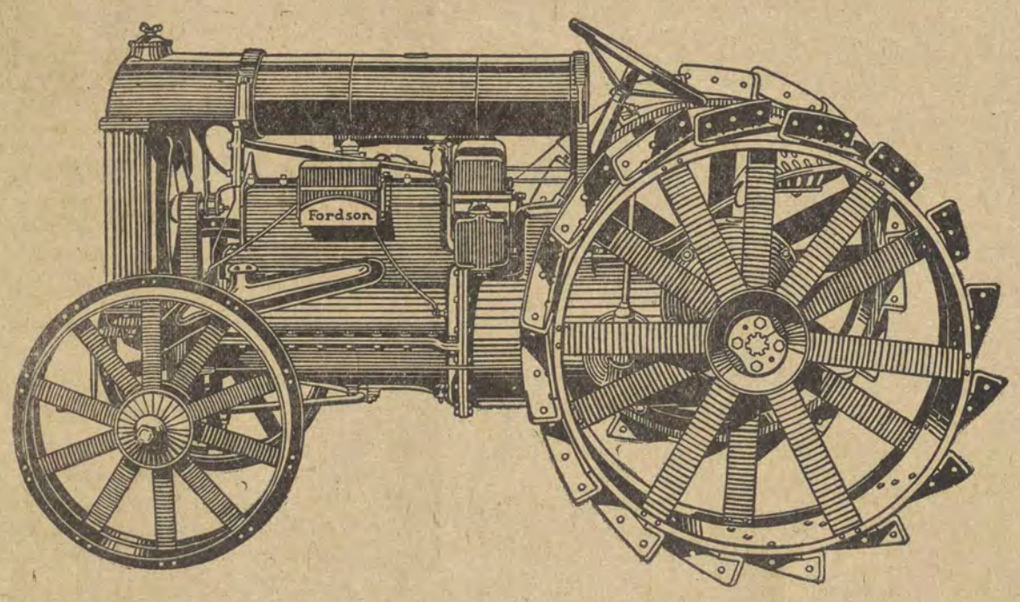
Didn't we appeal to Mr. Wilson for aid in 1914, and he refused? What shall we do to win the price that we ought to have? Aren't there too many living off our cotton? Stop and think! We got from 30 to 40 cents for our last year's cotton, and did not we turn around and give from $2.50 to $6.00 a pound for cotton goods? You will agree that that is out of reason. What must we do if we want 40 cents for this crop? Shall we not say "We must have it?" I think so. But can we get it? Why yes. I say we can. Will you sign an instrument of writing that you will not plant or suffer anyone else to plant a cotton seed on your premises in 1920? Now we have learned by experience that the boll weevil lives solely on the cotton plant, and if we don't raise any cotton we will get rid of them, which will be worth more than the sacrifice, and then some. Now come on farmers, let's go in to win. Think over this and give your opinion in next week's issue of the Union-Banner.

A COTTON RAISER.

Fordson

TRADE MARK

The Fordson Tractor was made to meet the demands and necessities of the every-day American farmer. It was made with the thought that it was the necessity of the man of forty acres as well as the man with one thousand acres. It was made not only for plowing, harrowing, discing, drilling, seeding, mowing, reaping, but for all other work on the farm where power is necessary. It was made to bring conveniences to the farmer's home as well as for the cultivation of his fields. It was made to furnish power for the cream separator, silo filling, cutting feed, sawing wood, furnishing power for milking, washing, supplying the house with running water, electric lights, and the hundred and one things on the farm. It was made to do all this economically and in a reliable way. It was made to be the big profitable servant on the farm.



And it has not failed in any of the expectations had for it. It has been tested as no other Tractor has been tested. It has been proven reliable and can furnish proofs impossible to any other Tractor. It has done these things not only in Ameroca but in Europe, Asia, Africa, and in the Islands of the Seas. It has met successfully the demands of farmers in every part of the civilized world.

Therefore, the Fordson Tractor can meet all the conditions of your farm. When you buy a Fordson, you are not buying any experiment—you are buying a servant and a money-maker for you that you can depend upon absolutely from the first day you put it to work. It is easy to understand. It possesses all the power you want. It is simple in control. It is more flexible than you imagine. It will help you cultivate every foot of ground you have, and every day in the year you will find use for it on the farm. Its appeal to the farmer is in its dependable service and the wide variety of work it can do.

We'd like every farmer that reads this, if he hasn't a Fordson Tractor already, to come to us and let us sell him one. Let us demonstrate its powers, its values, on your own farm. Let's get into details—power, reliability, economy. While the sale of a Tractor gives us a small profit, the purchase of a Tractor to the farmer means a money-making servant every day for years. So the sale of a Fordson means more to the purchaser than it does to us. We are arguing for your good, Mr. Farmer. Come in and talk it over. Your time against ours. Is it worth it?

And remember, when you buy a Fordson Tractor, we are right here to keep that Tractor in reliable running condition every day. You won't have to wait if anything should get out of order. We are right here to keep it right, because one of the conditions of the Fordson Dealer is that he must keep on hand always a supply of parts. This is a guarantee we don't believe you can get with any other Farm Tractor.

Come in. Let's talk it over together.

A PROCLAMATION

STATE OF ALABAMA

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

WHEREAS, The Legislature of Alabama, at its regular session in the year 1919, ordered an election by the qualified electors of the State of Alabama upon a certain proposed amendment to the Constitution of Alabama, which is herein set forth, to be held on the proclamation of the Governor, and,

WHEREAS, Notice of such election, together with the proposed amendment is required by law to be given by proclamation of the Governor;

NOW, THEREFORE, I, Thomas E. Kilby, Governor of the State of Alabama, do hereby give notice, direct and proclaim that at the general election in November, 1920, an election will be held for the vote of the qualified electors of the State of Alabama, in the manner, form and places required by law. upon the following amendment to the /Constitution of Alabama, viz: The Legislature shall have the power to authorize the counties of Alabama which have or which shall have taxable property in such counties of one hundred millions of dollars annually, or more, according to the assessments by such counties for the year 1918, A. D., or according to any assessment hereafter made, to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease. maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads, by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise or passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilities, in aid of intrastate, interstate or foreign commerce; including the dredging, on both banks of the approaches to the water terminals.

Section 2. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize and empower such counties to issue bonds, lend their credit, grant public money, or other thing of value in aid of the internal improvement as described in Section 1 hereof.

Section 3. The Legislature shall have the power to authorize such counties to levy and collect a special tax not exceeding twenty cents on each one hundred dollars of taxable property in such counties, in addition to the maximum rate of taxation prescribed in the Constituton of Alabama. The funds thus raised are specifically reserved to be applied only to the creation and support of the internal improvement herein and hereby authorized.

Section 4. That all such counties shall have the right, power and authority to acquire, construct, purchase, own, lease, maintain, use, control and operate highways, railroads —by any kind of motive power conveyance or appliance; freight stations; passenger stations; wharves; piers; docks; warehouses; grain elevators; storage tanks; team trucks, and all other facilities and structures appurtenant thereto, for the purpose of receiving, carrying, delivering, reducing in bulk, storing or preparing for shipment of goods, wares and merchandise and passengers over such railroads or in or through such terminal facilites, within, across or through its own territory or the territory of adjacent counties.

Section 5. That any enactments of the Legislature of Alabama contingent upon the ratification of this amendment to the Constitution of Alabama by the qualified voters of the State, shall be validated and become a force and effect immediately this amendment is so ratified.

Section 6. All such counties of Alabama are hereby authorized and empowered to increase the limit of county indebtedness from 3½ to 4½ per cent of such taxable property.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the Great Seal of the State to be affixed at the Capitol in the City of Montgomery, on this the 27th day of August, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Twenty.

THOS. E. KILBY,
(Seal) Governor.

By the Governor:
WM. P. COBB,
Secretary of State.

WOMEN VOTERS MUST REGISTER BEFORE OCTOBER 26

Under the new election law which was passed by the Legislature recently in special session, and signed by the governor on October 4th, the time set for registering all voters who have become qualified since Jan. 5, 1920 (which includes all women voters) covers the days from now until midnight of Tuesday, October 26th. It will thus be seen that the time is short. Those women who fail to register during this time will have no further opportunity to do so until 1922, unless, at the discretion of their county Board of Commissioners, the books are open for ten days during the month of July, 1921. This is permitted, but is left entirely to the County Commissioners as to whether or not it shall be done.

Rub-My-Tism is a powerful antiseptic; it kills the poison caused from infected cuts, cures old sores, tetter, etc. 8-19-10t

LEAGUE OF WOMEN VOTERS

REGISTRATION BOOKS OPEN TO WOMEN TILL OCTOBER 26.

For the information or women over the state who perhaps have given the matter little thought till now, it has been considered best to emphasize the fact that the registration books, opened to all voters, including women who can now vote on equal terms with men, will be closed after October 26. This means that time for considering whether they care to vote in the November elections or not is very brief.

By the provisions of the new laws, the registration will be conducted at the various courthouses from October 19 till October 26, inclusive, because the board of registrars must sit at the courthouses during this period. From October 11, however, to October 19, the board of registrars "may sit at such places in the county as it deems most convenient to the public, and best suited to accomplishing the registration of those entitled to register."

The law also requires that due notice shall be given to the public concerning these matters, both by posters and by means of newspapers, where there are papers which can bring the publicity before the people in time to properly inform them. No person can be registered except in the ward or precinct where he or she claims residence.

Some other provisions of the law which may not be generally known to women are those relating to the residential qualifications of prospect voters, the payment of poll taxes, and number of registrars, etc.

Every citizen of the state and the United States and every resident of foreign birth who, before the ratification of the present constitution of the state shall have legally declared his or her intention to become a citizen of the United States, not laboring under legal disabilities, and who is twenty-one years old or older and who shall have resided in this state at least two years, in the county one year, and in the precinct or ward three months immediately preceding the election at which he or she offers to vote, and who shall have duly registered and paid any poll taxes due legally, shall be an elector and shall be entitled to vote at any election.

Women cannot be required to pay poll taxes before February next, for the reason that poll taxes became due on October 1st, at which time the machinery enabling Alabama women to vote had not been completed and set in motion; and poll taxes do not become delinquent, according to the law, till February 1st. After the first day of February and before the first of October, the Tax Collector has no authority to receive and receipt for poll taxes. Women forty-five years of age and over do not pay poll tax.

The number of registrars in each county is three, and they receive their appointment from the governor. Under the law, women can serve on such boards. Two Alabama women have already been named registrars—one in Birmingham and one in Mobile. The compensation of registrars is seven dollars and fifty cents per day.

Women's Last Opportunity Till January, 1922, For Registering and Voting.

Now, one of the most important facts in connection with the whole matter of women voting, is that under the new law, the registration books are closed after October 26, till January, 1922. As a result, women of the state who do not register before the date named or on that date, will be barred from participation in any local elections which may have to be held, pertaining to educational matters, municipal questions, etc., which questions, to the average women, seem of more importance, because of nearness, than general elections. It is true that a special registration is provided for in Section 7, of House Bill 11. In July, 1921, and each succeeding two years thereafter, the Courts of County Commissioners, Boards of Revenue or other courts of like jurisdiction may make an order requiring the books to be opened for ten working days, but it is to be supposed that only a special emergency would cause such action.

So then, the great opportunity for which women of Alabama have waited for decades cannot be theirs in its completeness unless for the brief number of working days between October 11 and October 26, they appear at the various places designated in the newspapers over the state and register.

According to public announcement of Sunday, October 10, the following questions will be asked all women qualifying to vote:

Do you know any reason why you should not be entitled to vote? Are you generally known under the name that you desire to vote under? What is your occupation? Are you married or single? What is your sex? What is your race? What is the name of your husband? Where have you resided for the past five years? During that time by what name have you been known?

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

When Run-Down

NEW ORLEANS, LA.—"My mother has always relied on Dr. Pierce's medicines and kept them for use in her family. When I was a girl, through over-work I became in very poor health. I lost in flesh, became very weak and nervous, my limbs and back ached all the time. I suffered from functional irregularity and was a physical wreck when my mother had me take Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and just a few bottles completely restored me to good health. I would advise all women or girls who suffer to give 'Favorite Prescription' a trial."—MRS. E. GIESLER, No. 710 Octavia Street.

SO WEAK LIFE A MISERY

Florida Lady Would Have Aching Pains in Side, Back and Shoulders.—Took Cardui and Soon Noted Great Improvement.

Odessa, Fla.—"About two years ago," writes Mrs. J. D. Powell, of this place, "I took several bottles of Cardui as a tonic, for I was run-down in health. In fact, I could hardly do anything at all; could only drag around and couldn't do my work.

"Life was miserable to me, and I knew I must have some relief, as I was so very weak. I would suffer from aching pains in my right side, back and shoulders. I would have such terrible nervous spells, which would come on me and I would fall down wherever I was standing . . .

"My friends recommended that I try Cardui . . . I began using it and soon saw and felt a great improvement . . . My appetite became good . . . I could rest well at night, and I got so I could do all my housework in a short time. I praise Cardui to all my friends."

If you suffer from ailments peculiar to women, it would be well for you to give Cardui a trial. For more than forty years it has proven beneficial to thousands of suffering women, and what it has done for others, it should do for you.

Take Cardui, the Woman's Tonic, today. Your druggist keeps it.—Adv.

YOU NEVER CAN TAME A WILD-CAT

Mr. Dodson Warns Against Use of Treacherous, Dangerous Calomel.

Calomel salivates! It's mercury. Calomel acts like dynamite on a sluggish liver. When calomel comes into contact with sour bile it crashes into it, causing cramping and nausea.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you take calomel today you'll be sick and nauseated tomorrow; besides, it may salivate you, while if you take Dodson's Liver Tone you will wake up feeling great, full of ambition and ready for work or play. It's harmless, pleasant and safe to give to children; they like it.—Adv.

The Housewifes Burden

When a woman is almost distracted from overwork, her home is in disorder, crying children, and on top of all is suffering from backache, bearing down pains, or some other form of feminine ills, then she should remember that hundreds of women in just her condition have been restored to health and regained their youthful strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and not rest until she has given it a fair trial.

Proof that it Restored the Health of These Two Women

Cairo, Ill.—"Some time ago I got so bad with female trouble that I thought I would have to be operated on. I had a bad displacement. My right side would pain me and I was so nervous I could not hold a glass of water. Many times I would have to stop my work and sit down or I would fall on the floor in a faint. I consulted several doctors and every one told me the same but I kept fighting to keep from having the operation. I had read so many times of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it helped my sister so I began taking it. I have never felt better than I have since then and I keep house and am able to do all my work. The Vegetable Compound is certainly one grand medicine."—Mrs. J. R. MATTHEWS, 3311 Sycamore Street, Cairo, Ill.

Chattanooga, Tenn.—"I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my baby came when I could no longer keep up. It strengthened my back and relieved me of the ill effect which so often develops at such times. That was my first experience with the Vegetable Compound. Years afterwards I took it during the Change of Life and got along so well I scarcely ever had to lie down during the day and seldom had dizzy, fainting spells. I am now well and strong, can do all my housework with perfect ease and it is a comfort to me to be able to say to other suffering women 'take Lydia E. Pinkham's medicine and be strong.' I will be glad to have you use my name if it will be the means of helping any one."—Mrs. R. A. FAIRBURN, 606 Orchard Knob Ave., Chattanooga, Tenn.

CANDIDATES FOR OFFICES IN COOSA COUNTY, ALA.

Both the Republican and Democratic parties in Coosa County are going to the people on Nov. 2 with tickets containing the names of candidates for all of the county officers. The following are the Republican candidates:

For Tax Collector, O. J. Glenn;
For Tax Assessor, J. J. Green;
For Commissioner, 2nd District, J. R. Blocker;
For Commissioner, 4th District, A. S. Hatchett;
For County School Board, P. P. Bonnett and J. E. Grimes.

The following is the Democratic ticket:

For Tax Collector, J. N. Howard;
For Tax Assessor, T. L. Burks;
For Commissioner, 2nd District, B. B. Killgore;
For Commissioner, 4th District, H. L. Thompson;
For County School Board, J. G. Penson and J. G. Avant.

Four years ago the Republicans elected Geo. Stewart Probate Judge of Coosa County. There is every reason in the world why they should elect their entire ticket this time.

TO WARREN G. HARDING MANY HAPPY RETURNS

November 2nd, 1920.

I

Make him a birthday present—He is fifty-five today,
With only a scrap of paper you can bid him lead the way.
Marion knows and loves him. The nation has learned his worth;
On the day that we name him President we celebrate his birth.

II

Only a single ballot not much that you have to give;
But it says, if it's cast for the man we sing, our country's soul 'll live.
The flag that our fathers flaunted appeals to us now to see
That what it means to the heart of us it means to prosperity.

III

Only a scrap of paper! Who dares to deny its might?
Its power is yours. You vote to-day, and you shall sing tonight.
Aye, you shall chant of freedom from phantoms that haunt and jeer,
Of a future without dishonor that is devoid of fear.

IV

Give him a birthday greeting! The hour and the man are here;
And we, who are heavy-hearted, see our redemption near.
Shall we be doomed by dreamers, shall we be bought and sold;
Or free to decree our destiny as we were free of old?

V

His birthday? Yes, and a nation's. Newborn shall a people be
That lives again in the hope that comes with Harding's victory.
The ocean shall call to ocean, the mountain shall hail the plain,
As we end our fight with a song tonight — for we-ve found our soul again.

ELECTION RETURNS TO BE RECEIVED BY TELEGRAPH

A number of Clanton persons who are interested in securing the national election returns as quickly as possible on next Tuesday night ,have arranged for a special wire service through the Western Union Telegraph Office in Clanton whereby the figures will come to us hot off the reel from national party headquarters. It is going to be all night long for us, so come to Clanton where you will be able to get all the election news quick

FROM THE STATE CHAIRMAN REPUBLICAN CAMP'N COMM.

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 26, 1920.

To the Editor of the Union-Banner:

As the citizens of this county will, on the second day of November, 1920, cast their ballots for the election of the officers to have charge of the national government and also for the State and County ofifcers, I desire to express through your paper my views on some of the issues involved in this campaign, and which will be determined by the electorate on that date. I am quite sure that each citizen of the county has the interest of this government at heart and is inerested in its best welfare. If so, then the casting of his or her ballot becomes an imperative duty. A duty of such vast importance that the result should be carefully considered before action is taken; the decision in the matter should be arrived at only after careful and mature consideration of the principles involved and the action should be taken without prejudice so that the ultimate result will be the establishing more firmly the great principles upon which this government was established and which have been enunciated and established during the history of our nation.

The paramount issue to be determined by the electorate at this election is the League of Nations question. This issue is clear cut and the two political parties have through their nominees for President and the platforms declared their position as to the League. The Republican party and its nominee for President, Warren G. Harding, have taken the position against the league. The Democratic party and its nominee will, if elected, attempt to have the league as presented by President Wilson, ratified by the United States Senate, without any reservation. For the information of the voters, I wish to quote Article X of the League of Nations, which reads as follows:

"Article 10.

"The members of the league undertake to respect and preserve as against external aggression the territorial integrity and existing political independence of all members of the league. In case of any such aggression or in case of any threat or danger of such aggression, the council shall advise upon the means by which this obligation shall be fulfilled."

Under this article of the league should the United States become a member, as is readily seen from a careful reading of it, undertake to preserve the territorial integrity and existing political independence of the other members of the league, and the council of the league would advise the means by which we would carry out the undertaking. This article was objected to by the United States Senate when the question of ratification was before that body and the following reservation was offered:

Reservation to Article X.

"The United States assumes no obligation to preserve the territorial integrity or political independence of any other country by the employment of its military or naval forces, its resources, or any form of economic discrimination, or to interfere in any way in controversies between nations, including any controversies relating to territorial integrity or political independence, whether members of the league or not, under the provsions of Article 10, or to employ the military or naval forces of the United States, under any article of the treaty for any purpose, unless in any particular case the Congress, which, under the constitution, has the sole power to declare war or authorize the employment of the military or naval forces of the United States, shall in the exercise of full liberty and action, by act of point resolution so provide."

President Wilson pressed the adoption of Article 10 of the league and stated that this article was the heart of the league, and that the adoption of the reservation would kill the league entirely. Article 10 of the league was objectionable to the Republican and Democratic Senators when before the Senate because it was in effect a sacrifice to the sovereign rights of this government. The Republican party is against the adoption of the league containing this artcle because it is a mortgage on the manhood, wealth and resources of the American government. In the event Mr. Cox, the Democratic nominee for president, is elected, he will use his power of office and influence to have the league adopted as originally presented by President Wilson, in which case should he be successful, the United States would if called upon by the conucil of the league be required to send her military and naval forces to Europe to fight the battles of the other members of the league. The United States will fulfil her obligation if we join the league, and in doing so I an confident that we may again witness the draft board in operation and our young men being called for service in foreign lands. The adoption of Article 10 above, without any change to say the least gives rise to a probability of the United States having to send against her will the military and naval forces to fight for Europe. If we reject the league, we certainly know that we will not send our army and navy to Europe or any where else unless Congress which is composed of AMERICANS, so provide.

The Republican party asks the voters to join its ranks on November 2nd and elect a Republican ticket composed of men who are against the adoption of this un-American contract; men who hold sacred the principles of American government and who are not willing for the sovereign rights to be sacrificed. The Democratic party asks the voters to take the chance. Will the people of Alabama blind themselves with political prejudice and take the chance or shall they awake to a realization of the conditions confronting them and save America from foreign control?

The Republican party has selected and nominated as its candidates for the several offices to be filled on November 2nd, from President down to and including our county officers, men of business experience, men who have kept pace with the progress of the times and who have demonstrated their ability to perform the duties incident to the office for which each is nominated, men who have pledged themselves to reduce the expense of operating the government thereby reducing the enormous burden of taxation now being thrust upon the people by an extravagant Democratic administration, men who believe in the separation of Church and State and who will not be influenced and controlled by a foreign political organization masquerading in this country as a religous institution.

The people of Chilton County should not overlook the record of the Democratic party when in power of Chilton County's affairs a few years ago when under the guise of road building the county was almost bankrupted. The national government of ours today is confronted with an indebtedness of $24,299,321,467, created during the recent Democratic administration. These figures are taken from the official statement of the Treasury Department of June 30th, 1920, at which time the expenses of the government was $71,879,072, more per year than the receipts, although we are paying more taxes now than ever before in the history of the nation.

In conclusion, may I ask that each voter go to the polls on November 2 and vote for the best interest of the people If this is done I venture to forecast that the Republican ticket will receive an overwhelming majority, which I am confident will be the result. Respectfully,

J. B. ATKINSON,
Chairman Repub. State Cam. Comm.

LETTER FROM OUR NATIONAL REPUBLICAN CHAIRMAN, HAYS

The Editor of the Union-Banner is in receipt of the following letter from the Chairman of the Republican National Committee, Mr. Will H. Hays, regarding the winding up of the national campaign:

"New York City, October 18, 1920.

My Dear Mr. Wyatt:

We have had a long, hard pull for the last two years in this endeavor, and as we are now coming to what I believe is going to be a successful conclusion, I want again to assure you of my appreciation for all you have done. I know it is not necessary to write you to keep up the work till the very last minute, and I am not writing for that purpose. I want us to do this, of course, and I know you wil, because we want to make the victory so big that it will forever make certain that a responsible political party cannot avoid responsibility for maladministration. I hope the time never comes in this country when either party can avoid responsibility.

Through all this I have felt very deeply a sense of personal responsibility, and have taken it all rather seriously because I always felt that it was far more than a party matter. In all of the effort you have carried a large load. I have always believed and certainly know now that the Republican press is not the "right flank of the army," as sometimes suggested,—it is the main division. I have appreciated your co-operation and sympathy more than I can tell you, and I just want to tell you this now.

With very warmest personal regards, I am,

Sincerely yours,
WILL H. HAYS."

SHOULTS

Rev. J. D. Martin preached his regular fourth Saturday and Sunday sermons here last Saturday and Sunday. All present enjoyed the good sermons.

We are glad to say the sick of this community are all improving.

Mr. Mack Oden received the dead body of his son, Lee Roy, last Wednesday, one week from the time of the death. The corpse was accompanied by Mr. Thomas Oden, brother of the deceased. Lee Roy had a good position in Milwaukee, Wisconsin as an electrician. His death was accidental, caused by a stroke of electricity, only living a few hours after the stroke. He served in the army during the latter part of the world war as sergeant with the National Guard, was stationed on Mexican Border, until sent to France just a short time before the armistice was signed. He was never in a battle was indeed patriotic and brave.

It is sad to see a young man taken from this world so early in life. He was only 26 years old, a very promising young man. Besides his father, he is survived by six brothers and four sisters. His mother died several years ago, also one sister dead.

The funeral services were held last Thursday at Isabella Church by Rev. Butram of Maplesville.

Mr. Paul Oden, who is attending Howard College at Birmingham was at home last week on account of the death of his brother.

Mrs. Essie Bowden of Birmingham, Mrs. Essie Lea Relley and Mrs. Janie Kelley of Blocton, were a thome last week to attend the funeral of their brother, Lee Roy Oden.

Mr. Hort Walker spent Monday in Selma on business.

Mrs. Oscar Shoults has moved back to Selma.

FROM COUNTY REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE

Clanton, Ala., October 28, 1920.

To the Republican Voters of Chilton County:

This week brings to a close one of the most important political campaigns in the history of our county, and on next Tuesday the people will not only elect officers from president down to county officials, but will decide some of the greatest issues with which we have ever been confronted and which will determine the future welfare of this country.

Senator Harding, the nominee of the Republican party for President, stands for America first, last and all the time and for a government of, for and by the people. He opposes the league of nations and favors separation of church and state, favors free speech and free press, and if elected, we will have a business administration conducted in a business way in the interest of ALL THE PEOPLE.

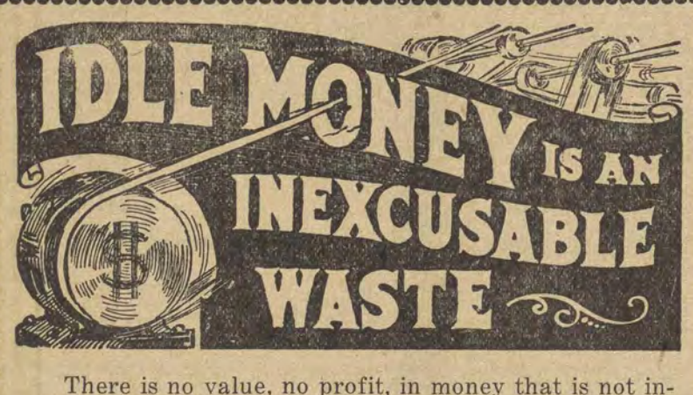
Governor Cox, the nominee of the Democratic party for President, favors the league of nations, and is pledged to pursue the policies of the present administration which we feel needs no further comment.

The Republican party of Chilton County has nominated men for the various offices who are fully competent to discharge the duties of their respective offices. They are honest high-toned gentlemen and will administer the affairs of their offices with a credit to themselves and to the entire county. They are worthy of and merit your support on next Tuesday, and we have no doubt that they will be elected by an overwhelming majority.

Just a word to the women who have recently registered and who will on next Tuesday cast their firsst ballot. From the number that have registered we know that they are interested and alert to their new duties. We invite you to consider the principles of the two parties and determine for yourselves the one that stands for the inerests of the common people. After investigating we feel sure that you will cast your vote in the interest of the Republican party and we especially solicit you to do so.

We urge every man and woman in the county who believes in the principles of the Republican party to go to the polls on next Tuesday and cast their vote for that ticket. If you do this we will win by the largest majority ever known in this county.

Again soliciting your vote and influence, we are



Respectfully yours,
HOWARD L. FOSHEE,
H. A. HARRIS,
J. E. LITTLEJOHN,
Republican Campaign Committee for Chilton County.

Dr. Johnson has spared no effort to make the Johnson Drug Store the equal of any store of its kind any where. That he has succeeded well in his efforts can be seen readily upon a visit to his new place.

When impurities creep into your blood the first symptoms are usually a loss of appetite, followed by a gradual lessening of energy, the system becomes weaker day by day, until you feel yourself on the verge of a breakdown.

Nearly everybody needs a few bottles of S. S. S., the great vegetable blood remedy, to cleanse out all impurities about twice a year. It is an excellent idea to take this precaution to keep the system in a vigorous condition so as to more easily resist disease to which every one is subject. S. S. S. is without an equal as a general tonic and system builder. It improves the appetite and gives new strength and vitality to both old and young.

Just make a cross-mark in the little circle right under the elephant. That is the right thing to do, and the easiest.

Now that MacSwiney has died, the headlines of the newspapes stand open and ready to flash the Harding landslide next week.

Hold up a minute! Turn right to the last page of this paper and see what you can find that will interest you.

If you are interested in what is happening at Thorsby, we refer you to the Thorsby page of The Union-Banner. It starts this week and will continue every week hereafter.

Uncle Tom Hubbard of Beat 14 was in Clanton Monday, looking after the interest of the women voters of his Beat. He says every thing is all right over his way this time for a grand turn-out for the Republican ticket.

Thorsby is coming to the front They want representation in the Chilton county newspaper, and we want them to have it. They deserve every bit of it. Those people are a live lot of boosters. They have a commercial club that is going to make things get on the move.

The Republican women of Chilton county are loyal to the cause. They have shown their faith by taking advantage of their opportunity to register. They will further demonstate their loyal allegiance next Tuesday by placing their cross mark under the elephant.

Mr. Z. J. Jones of Beat 14 was in Clanton Saturday. He says the women of his side of Beat 14 are all registered and ready to vote on Nov. 2. Mr. Jones had a letter from his cousin in Ohio that sheds some very valuale light on the race between Mr. Cox and Mr. Harding for president.

Next Tuesday you should put your cross mark in the little circle under the elephant, thereby casting your vote fo Harding, Coolidge, Reynolds, Sam Pate, Tom Rockett, and the whole ticket of Republicans who have declared against the League of Nations, and believe in America for Americans.

You may think Pat Murphy is not good for anything but to chew Brown Mule tobacco and tell jokes. But that is not all there is to him by a long shot. He can write catchy ads for his house when tne boss pins right down on him. Look at the page of the Clanton Mercantile Co., in this paper and you will se a sample of what he can do.

Dr. Gragg informs us that the Clanton Infirmary is steadily growing in service to the people of the county. In the past few days he has had patients there who were referred here for treatment by Dr. Mastin, Dr. Eiland of Coopers, and Dr. Wood of Thorsby. We are glad to see the doctors of the county co-operating with this valuable institution.

The people of Georgia have acted mighty funny politically in many instances. They have been noted for voting for men and measures at one time, and then immediately turning face about and voting for other men or measures of different and opposite stripe. But now they have reached the climax, and have declared that they will vote both for and against the same thing at the same time. They say they will vote for Senators and Congressmen who are pledged to do what they can against the League of Nations, and will at the same time vote for Cox for President, who is hell-bent in favor of the League. Can you beat that?

CREELING TO MEXICANS

A short time ago George Creel dined at the White House with the President, and then announced that he was about to enter the campaign in behalf of Cox and the league of nations. Little has been heard from him since, but recently he turned up in Mexico City. Quite likely he is impressing on the Mexican government that the election of Cox means a continuance of "watchful waiting" and that it would be to the advantage of the Mexican administration to aid the American Democratic candidate in every possible way.

Every candidate has the right to appoint a watcher at each voting place to look after his interest. This watcher may be present and see everything that occurs inside the polls. Remember that two managers, one from each political party, will have to be present when tickets are marked for voters that cannot mark their own tickets.

INSTRUCTIONS ON VOTING.

The many newly enfranchised women voters who will take part in the election next Tuesday may in numerous cases experience some inconvenience in properly marking their ballots. And there are yet many of the men votes who will find much help in the proper kind of instructions to voters.

Below we shall try to go over the main problems that will come up, and offer brief instructions as to how they may be properly solved.

The first proposition we shall take up is voting a straight party ticket. The General Election ballot contains five columns representing that number of political parties, the emblem of each party appearing at the top of its individual column. The fist column is the Republican ticket, headed by the elephant, and containing the names of the Republican candidates for the various national, state and county offices corresponding to those offices as printed on the margin of the ballot to the left. The second column contains the Democratic candidates headed by the "rooster." The other columns are the Socialist, Prohibition, and a blank column for the independent candidates. The Socialist and Prohibition tickets have the emblems of those parties at the top. At the top of each column, and immediately under the party emblem is a small circle.

In order to vote a straight Republican ticket a cross-mark should be placed in the circle under the elephant in the first column. And that is all.

In order to vote a straight Democratic ticket a cross-mark should be placed in the cicle under the rooster in the second column. And that is all.

So much for those who wish to take their poison straight.

But, for example, we will suppose that a voter wishes to vote for Harding, the Republican candidate for President, and the Democratic candidates for our county and state offices. He or she would secure the ballot and proceed as folows:

It will be found first that the names of Presidential candidates do not appear on the ballot. Instead there are the names of twelve Presidential and Vice-Pesidential electors at the head of each paty ticket. This voter then, who is voting for Harding for President, and for the Democratic county and state offices, would place a cross-mark in the blank space in front of the names of EACH of the twelve Presidential Electors in the first column under the elephant, then go over to the second, or Democatic column unde the rooster, and down that column to the names of the state and county candidates, and place a cross-mark in front of EACH of those whom it is desired to vote for. This would be what is called a split ticket.

In voting a split ticket no cross-mark should be made in ANY circle under any party emblem. Only put cross-marks in front of the names of candidates to be voted for.

Do not scratch out or erase any name from the ballot. This would mutilate your ballot, cancel your vote and subject the voter to a legal penalty.

There are no names of candidates for Justice of the Peace and Constable printed on the ballots. There is a blank space for them at the bottom of each party column, but the voters in each Beat will have to write in that space the names of the candidates for Justice of the Peace and Constable in that particular Beat.

The above instructions relate only to the General Election. There is a special Senatorial election to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Bankhead, and a special ballot will be given the voter for this election. That ballot also contains the different columns for the candidates of each party, and each column is headed by the party emblems the same as the General Election ballot. Only one candidates's name appears in each column, as there is only one office to be filled by this special election. To vote this ballot it will be correct to either put the cross mark in the circle under the party emblem, or leave the cross out of the circle and place it just before the name of the candidate of your choice. Only one place should be marked, however.

There is another ballot to be voted that which relates to the three constitutional amendments. All three of these proposed amendments are printed on one ballot with the words "for" and "against" printed just below each of the amendments. To vote for all the amendments a cross-mark must be made in the space in front of the word "for" under EACH amendment. To vote against all the amendments the cross must be made in front of the word "against" under EACH amendment. To vote for one amendment and against the others, a cross-mark must be made in front of the word "for" under the one which it is desired to vote for, and in front of the word "against"under the two it is desired to vote against.

Those who are not thoroughly acquainted with how to vote are urged to get all the information possible on the subject, and when you go to vote take your time. Elections like this don't come only every four years, so don't hurry. There is plenty of time. Vote right or you had as well stay at home and not vote at all. If your ballot is not marked correctly it will be thrown out. Ask questions till you know you understand what you want to do.

"Be sure you are right, then go ahead."

FINAL APPEAL OF JUDGE REYNOLDS IN CLOSE OF THE CAMPAIGN.

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 26, 1920.

Editor Union-Banner:

I am asking again that you permit me to use your paper to speak to the voters in this county.

The campaign is almost over, and it seems that we are going to have Senator Harding for President, and if we ever needed a presidnt it surly must be now. It seems that President Wilson has forgotten the United States entirely and has had but one idea since the war and that was to sell this country to Europe. I have read every letter he has given the press, and they all speak of the condition of Europe and what that country needs. He never mentions this country, and it seems that he would be willing to forget our needs so that he could help the other countries.

President Wilson is very anxious to have the League of Nations ratified so that he can be president of it. Governor Cox says if he is elected president that he will do as President Wilson would if he were in office, and if he will do this it is hoped that he will not be elected.

I do not see how any southern man can vote the national Democratic ticket this year. The farmers are now facing a great crisis. Their cotton has gone down below the cost of production; they appealed to the Federal Reserve Bank for help but it refused them. Mr. Houston, secretary of the U. S. Treasury and head of the Federal Reserve Bank said in plain words that he is opposed to the farmers getting help from the Federal Reserve Bank, and that he is opposed to the southern farmer having a basis of credit in this country or Europe that would help to maintain the present prices, much less raise prices. (See editorial in Montgomery Advertiser, Sept. 30, 1920.)

Every section in the United States was helped during the recent war except the South. The western wheat farmer got what he asked for, and may I ask, Why? The answer is easy. It was because he is an independent voter and will vote for his interest just as he sees it.

Will we stop for a minute and look at the South under the free trade? Peanut oil is being shipped in here, there was over 600,000,000 pounds of different oils shipped to this countryl last year. This has ruined the peanut industry in Alabama. Thousands of pounds of beef was shipped here the past year, and look at the price of beef cattle that we have to sell. Also look at the profiteering on beef—beef cattle cheap and beef is high, hides six or seven cents per pound and shoes higher than we have even seen them. Such profiteering has never been seen before.

Farming is the only business on earth that does not figure the cost of production, but the farmer has to take off his hat to the speculator and say, "What will you give me?"

This country has never prospered under a low tariff and never will. Of course conditions have not been normal since the war, and we could not see the effects of a low tariff but now the country is getting back normal.

The Republican party has put in its platform to put officials in office that will figure the cost of production and help the farmer get a profit on his products, and as we all believe that Senator Harding will be elected, why not get in line and be able to demand something from the U. S. Government?

We are the "solid South" and for over fifty years the South has given its electoral votes to the Democratic party, and the Democratic party has come to the conclusion that the South belongs to it regaidless of how it is treated. We have paid well for remaining the solid South, for we have been a foot ball for the U. S. for quite a while.

I believe that large majority of the voters in this State realize the necessity of two political parties in Alabama, and they know if we did have two parties that we would have a very much better government. Our State officials have no opposition and can do just as they please.

Look how the people are being taxed! Almost everything has a tax on it—even chickens have been taxed. The law gets tighter every year; practically all exemptions have been taken off. A few years ago the farmer had as exemption from taxation, two oxen, a horse, two cows and two calves. They had their household and kitchen furniture as exemptions; but now it is all taxed. I wonder where taxation will end? Even now the boys' coon dog is taxed. I wonder if the same crowd that has put all these taxes on will take them off? No, indeed; they will not. It will take a new crowd to take them off.

Just a few years ago every tax payer was regarded as being truthful, but it is not that way now. The State says by its law that no tax payer can be relied on to tell the truth and that tax assessors and a "figurehead" who is appointed by the Governor, can raise the tax on property whenever he sees fit, even though the valuation has already been sworn to by the owner. I ask where we have any liberty left? If conditions continue as they have been for the last few years, what will the people do?

The last legislature spent over half of the session trying to devise some way to get more taxes. They have licened every business that they could think of and some have double license on them.

I do not believe there is an intelligent voter in this county but what really believes if there was a strong vote against the Democratic party that it would have a good effect. Now is the best time we have ever had to enter our protest against the treatment we receive. If we could elect two congressmen from Alabama we could get any reasonable thing from the United States government we ask for, because that would put us in the doubtful column. But if we remain with the same old tale, that we are the solid South, the Democrats will say as they have said—"It is no use to pay attention to them, for we already have them." The Republicans will say—"We need not bother ourselves for they will still vote the Democratic ticket." Then we will still drift in the same old rut.

Does anyone believe Secretary Houston would have said that he was opposed to the southern farmer getting help from the Federal Reserve Bank if we had been an independent voter?

I want to say a few words about my race for U. S. Senator. I did not seek this nomination, but was solicited by the Republican party. I consented to make this race at a great sacrifice on my part, but I realized the necessity of two political parties in Alabama and I was willing to do what I could to help build up a Republican party in this State.

I have given two months to this campaign, and have spoken two and three times a day for the last three weeks. I have paid most of the expense, as I have received only small donations from a few of my friends. The state and national committees have not given to my campaign and so far as I can find out, I have practically financed the whole Republican State Campaign.

I regret very much that I have not had time to look after my interest in this county, but you people know me and know what I stand for. I have always been open with the people in public questions and sometimes we have not agreed, but after our party has spoken I have considered it my duty to do is I thought the party wanted.

Every Prohibition Democrat that casts his vote for Senator Underwood knows at the time he is voting that Mr. Underwood has always done all he could against prohibition. If all our legislators had voted as Mr. Underwood has we would have a bar room at every cross-roads; and the women would not be permitted to vote, for he has worked against woman suffrage at every opportunity he has had. When Mr. Underwood was a candidate for U. S. Senator in opposition to Mr. Hobson he said in the court house here that if woman suffrage was forced on us that the women would vote but that the ladies would not.

I have stood for woman suffrage for a long time; was a member of the Constitutional Convention in 1901, and voted then to give the women the right to vote. I have always stood for prohibition and worked for it when it was unpopular. Mr. Underwood has always worked against prohibition.

I appeal to the women to vote your convictions. You are not bound by any convention or to any party in any way. You have just become eligible to vote and I want to say to you to use your best judgment according to your conscience and let your conscience be your guide.

I suggest to the ladies to take their registration receipts with them to the polls, as the list will have to be made hurriedly and some mistakes might occur. Every woman who registered is a qualified voter.

I have served the people the best I could since I have been in the Probate Office, and I have tried to treat everybody the same regardless of their politics.

I was not present when the managers of the election were appointed, as I was a candidate and this barred me from helping to appoint the officials of the election. It then became the duty of the Register of the Circuit Court in Equity to appoint some one, and Mr. Spigener, the Register, as aforesaid, appointed Mr. Guy Higgins. But I am sure all the managers will do their duty and see that all who are entitled to vote can do so, and that all votes will be counted just as they are cast.

We are going to have a public speaking at the court house Saturday, October 30, at 1 p.m. and I hope everybody that can will come, as many of the public questions will be discussed.

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

REMOVE SHACKLES FROM JEFFERSON

Purpose of River Amendment—If Necessity Arises, County Can Lend Credit To Provide Adequate Railroad and Terminal Facilities for the Port of Birmingham.

Birmingham.—"The county river amendment, which will be the second on the ballot in the general election to be held November 2, cannot cost the people of Alabama outside of Jefferson county one cent," declared Judge William E. Fort, state campaign manager today. "The only purpose of this amendment is to remove the shackles placed on Jefferson County by the Constitution, so that, in case there arises a need, this county can lend its credit to provide adequate railroad transportation and terminal facilities at the port of Birmingham on the Warrior river.

"Since the amendment provides that it can apply only to counties having more than $100,000,000 assessed property, it will be readily seen that no other county in the state is involved. And even if the amendment should earry, it does not necessarily follow that Jefferson county will be called upon to lend its credit to the river project.

"Should the river transportation grow until the present facilities (which were provided by the people of Birmingham) proved insufficient and should the railroads fail to provide the necessary transportation to the river, Jefferson county can hold an election and vote on the matter. It is purely a question of local self government."

It is expected that there will be a considerable increase in traffic on the Warrior river and through the Port of Birmingham as soon as all the boats and barges which the government is now building are completed and placed in the service. And when the proposed developments at the port of Mobile, which are provided for in amendment number one are finished, still further increase in the traffic is declared to be inevitable.

With this increase, it is stated by the advocates of the river amendment, added facilities will become necessary. Proper railroad transportation between the river and Birmingham must be provided, and in case the railroads will not construct them, the people of Jefferson county will have the right to hold an election to decide whether the credit of the county shall be used to build these facilities. It is believed that if the credit is available, the railroads will voluntarily construct this railroad rather than see one built by the people.

The use of the Warrior river is of great advantage to the people of Alabama in the matter of relieving freight congestion and the car shortage.

But the principal advantage of the use of the river to the people is the saving of 20 per cent. in freight rates which it makes possible. The government has put into effect a reduction of 20 per cent. on all freight for all river traffic or for traffic which travels by both rail and the river. This saving applies directly to north and central Alabama and part of south Alabama, and indirectly to all the rest of the state on any commodities which may be purchased through firms which are located in the territory affected.

It has been announced by the government that a trial is being made on the Warrior river, of the river transportation system in Alabama. If the people make proper use of the Warrior and the traffic justifies the expenditure, similar improvements will be made by the government on the other navigable streams of the State which will then give directly to every part of the State the benefit of the reduction of 20 per cent. If the people do not provide proper facilities at Mobile, the port of Birmingham and other points along the river to enable the freight to be moved expeditiously, the government has announced there will be no similar effort made to develop the other streams of the State.

Should the use of the credit of Jefferson county be authorized by a vote of the people of the county, the money and the entire project will be in absolute control of a commission of 11 representative men, non-partisian politically, who will be appointed by the governor. The term of one man will expire each year, thus giving the chief executive the right to add any man who had displayed unusual fitness for the work of the commission. The powers of the commission would be similar to the Jefferson county sewer commission which made such a splendid record about 22 years ago in constructing the sewer system of Jefferson county.

The county river amendment is the second on the ballot and will be voted on in the general election November 2.

VOTE FOR THE SECOND AMENDMENT ON NOVEMBER SECOND!

"Felt Like Eating"

Man and Wife, All Run-Down from Farm Work, Were Greatly Helped by Ziron.

"MY WIFE and I, after a hard spring on the farm, were tired and run-down," says Mr. E. B. Mulkey, of Route 1, Acworth, Ga. "We neither felt well. I knew my blood was bad, as I had little boils on the back of my neck.

"We felt we needed a builder. We had heard of Ziron and thought it must be what we needed. It certainly was. We took it faithfully, and after a week or such a matter we began to feel better. My wife felt like cooking, and I sure felt like eating.

"Ziron sure did us good. It made us both feel stronger and better for the fall work, which everyone knows is 'some work' on a farm. My boils began to dry up, though just at first they seemed worse.

"We are much better and can highly recommend Ziron, and gladly do so for it sure did us good."

Ziron is a safe, reliable, tonic medicine, good for men, women and children, when an iron tonic is indicated. It is easy to take and contains no habit-forming drugs.

COTTON

Today the Price of Cotton to the Farmer is less than the Cost of Production.

WHY?

There are a number of reasons, but the outstanding one is the fact that the Farmers of the South are not organized. The American Cotton Association is perfecting its organization in the 14 Cotton Growing States and Alabama already has a strong membership in nearly every county in the State. But our membership is not strong enough to accomplish our full purposes, therefore beginning November 1st and continuing for 15 days a

50,000

Membership Drive

will be conducted. Has YOUR COUNTY COMPLETED ITS ORGANIZATION FOR THIS WORK? If not, it is your duty to see some officer of your County Association and start the work.

Read the following 12 objects and purposes of the association:

1. To improve and enlarge the warehousing facilities so that cotton shall not be damaged by standing in the open, and so that the producer may carry the crop with a minimum of expense, practically without physical damage, and with a maximum of security and financial ability.

2. To bring about a more equitable rule regarding tare, which rule should be that the tare is the actual weight of the bagging and ties, and should be subtracted from the actual weight of the bale of cotton in order to obtain the net weight of the raw cotton in the bale.

3. To assist the farmer in so organizing that he may know before the sale of his cotton the length of the stapie, the grade of the cotton and the market price of that length of staple and grade at the principal markets, on the day when he offers it for sale.

4. To encourage the establishing of gin compressing and better baling and wrapping of American cotton.

5. To so regulate and systematize the sampling of cotton that indiscrminate and often useless sampling of cotton may be reduced to a minimum ,and the American cotton bale may reach its ultimate market looking like a respectable and valuable package of material to be woven into cloth instead of like a bedraggled and disreputable bundle of rags.

6. To collect information regarding domestic and foreign consumption, the state of the trade, extent of acreage, supply and condition of cotton, prices at all markets, and all other information regarding the cotton industry, and to desseminate this information widely and place it specially in the hands of cotton producers and their organizations.

7. To broaden the market for raw cotton, to enlarge the use of cotton goods, and to educate those outside as well as inside the cotton area to understand the cotton problem in all its phases.

8. To improve transportation and distribution facilities.

9. To promote the intelligent growing of standard varieties of cotton and the improvement and standardization of the quality in each community as a basis for better marketing.

10. To promote diversification of crops and a safe and well-balanced agriculture as the sound basis for a thrifty rural people.

11. To protect the interests of the cotton producer and to improve his condition generally.

12. To encourage, by all proper means, the gradual marketing of cotton throughout the year, and the intelligent production of cotton on the basis of supply and demand in order that unintelligent and wasteful fluctuation in acreage and production and ruinous and rapid changes in prices, due to no other reason than speculative, may be avoided.

JEMISON LOCALS.

The Community Club gave a chicken supper Saturday night, Oct. 23. A large crowd attended and seemed to enjoy themselves very much. The proceeds were thirty five dollars, which was for the school piano fund.

After having supper, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Crysel, Misses Inez Harris, Juanita Atkinson, Wilma Webb, Eula Shaw, Ralph Glass and Pink Cooper motored over to the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Robinson where they joyously celebrated the sixteenth birthday of their daughter, Retha. After playing a number of games chocolate and cake was served to the guests. All seemed to have a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Harris and Mr. Galand Morgan of Birmingham spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. B. E. Collum.

Miss Clara Webb entertained Mr. Howard Wheeler of Birmingham last Sunday.

We are sorry to say that Mrs. Lellard Robinson is still on the sick list.

Miss Ruth Williams was the guest of Miss Ellen Glasss Saturday night and Sunday last.

School Items.

All the pupils are wearing a long face this week, and we can't account for it unless it is on account of this being test week.

We were glad to have Mr. Bowling Cooper, Misses Eula Shaw and Estell Webb visit our school Monday afternoon.

R. B. Johnson—Oh! Inez, what pretty pearls you have around your neck! Where did you get them, at Kress?

Inez Harris—No. I'll have you to understand I don't trade at Kress.

R. B.—Oh, I forgot. You trade at Woolworth's.

J. R. Rucker of Beat 8 was in Clanton Tuesday. He brought some of the ladies over here to register.

LADIES URGED TO VOTE

He believes those interests are fostered by the Republican candidates and urges them to vote in that way. He sees a chance for the women to help the country regain the rights that have been lost to us under the Wilson administration of the past eight years.

CANDY MADE IN CLANTON.

We tried the temper of our editorial tooth on a few bites sof Mr. Wall's home-made candy the other day, and Oh Boy! You tell 'em ,old foot ball; you've got the kick. That was some sweet'nin. If we could make candy like that, we would never stick another type. It would be a candy factory for us, right off the reel.

Candy like that will sell, because a taste of it will mean a come-back every time. Even a look at it will make you realize that it is something fine. But a look will not satisfy you. When you see it, you must eat.

Drop around at Fox's Auction House and sample it. You will be surprised that there is somebody in Clanton who can make such really delicious candy.

WELLS - MANNING

On last Sunday, October 24th, 1920 a pretty wedding was witnessed in Mulberry Baptist Church, near Maplesville, when Mrs. Ava Tucker, as bridesmaid, led her sister, Miss Flossie Manning up to be joined in happy wedlock to Mr. Joe H. Wells of Ensley. Mr. Earl Tucker of Birmingham was best man.

After the ceremony Bro. B. Lawrence, the pastor, preached an interesting sermon to a house full of hearers. After preaching the happy young couple left for the bride's parents home, where dinner was waiting for them. At 3:00 p.m. they left for their future home in Ensley.

Their many friends wish them a long and happy life.

JEMISON ROUTE 1

Mr. Editor:

Please give me a little space in your paper to say a few words in regard to Uncle Dock Wells's letter and the scriptures that he gave us to read last week. We think those scriptures, especially the 5th chapter of James, there is lots of scriptures that we have to wait until they are fulfilled to understand them, and surely this chapter is coming to a focus. The fourth verse refers to the laborers that reaped down the fields which is of you kept back by fraud is crying out, and their cries have gone up before the Lord and they will be heard some way. Coal field strikes and railroad strikes will not bring the cries from the rich man that has heaped up treasures in the last days as the cries will go up from the farmers. The laborers that reap down the fields will bring it all to a focus, so we know now the cries is going up. The world is paralyzed to some extent, not knowing what to do and which way to pursue to satisfy the uprising of the labor element.

The fire of the Lord is now melting some of the refused parts of his kingdom and will continue until all the dross is consumed So the Titanic has now hit the ice burg and thank God it won't be long until the world will begin to sing "Nearer My God to Thee."

So I will close before I write too much, saying it won't be long until we all see the silver lining of love from our Savior in the world's trouble. So be careful and have a life boat to get in when the Titanic goes down.

So hurrah for Uncle Dock Wells. We will add a little more scripture to his subjects: Zeph. 1, 14th verse to the end; Malachi 4th chapter.

Preceding the program Mrs. Norrell gave a sketch of the history of music, why it ante-dates all other arts, its many uses and abuses.

The pupils showed remarkable skill and progress for so short a time of study and this is the first of a series of recitals to be given by them, which will add much to the social life of the community.

MR. F. A. GULLEDGE TELLS OF HIS TRIP TO HOUSTON, TEXAS

Verbena, Ala., Oct. 18, 1920.

Editor Union-Banner:

On the 3rd inst., I left for the Confederate Reunion at Houston, Texas, where I remained until its close on the 9th. Each moment was a feast to the forty thousand visitors from all southern and some of the northern states. It was indeed and in truth a real old fashioned methodist love feast. Not a word of discord, not a man under influence of liquor in sight.

While visiting Galveston I met a friend who took me and my party of four to his home, and gave us real Virginia hospitality. Guess you, Mr. Editor, know what this is. The first I had had in a year.

At Houston I met many ex-Alabamians. They and all others looked and evidently were, prosperous. Men and women from 15 to 85, spry as larks, never saw half dozen pinched (sad) faces. Youngest to oldest really willing to and did dance, shout and make merry. The music in the lobby of the hotels was of the 20 to 50 years ago sort that would make "a preacher lay his bible down." Four of these players wore medals as antebellum musicians. A son held medal over all. The pieces were same as they played at Tulsa, Oklahoma, two years ago, viz: "Patroller," "Mississippi Sawyer," "Turkey in the Straw," "Tennessee Wagoner," "White Lady" "Frik Trowler," "Ricketts Hornpipe," "Forked Ear," "Dusty Miller," and just such. Not a note of the contemptible "jazz" which has set the world wild and brought the change from decent to indecent dancing, God forbid.

One of the most unique figures was old Uncle William Lee, once the slave of Robert E. Lee, now an educated minister, said he was freed by Mrs. Robert Lee ten years before the Civil War, was given $800 by General Lee for finishing his education. His constant lingo was his praise of the people of the South, his loyalty to the Lees and Custis's. He constantly sang "Dixie."

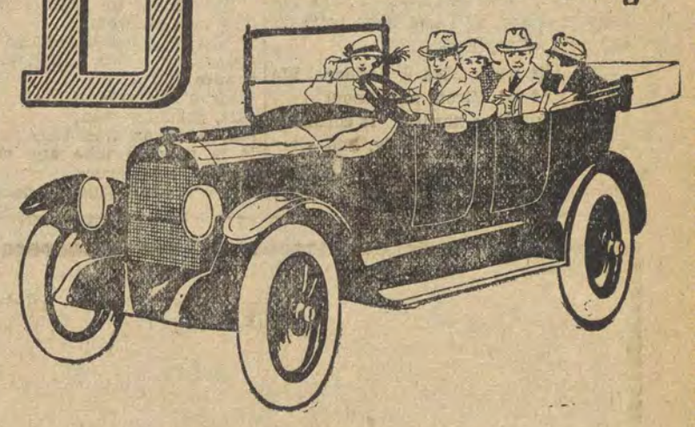
Another old negro who always carries in the parade a rooster, reminding his comrades of '61 to '65, that he is still "wid 'em."

Many men and women of note in their county, state and country, were familiar figures at each reunion. It is a wonder even the young do not attend. One much admired French lady, of Lake Charles, La., Mrs. C.

Mrs. C. M. Richards.

M. Richards, chief chaperone of the United Confederate Veterans, was there with all her glory. A grand, attractive woman, and I heard it intimated she is being groomed for mayor of Lake Charles. If so I predict the transgressors will at once quit or break for the tall timber.

Another noted woman there is Mrs. McKinney, of Paducah, Ky., president of United Daughters of the Confederacy, a very attractive and beautiful woman—unassuming, yet a look into or from her flashing eyes always brings the house to order. Another wonderful character I chanced to meet by intuition was Col. W. G. Shelton of Bastop, La., to which place he moved with his father from near Prattville, Ala., in 1884, 72 years ago, or a year before I was born. With him were a lot of his neighbors and kinsfolk. In the bunch were three red (sandy) headed pretty portly near-young women. My first sweet heart being red-headed, you can imagine how easy it was for me to "join inspiration to all about him. He is the uncle of our noble trio of west Chilton, Billie and Misses Margret and Sallie Walker, than whom there are no finer people in all Alabama.



Houston is a fine city, the largest inland cotton port in the world, and second in the United States for shipment of cotton, New York leading. Houston is 48 miles from Galveston, reached by trolley car every hour, and by railroad, by boat and ship canal. the angel band." The Colonel, while 85 years "young" was ready for the question and as a real honest-to-goodness bachelor, he was there with the goods on all occasions. He was an Houston has 135,000 population, fine stores, streets, terminals, and last but not least, a fine citizenship who did themselves white toward all. Many of the old veterans were taken up in cars and carried to the private houses and entertained without money or price, and by all was pronounced the second best Reunion ever held, Tulsa, Oklahoma leading in 1918.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. THORSBY INSTITUTE

The Helen Keller Literary Society of Thorsby Institute, held its regular fortnightly meeting on Saturday evening, October 23rd. The program consisted of: "Essay on Columbus" by Mae Ward; "The Spanish Kingdom during the 15th Century," by Ena Grenn; recitation "Columbus" by Joaquin Miller, recited by Chester Maddox; Recitation "Autumn," recited by Thomas Giles; discussion "Resolved that the new world should be called "Columbus" instead of "America," Yancey Kelly, affirmative, Clayton Sharp, negative; Current Events:"foreign" by Birdie Hall, "domestic" by Lois Hughes; Pantomine; "Vision of Columbus" by Inga Erdahl;"October" by Palma Dahl; Boys' Chorus—"October."

The Pantomine, presented by Miss Inga Erdahl, of the Crescents, was extremely interesting, the scenes representing Columbus entrusting the care of his small son to the Monks; Columbus arguing his cause with the learned Doctors of Salamanca; return of Columbus to the Court of Ferdinand and Isabella, bringing treasures of gold, jewels, skins, Indian Corn, and fruits and Indian captives. The improvised costumes were very picturesque and striking and the 'tribute' included a stack of corn stalks and a six-pound sweet potato, ostensibly from Santa Domingo and actually raised by Mr. Thompson of Thorsby.

"October" presented by Miss Palma Dahl, of the Stars, was a charming dramatization of the poem, "October" beginning with the line "October gave a party," acted by six girls accompanied by the "wind's orchestra" behind the scenes, while the poem "October" was recited by Mrs. Loveland. The Boys' chorus in the song "October" trained by Miss Fox, was particularly good.

A splendid program was rendered consisting of talks by Rev. J. M. Graham, and Prof. C. M. Williams, recitations and songs by the pupils of the city school, also music by the orchestra.

Rev. Graham gave an interesting outline of the work to be done by this association and the need of the hearty co-operation of the people of the community to better the school conditions as regards grounds for recreation and better sanitation.

At this meeting, by-laws were read and adopted, new members were received and other matters of business were transacted.

ALABAMA RELIGIOUS AND EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTE

Believing the Chilton County readers of the Union Banner will be pleased to know something of the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute, and to know also that we have been so fortunate as to get the headquaters of this new and valuable institution located in this county, we are glad to give them here a brief note of the purposes of the above named institution.

The Alabama Religious and Educational Institute was formed July 16, at Thorsby, Ala., with the following directors and officers: Board of Directors:- Rev. Lewis H. Keller, D. D., Atlanta, Georgia; Rev. Frank E. Jenkins, D. D., Demorest, Georgia; Rev. Chas. L. Fisk, Cleveland, Ohio; Rev. Elmer W. Butler, Thorsby, Ala.; Rev. Chas. T. Rogers, Hackleburg, Alabama. The government of the work is in the hands of the Directors. Their regular meetings are held quarterly.

Rev. J. M. Graham, B. D., formerly Executive Secretary of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association, and a man of several years of training and experience in religio-social and educational work in Alabama, was elected Superintendent, and Mr. C. R. Foss an experienced business man and banker of Thorsby, was elected treasurer.

The purposes of the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute are as follows:

1.To help communities, churches schools, and other organizations, to see and to grasp the larger opportunities for service to all types and conditions of humam life.

2. To encourage and develop a friendly relation, social intercourse, and community pride among the people of given communities and cause communities to develop unity of purpose and action for the good of all.

3. To help the churches to reach that great number of people not now being reached by organized Christian forces.

4. To assist churches, schools,fraternal organizations and other religious, educational, social and welfare agencies, in the making and working out of programs of community development.

5. To promote the expression of the true Christian spirit in all life relations.

The A. R. & E. I. is ready to serve when its services are called for and when it is not otherwise engaged. No charge is made for service, but it is expected that communities receiving service contribute to the work. Of course every communty will do that. For full information and dates, write Rev. J. M. Graham, Supt., Thorsby, Alabama.

THORSBY HAS NEW ENTERPRISE

Doubtless the farmers of Chilton and adjoining counties will find it to their interest to visit Thorsby and investigate the conditions upon which they may do business with the new meat packing plant which is being located there and will be in operation in a few days.

It is necessary for the hog grower to acquaint himself with the grades as distinguished by meat concerns in order that the best prices may be obtained. To this end the packing company desires to co-operate with the farmers and hog growers through hog clubs which it will assist in organizing. The object being to improve the stock of hogs by infusing new blood and to work out a basis for feeding which will grow them rapidly and profitably.

At present there are few good hogs in Chilton County, for the reason that the price has been low and feed stuff high. No system having been worked out to market them at a profit. Now that cotton is almost a failure in this section due to the ever increasing boll weevil, it behooves the land owner to divide his attention with better paying investments..

Chas. Lucas and A. C. Legg are promoting the enterprise and invite you to come to Thorsby and talk over the situation.

LOST—One license tag for automobile, No. 33920. Finder please return or notify S. M. Pate, Thorsby, Ala.

Republicans Win Election in U. S. By Big Majorities

Republican Senate and House Assured in Addition to Overwhelming Election of Harding and Coolidge.

WITH THE PRESIDENCY AND CONGRESS GO THE LOSS TO THE DEMOCRATS OF GOVERNORS, STATE LEGISLATURES AND OTHER STATE AND LOCAL CANDIDATES.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3—One of the most sweeping Republican victories in party history to-day stood recorded for Senator Warern G. Harding for President, and a Republican Congress.

Tremendous and unparallelled Republican pluralities, beginning with the first count of ballots in yesterday's election, continued mounting to higher levels to-day. Defeat in their fight both for the Presidency and for Congress was conceded early by the Democratic leaders on the basis of the crushing Republican vote, and despite the absence early to-day of final and official figures.

With the Presidency and Congress went the loss to the Democrats of governors, state legislatures and other state and local candidates. The break even threatened to extend into the border states and the hitherto "solid South," with Republican gains in some Southern states larger than any since the Civil War.

Senator Harding's victory, in what his opponent and other Democratic leaders and many prominent Republicans hailed as the "solemn referendum" upon the League of Nations, was impressive. In the absence of final figures, the swelling tide of huge pluralities early to-day gave him assurance of 329 electoral votes, as against 127 for Cox, with 75 doubtful, inclusive of states where the Republican tide was running strong.

The unofficial results presaged a larger majority in the electoral college for Senator Harding and his running mate, than any since 1888 except alone the vote of 435 for President Wilson in 1912, during the Republican split.

The Republican Congressional swing was as strong, increased majorities in both Senate and House being marked up. Early to-day victory for virtually all 15 Republican Senators for re-election was spelled by the returns, while about a half dozen of the 19 Democratic candidates were battling against Republican leads.

The first trial of woman suffrage contributed largely to the Republican majorities, and also was a factor in delaying the count in many states.

None of the minor parties, the Socialist, Farmer-Laborer, nor Prohibition figured in the Presidential result.

Ohio the home of both Harding and Cox, New York, Illinois and Pennsylvania furnished the largest Republican pluralities. That of New York was close to the million mark, Ohio was around 150,000, Illinois about 800,000, and Pennsylvania about 400,000.

In California where Senator Phelan Democrat, was trailing far behind Samuel Shortridge, Republican, and with Senator Harding even further ahead on the ticket, adoption of the alien land law relating to Japanese land tenure, had a wide majority.

Republican Governors in Connecticut and Illinois—where former Senator Ham Lewis was defeated by Len Small—Kansas, Massachusetts, Michigan, and New Hampshire were successful. And in Tennessee Governor Roberts was behind Alf Taylor, Republican.

The Republican ticket, Presidential and Senatorial, was leading in Arizona, Nevada, Idaho, Missouri, Montana, and South Dakota. In the Oklahoma the race was said to be the closest in history with the Democrats a little ahead.

TENNESSEE DOUBTFUL.

NASHVILLE, Nov. 3—At ten o'clock this morning reports from 66 counties out of 95 in the state, gave Harding a lead of 268 over Cox in the state. The figures include a report that Shelby County (Memphis) had gone for Cox by 4,000 votes.

Later figures have increased the lead of Alf Taylor, Republican candidate for Governor over Governor Roberts, Democrat, to over 15,000. Shelby county is reported to have gone for Taylor by 500 majority.

The Republicans pied up heavy majorities in East Tennessee, while the Democratic majorities in middle Tennessee in many cases fell below normal. Some Democratic counties in this section even went Republican.

Tennessee has never gone Republican in a presidential race since the days of reconstruction.

Mr. Dennis a man of sterling worth, who has enjoyed many years of successful public service to the people of Chilton County. He began his career when a young man, as a teacher in the public schools of the county, and rapidly climbed to a position of confidence among the people with whom he came into contact. He was elected as Tax Collector of the County in , serving one term in that office in 1912 he was elected Tax Assessor, in which office he is now concluding his second term. In all his public service, as well as in his private affairs, Mr. Dennis has conducted himself in the most honorable way, and has thereby grown into the highest confidence of the people of the county.

This Xmas let it be a Furniture Aristocrat

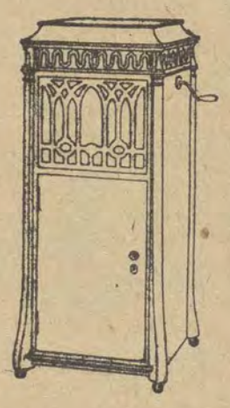
Get this Xmas guide-book to Period Furniture

Come in and let us give you a copy of "Edison and Music". Tells about the chief period designs—what they look like, what they stand for. Pithy descriptions. Beautiful illustrations. Just the information you want.

Let us show you what an exquisite thing a phonograph cabinet can be.

Every New Edison on our floor—no matter what its price—is encased in a genuine period cabinet.

Period Furniture is the world's most exquisite development of furniture. It originated in the 16th, 17th, and 18th Centuries. Europe was ruled by a Gorgeous Aristocracy. Fine living was the ideal of the day. An unparalleled race of artists, architects, and designers built palatial living-places for kings and nobles, and furnished them. The palaces of the nobility became treasure-houses of fine furniture. It was called the "Golden Age of Furniture."



So Mr. Edison had his designers go back into the manor houses of England, the chateaux of France and the castles of Italy. They adapted 17 designs from historic masterpieces. They preserved entire "the character and feeling of the best periods" in these superb phonograph cases for the modern American home.

No matter which Edison cabinet you choose, you get both the arts that make your house a cultured home—music perfectly RE-CREATED and furniture of purest period source. What finer gift for all the family?

SOCIETY AND PERSONALS

MRS. R. E. LUCKIE, Editor.

Womans Missionary Meets.

A delightful bible study and social meeting of the Methodist Ladies was held Monday evening with Mrs. Clyde Jones at three o'clock. Mrs. N. A. Kicker conducted the Bible study. After the Study period a social hour was enjoyed when delicious ice cream and cake were served. The chairman of the circles reported a box sent to the Polish Relief funds valued at $100. Plans were made to observe next week as week of prayer and will be held on Monday at 3:30 at the Methodist Parsonage; Tuesday at the same time at the residence of Mrs. R. E. Luckie and only through Wednesday with Mrs. Harvey Chandler. All ladies are especially invited to come.

Pretty Birthday Party.

Among the pretty parties of the past week was a birthday party given by Mrs. Grady Reynolds, when she entertained, celebrating her son, Grady, Jr.'s fourth birthday.

The little folks first enjoyed a fishing trip when each little girl received dainty dolls dressed in yelow crepe paper and the boys each got whistles. After visiting the fish pond they were invited into the dining room which was beautifully decorated in flowers and yellow crepe paper. Here the white embossed birthday cake held four tiny yellow lighted tapers. The little guests were then served ice cream, cake, bon bons and mints. About 25 guests responded to Master Grady's kind invitations.

Assisting Mrs. Reynolds were Mrs. N. A. Kicker and Mrs. John Bridges.

Pretty Party at High School.

On last Friday night at the C. C. High School was given one of the most enjoyable social afafir of the season, when the faculty entertained for the school benefit.

The decorations transformed the entire building into a realm where witches and spints held high revelry, the occasion being a signal for much good natured merriment. An interesting feature of the evening was a musical program by Mrs. Alverson. A neat little sum was realized.

Polly Anna Club Entertained

One of the prettiest of the weeks parties was given by Mrs. R. C. McDavid when she was hostess to the Polly Anna Club on last Wednesday evening at the Wilson Hotel parlors.

For the occasion the reception room was elaborately decorated in Autumn leaves and other yellow daisies, which emphasized the Halloween spirit. The afternoon was spent in playing "42" at three tables. The napkins and score cards further suggested the idea of Halloween. At the close of the evening's game a lovely ice course was served by Mrs. McDavid, assisted by Mrs. Elmore. Favors of the occasion were tiny yellow boxes filled with nuts.

CALLEN-CALLEN WEDDING

The following announcements have been received by friends and relatives here:

Birthday Party Given.

The birthday of little Miss Helen Roberts was the occasion of a beautiful childrens party given at the home of her grand parents on last Thursday. After several games the children enjoyed a fishing trip where each received cute souvenirs of the occasion, after which delicious ice cream and cake was served.

In the dining room, which was made attractive with pink and white crepe and other decorations a large birthday cake holding three lighted candles made a pretty ornament for the center table decoration.

Mrs. Roberts was assisted by Misses Mary McSwain, Pauline Lawrence and Mattie May Fiquette.

Civic League Entertained

On Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. J. P. Hayes the Civic L eague held one of the most interesting meetings of the year. This being art week, a most enjoyable program was enjoyed. Roll call was answered with a definition of art. Reading on the same subject were persented by Mesdames W. T. Callen, T. A. Curry, J. J. Pickens. A motion was put before the league and voted to have a "Story Telling Hour"o n two Saturdays out of the month from 2 till 3 o'clock for the young folks.

Later in afternoon delicious sandwiches and tea were served. The Civic is doing good work in the town and wants new members. They will enter into the contest next year at clean-up week and compete for the $50 prize.

Mrs. Hinkle Hostess

The Polly Anna Club was delightfuly entertained by Mrs. Hinke on last Wednesday at the home of Mrs. M. L. White. The spacious living room made attractive by vases of pretty roses, where three tables were arranged for the game of "42." The Edison funished music throughout the afternoon.

Fruit jello and cakes were served to about 16 members, the cake having been embossed in minute dominoes, added much to the daintiness of the refreshments. Mrs. J. Q. Wade, Mrs. Grady Broadhead, Misses Wesley and Mayme Rogers were added as new members to this club.

Mr. Guy Higgins visited Mr. Burton Higgins in Maplesville this week.

Mrs. Downs Entertains.

Of many pretty parties of the week Mrs. Hosea Downs was numbered among the most enjoyable, when she entertained the Tuesday Bridge Club on Monday night. The reception rooms were made attractive by stately palms and ferns. After a few hours playing the game, a delicious salad plate with hot chocolate was served. This being the time to award the prize to the Card Cub, Mrs. Guy Higgins, holding the highest score, won a card table.

Wednesday Bridge Club.

Wonder if Mr. Wilson is now convinced that this country don't want the League of Nations?

If every county in Alabama was like Chilton county, what kind of a State would our State be? Ask some of your Democratic friends.

We are sorry to see Beat 16 lose its championship. Beat 11 took it away from her this time, voting the Republican ticket to the tune of 84 to 1.

According to the Democratic newspapers in their pre-election talks, the United States will go to the demnition bow-wows now in a very shhort time.

What has become of all the women who regisetred in Chilton county? It looks like they have done like the women of Maine—all joined the Republican party.

"What Wilson has promised, I will endeavor to give."—Cox. Well, now who are you going to give it to, Jim? The people of the United States don't want it.

The people of the United States prefer to stay out of the League of Nations with Harding, rather than to go into it with Cox. We think it is a wise decision.

A CHALLENGE TO CLANTON.

Mr. A. C. Legg of Thorsby, a live and hustling business man of that Town, and Secretary and Manager of the Thorsby Chamber of Commerce, was in Clanton Monday in the interest of that organization. From hearing Mr. Legg talk over the Thorsby situation we are convinced that those people up there are determnied to make their commercial organization a real and active factor in developing the Thorsby District. Now Mr. Legg is not the only one we have heard talking "Thorsby" here of late. The other people there have also got the germ of progress and push thoroughly inoculated into their systems, and you can find signs of it talking to just anybody from Thorsby.

Mr. Legg says: "We are going to put money into signs and advertising matter so that a tourist on the Birmingham and Montgomery Highway or a passenger on the trains through the town cannot pass without knowing that he has passed through Thorsby; and further, he will know that he has an invitation to stop his automobile, or get right off the train and spend a while and look over our town and the surrounding community."

"In this connection," Mr. Legg further stated, "we are assured that in a short time we shall see the erection of a modern brick hotel in our little city. This will of course make it possible for us to invite strangers to come to see us, and enable us to entertain them properly while here."

Mr. Legg stated to the Banner that Thorsby, through her Chamber of Commerce, challenges Clanton to get into the race with them and match our pulling powers with theirs in the drawing of business men and industrial enterprises to Chilton county.

Now it is up to Clanton to say what we shall do with Thorsby's challenge. She has drawn the dead line so to speak. She says to Clanton, "If you have any life and fight in your old dried up hull, and wish to contend with us in a real commercial contest, just step up to the line and we shall see who can put up the gamest fight." What will Clanton say?

This of course does not mean bitterness and strife between the two towns for Thorsby entertains nothing of that sort toward Clanton, nor Clanton towards Thorsby. But it means a friendly rivalry for commercial and industrial growth.

It is as Mr. Legg stated to us. If Clanton or Thorsby should lose to the other in a race for a business enterprise, it would in either case mean that Chilton county would be the ultimate benefactor just the same. And after all it is the progress and development of Chilton county that both towns should be seeking.

Shall Clanton send back Thorsby's challenge, and be able to match their commercial organization with one of our own? Thorsby is waiting for our answer.

ATTEST:
H. T. WILLIAMS,
D. I. DERAMUS, Jr.,
S. L. GIBSON,
W. A. GULLEDGE, Directors.

WHEN you buy eggs—you judge their value by freshness and the "dozen."
When you buy silk you figure its worth by feel—beauty and the "yard."
But—how do you arrive at the value of baking powder? You can't tell by appearances — by weight — bulk doesn't mean quality.
There's only one way—and that is an oven test.
By that test—Calumet always proves itself the best.

Never Fails – Never permits waste of baking materials

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

"BEST BY TEST"

It is the most economical of all leaveners. Its price is moderate—you save when you buy it.
It has more than the ordinary leavening strength—you use less and save when you use it.
It never fails. There is no loss of baking ingredients.
So, don't guess at Baking Powder value any longer. Measure it by results.
The body needs gluten. Be sure you get it. Use only plain wheat flour and pure baking powder. Mix them yourself. No ready prepared substitute or mixture (self-rising flour) will answer the purpose.

Calumet Griddle Cake Recipe
4 cups flour, 4 level teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder, 1 teaspoon salt, 3 cups milk. Then mix in regular way.

A SYSTEM-BUILDER

People who have been sick, need a tonic to help them regain their strength. After severe illness, you know the tired, weak, no-account feeling that hangs on, after you get up and begin to go about. The sooner you get your strength back the better, and you should derive valuable assistance, in enriching your blood, renewing your appetite, helping you to digest your food, and to build up your system, by taking

ZIRON

The Scientific Iron Tonic

Mr. Ervin Horton, a prominent citizen of Horton, Ala., writes: "I have been taking Ziron, and it is a wonderful medicine. It helped me more than anything else, after I had the influenza. It is a great system-builder. I appreciate what Ziron has done for me." The merit of Ziron has been proved by the good results obtained by thousands of men and women who have taken it. You should try Ziron. Your money will be refunded if the first bottle of Ziron fails to help you.

Ask your druggist for Ziron. Accept no substitutes. ZJ. 2

SHOULTS NEWS.

People here are almost through gathering their crops. The trouble now is that they can't get any price for what they have made, and have to pay such high prices for clothing, and shoes and other things.

We regret very much to say that Mr. Ed Hall is at this time very sick.

Mr. Tom Wallace, his wife and Miss Nora Wallace, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Walker.

Mrs. Virgil Kelley and Mrs. Clint McGee spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Percy Hicks.

Mr. Sam Shoults spent Saturday in Selma visiting relatives.

Mr. Hinton Lawrence and wife of Selma are visiting relatives here.

Mr. Homer Sewell from near Burnsville is now moving to this community and he and his family are heartily welcomed by the neighbors.

The literary school began last Monday with a large attendance for the first week. The parents are showing much interest in the school this year.

We miss from our Sunday school Mr. Clinton Sewell, who now has a position at Lomax. Mr. Clifton was a live Sunday school worker and we hope he will soon be back.

Mr. Silas Oden, who had a good position in Texas, and was called home on account of the death of his brother some few days ago, has decided to remain at home for the present.

Mr. Johnnie McAffee from Selma visited home folks here Sunday.

FIFTH SUNDAY MEETING

A united and successful Fifth Sunday Meeting of the Chilton County and Unity Baptist Associations was held at Clanton last Saturday and Sunday. Brethren T. J. Deason and P. G. Carter were elected Chairman and Secretary of the meeting respectively.

The subjects discussed at the meeting on Saturday morning were the Needs of the Church, and Mission Work in Our Associations. The discussions were opened by Bro. S. M. Adams, and entered into by others of the Brethren who were present. The needs of the Church were conceded to be great and numerous, some of them in particular being more spirituality, loyalty to the Bible as our standard of Christian living, trained workers and leaders. The need of employing a regular Missionary for the Chilton County Association being very manifest, after considerable discussion the following motion, moved by P. G. Carter and seconded by S. M. Adams, was accepted by the meeting: That the Pastors of the Association be asked to lay the matter of engaging a missionary for the Association, and see what each of their churches would be willing to contribute towards his support, and to report the same to the executive meeting within the next thirty days. It was felt that if each church would contribute from $2.00 to $5.00 per month each, the State Board would supplement the amount raised and make it possible to engage such a man for this very needy work.

At the afternoon meeting on Saturday the subject of Religion in the Home was introduced by Rev. W. A. Goss, also the matter of our Enlistment Work, by Bro. W. H. Connell, and the subjects were interestingly and profitably discussed by the brethren present.

The program on Sunday was of a varied nature. At the Sunday school hour a splendid talk was made by Prof. J. L. Johnson on the B. Y. P. U. Work, and the sermon at the regular preaching hour was delivered by Rev. D. D. Head af Marbury.

In the afternoon the ordination service of Brother W. A. Kemp as a Deacon of the church was held and it was quite an impressive service. The following brethren constituted the council: Fev. P. G. Carter, Moderator, Rev. D. D. Head, Chief Examiner, Rev. W. H. Connell delivered the charge to the candidate and to the Church, Rev. W. P. Lowery, the presentation of the Bible, and Rev. E. A. Norris delivered the ordaining prayer, these with Deacons M. D. Foshee and E. E. Upchurch, constituted the Presbytery.

The examination of the candidate in the Articles of Faith of the Baptist Church, the charge delivered, and the laying on of hands, must have impressed not only the deacon appointed, but also all of those present, of the sacrednesss and great importance of the office.

By agreement of the meeting and subject to ratification of the churches named, two meetings will be held on the next fifth Sunday, one at Sardis and one at Corinth.

P. G. CARTER, Secretary.

Indigestion

Many persons, otherwise vigorous and healthy, are bothered occasionally with indigestion. The effects of a disordered stomach on the system are dangerous, and prompt treatment of indigestion is important. Falling Leaves

Autumn's falling leaves make a gloomy picture if we did not know that nature's all-wise plan provides for the return of foliage.

Have you provided for next year, and the years thereafter, with the same wisdom that nature displays?

If a season of misfortune came upon you, if you were nipped by the frosts of adversity, as the tree's foliage is nipped, could you come back again as do the trees?

The answer lies in what you have laid up. If you are using up every day what you earn that day you could never recover from misfortune. But if you are making every day provide for itself and part of a future day by steady deposits in bank, then you can weather any storm that comes.

Following this, By-Laws were adopted and general discussion on civic work was taken up.

On the 27th, the day following, the directors assembled and elected officers as follows: President, J. M. Graham, First Vice-President, C. R. Foss, Second Vice-President, C. H. Thomsen, Treasurer, Wm. Parnell, Sec.-Mgr., A. C. Legg.

Matters of organization, publicity, etc., were also taken up. Another meeting of the directors was held on Monday evening, Nov. 1. General business was takeu up. Arrangements are being made for permanent quarters for this organization, and as soon as secured they will be announced.

The Baptist Church of Thorsby will soon have completed its improvements on the building that have been under way for the past weeks. The inside room, as well as the Sunday School rooms, have been repapered white. The outside has been given several new coats of paint.

They are looking forward to the meeting of the Chilton County Association to be held at the church next year. This Association was organized at Thorsby in 1901. It has grown until it now has a membership of 28 churchces on its roll. The coming meeting promises to be the best that the body has ever held.

It is interesting to note that fifteen houses have recently been built, or are now under construction in the Town of Thorsby. Yet we understand that all are spoken for, with more people on the waiting list for somewhere to move. Those who own vacant lots in town should take imme diate steps to build on them.

Mr P. Gustafson met with a serious and painful accident last week while blowing stumps on his farm. Though he stood a great distance from the stump, about to be blown, a large fragment was hurled toward him, and struck his left arm, breaking it in a number of places.

The holding of cotton in and near Thorsby is very general. Only in cases of necessitw has any been sold. The farmers here realize that in holding the cotton off the market for the present will help bring the price up.

There is one thing Thorsby should be proud of, and that is the Goodgame Planing Mill, which seems to be running full time. This enterprise has greatly added to the activity of the town through the efficient management of Mr. Goodgame. We understand that you can get anything you wish of finished lumber for inside work, in building your home. Mr. Goodgame also has charge of the cotton gin and warehouse. It is interesting to note that the cotton warehouse carries a cheaper insurance rate because it is better built than most other warehouses in our territory, which means that the farmers may safely warehouse their cotton here, knowing that it will be well taken care of.

KNOCKERS—TAKE NOTICE!

At the last meeting held by the Directors of the Thorsby Chamber of Commerce, a motion was passed that this organization place on the public bulletin board in front of the post office a challenge to KNOCKERS to form themselves into an organization, and accept an invitation from us into a public discusssion on the merits and demerits of Thorsby. WE NEED A HOTEL

The evident need of a Hotel in Thorsby is shown by the fact that so many of the business salesmen, and even visitors, are compelled to go to Clanton, eight miles south of us or to Jemison, three miles north of us, for sleeping accommodations. It is high time the citizens of this town wake up to this fact, and see that in some way the situation may be remedied. We have a good restaurant, but let us also have a good hotel.

ALABAMA POWER COMPANY TO BUILD NEW DAM AT DUNCAN'S RIFFLE ON THE COOSA RIVER.

Plant Will Have Initial Capacity of 50,000 Horsepower — Eventual Capacity Will be 120,000

The Alabama Power Company will build a power dam at Duncan's Riffle, 12 miles below Lock 12, on the Coosa River, in Chilton County. It is planned to have this new plant in operation by January 1st, 1923.

Application for permission to construct the dam has been filed with the Federal Water Power Commission at Washington. This application is a mere formality under the new water power bill, and it is expected to be promptly approved.

The new project is to be named Mitchell Dam in honor of the late president of the Co., James Mitchell. It will have an initial capacity of 50,000 horse power, with an ultimate capacity of 120,000 horse power. This will make it slightly larger than the Lock 12 plant, which, with the sixth unit now being installed, has a capacity of 115,000 horse power.

The power company has slected Duncan's Riffle as its next point of exploitation because the construction of a dam there means that much more toward the removal of the Coosa Rapids, and enabling the navigation to the Gulf of Mexico, a distance of 841 miles.

Chilton County will find a great degree of interest in this announcement of renewed activity of the Alabama Power Compay in this county. It means much in an industrial way, and we are proud to see another giant hydro-electric plant rise up on our part of the Coosa.

CAUGHT WITH WHISKEY.

Last Saturday morning Sheriff J. L. Gore and Deputy W. G. Culp, arrested Van Ness Mims and Leonard Easterling just on this side of the river at Higgins Ferry with a small cargo of whiskey which they were supposedly transporting from Coosa County to Clanton. When the Sheriff halted the car which was driven by Mims, the boys began a hurried effort to break their jugs and bottles before the officers could seize any of the liquor. This they succeeded in doing. But the officers received the evidence to warrant the arrest of the two boys.

Please permit me a small space in your valuable paper to say a few words from this place.

Health of this community is fine; everybody enjoying these beautiful sun shiny days. Gathering is all the go now.

Preaching at this place Sunday was grand. Everyone seemed to realize the importance of the service.

Rev. Bailey delivered a very interesting sermon. Also Bro. Littlejohn from Lawley was with us. We were sure glad to say that Rev. Bailey was welcomed to preach here at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Scott spent the week end with friends and relatives near Mars Hill.

Mrs. Willie Scott from Birmingham is visiting parents at ths place.

TO THE HOG RAISERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

More than a year ago we were elected as a committee to try to create some interest in growing hogs. At that time corn was high, cotton 30 to 40 cents and hogs 12 to 14 cents per pound. No one would talk about raising hogs. Now hogs are worth 12 to 14 cents, cotton worth 18 cents, and corn less than $1 per bushel. We believe now is the time to grow some hogs, as they are the best thing on the market. We would like to know how many people will agree to raise two or more hogs for the next fall market. We would like to hear from all that are willing to try this. We feel sure we can make more out of hogs than cotton. If there is enough interest we will call the people together soon. Write either of us.

J. D. COLLINS,
W. I. MULLINS,

THANKS TO VOTERS

On behalf of Tom Rockett and Sam Pate, we wish to state to the voters of Chilton County, and especially the ladies, that you have the thanks of these two gentlemen for electing them to the offices of Tax Collector and Assessor on Nov. 2, by such handsome majorities. We extend this little expression of thanks because we didn't want the paper to go out without some kind of message of gratitude to the voters for the splendid victory recorded for the Republican ticket on November 2nd. Tom and Sam didn't write up a letter of thanks to the voters very probably for the reason that they are so glad they were elected that they did not think about writing it. Any way, we know they are glad you voted for them, and we are glad too, and so are all the other candidates.

BANKHEAD HAD BRISK FIGHT FOR CONGRESSMAN IN THE TENTH DISTRICT.

Official Vote Shows Him a Majority of Only 721 Over Republican, Candidate, Chenault.

Losing Franklin and Winston counties by heavy majorities, and Fayette by a small majority, Representative Wm. B. Bankhead has been returned to Congress from the Tenth District by a plurality of 721 votes over his Republican opponent, Chenault.

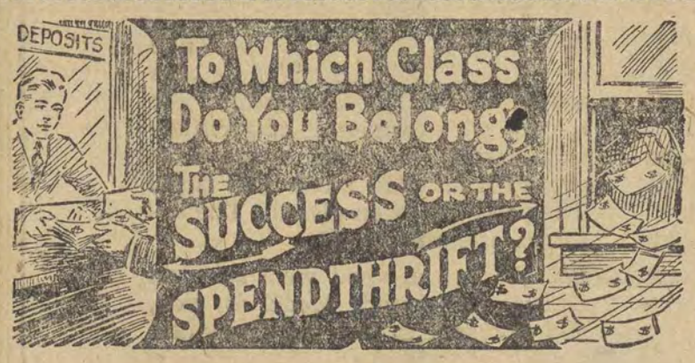
With the interest of the state centered chiefly in the congressional fight being waged in the seventh between L. B. Rainey and C. B. Kennemar, little attention had been paid by either party to the Tenth, and as the reports were first received from the District it was thought that Mr. Chenault, the Republican, had won. The returns from Pickens county put the Democratic candidate ahead.

Bankhead carried Walker, his home county, by only 363 votes, and the fact that Pickens county gave him a majority of 1220 is the only thing that saved his hide. The vote by the counties of the district was as follows:

Winston—Chenault 2,340, Bankhead 1,244.

Franklin—Chenault 2,862, Bankhead 2,159.

Fayette—Chenault 1,688, Bankhead 1,562.



Walker—Chenault 4,333, Bankhead 4,696.

Lamar—Chenault 4,333, Bankhead 4,849.

Marion—Bankhead a majority of 577.

Pickens— Chenault 240, Bankhead 1,460.

In Walker county Senator Underwood trailed behind Reynolds, the Republican candidate, by 340 votes. Franklin, Winston and Fayette gave majorities for the Republicans, and in Winston every officer elected was a Republican.

FRIENDSHIP

Everyone seems to be enjoying life around here, as they are most through gathering their crops.

Prayer service was conducted by Mr. Joe Baker last Sunday night. Quite a large crowd attended the service, which we were glad to see. We had some good singing both Sunday and Sunday night.

We want to announce that our singing society will meet next Sunday afternoon at 1:30. We invite every one who will help us to come, and those who will not help come and listen.

On next fourth Sunday we will have with us the noted singer, Mr. James Franklin. We will have singing both in the morning and afternoon of that day. We cordially invite every singer and lover of music to be with us on that day.

There will be Sunday school next Sunday at the usual hour, 10 o'clock, and the singing society will meet at 1:30 in the afternoon. It will meet at this hour every second and fourth Sunday afternoon.

There will be preaching here on the third Sunday night. Rev. J. D. Hughes will preach. We hope a large crowd will be out to hear his message.

Hereafter prayer meeting will be held only on the first and third Sunday nights.

There were several visitors last Sunday night, and we want to thank those who so generously helped us in our singing. We want you to come again.

Next Monday morning is the date set for the men to start re-covering the church house; and we want to say that any help in this work will be appreciated.

Sunday School every Sunday at 10 o'clock, prayer meeting every first and third Sunday night at 7:30, singing every second and fourth Sunday afternoons at 1:30, and preaching every fourth Sunday at 11, a.m. and 7:30, p.m.

Thanking the editor for this space, will close for this time.

SHOULTS

On last Saturday at about 11:00 o'clock, Mr. Ed Hall died at the home of his sister, Mrs. C. T. Walker. He had been sick for about six or more weeks. Everything was done in effort to save him, but God knew best and took him from his relatives and friends which were numerous.

Mr. Hall was near 60 years of age, a member of Pleasant Hill Methodist Church and he was a man that looked after his own affairs and left the other fellow's alone; everyone who knew him was his intimate friend.

He leaves one brother, two sisters, one half brother and two half sisters.

The funeral services were held from Pleasant Hill Methodist Church Sunday morning, by Rev. Butram of Maplesville.

Mrs. C. T. Walker wishes to express her thanks and gratitude to the people of this community for their help and kindness during the illness and death of her brother, Mr. Ed Hall. It is good to live in a community where the people are so kind hearted and generous.

Mrs. T. C. Snead of Centerville was here to atend the funeral of her uncle last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. William Williams were here Sunday from near Maplesville attending the funeral of Mr. Ed Hall, their uncle.

Mrs. Bessie Garner and Mr. Howard Oden attended the reading circle at Maplesville last Friday.

There was no Sunday School at Pleasant Grove Baptist Church last Sunday on account of the funeral services.

The people here are all so well pleased with the results of the election last week.

Mrs. George Hamrick is at this time very sick. Her friends are sorry and hope that she will soon be well again.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Hicks motored to Lawley Sunday on a visit to their mother, Mrs. Fannie Hicks.

Mr. Fred McGee spent Sunday night with father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene McGee.

WILL CONTEST ELECTION

The latest announcement from Republican headquarters in the Seventh Alabama District says that it has been definitely decided to contest the election of L. B. Rainey, Democratic candidate for congress by C. B. Kennemar, his Republican opponent.

Kennemar's friends contend that Rainey's majority of about 700 votes was obtained by illegal registration of voters and other irregularities in the election machinery. The contest will be watched with interest.

BOX SUPPER AT POPLAR

There will be a Box Supper at Poplar Springs Schoolhouse Saturday night, November 13. Proceeds will go to school. All are invited to come and take part.

Attorney L. F. Gerald was in the city of Birmingham last Friday on business with the Alabama Power Co., relative to the beginning of work on the new power plant to be built at Duncan's Riffles. It is practically assured that work on this project will begin at once, although Mr. Gerald would state nothing definitely in regard to the plans and purposes of the Power Company.

FROM OUR COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL SECRETARY

Letters received from our State president show that the Alabama Sunday School Association is suffering very much financially. Our allotment has been reduced from $240 to $180. We have about 80 schools in Chilton County. Last year we did not pay the state more than $60, but this year we are going to try to pay the $180, which is about $2.25 a school. We have only a few that contribute, that is why we fail in the finances. To make our county a gold star county we must pay our allotment, each school attend at least one convention or be visited by county or district officer, and fill out the statistical report blank and send to your county secretary. Last year only 24 schools sent reports.

Statistics show 22,270 people in Chilton County; 1,711 in Sunday School; 20,559 out of Sunday School. We know that we have many more in Sunday School, but failed to get the reports, and this is why Chilton County stands at the very bottom in S. S. work. Let's get busy and pay at least one-half of our allotment by November 15th, and make Chliton County a gold star county. We have as good people in our county as any where else. Let's prove it. Send all reports and contributions to your county treasurer.

BLACKMON HAS MAJORITY OVER LONGSHORE IN FOURTH.

ANNISTON, Nov. 6—Revised figures on the official count of the Congressional election in the Fourth District show Congressman Fred L. Blackmon's majority over A. P. Longshore 4,150 votes. This is larger than the friends of Congressman Blackmon had estimated from the first reports of the official count, and they show the largest majority ever given Mr. Blackmon in a Congressional race. Longshore's friends counted upon Republican women's votes to make a good showing for him, but the Democratic women voted in greater numbers for Blackmon, as well as the Democratic men.

And no one could tell the difference!

This test of direct comparison was made by Anna Case, world-famous soprano, before 2500 people, at Carnegie Hall, New York City, on March 10, 1920. See the three diagram sketches below:

First—
Miss Case stood beside the New Edison and sang.

Suddenly—
the lights went out, but Miss Case's voice went smoothly on.

Then—
the lights went on again. Miss Case was gone. The audience gasped with surprise to find that her voice had been coming from the New Edison.

Mr. Santa Claus! Come in and hear the phonograph that did it

We want you to see it, listen to it, test it for yourself. This marvelous phonograph can give the family more pleasure than any other instrument you can buy them for Christmas.

Here is why:

This phonograph has actually proved that it can match the performance of the living artist,—and match it so perfectly that no one can tell its RE-CREATION from the living performance.

It did this on March 10, 1920 before 2500 people at Carnegie Hall, New York City—with Anna Case, the world-famed soprano. It did this on September 30th, 1919, before 2500 people at Carnegie Hall, Pittsburgh—with Marie Rappold, prima donna of the Metropolitan Opera Company. It did this on November 5th, 1919, before 6500 teachers at the State Armory, Albany—with Mario Laurenti of the Metropolitan Opera Company. It did this over 4000 other times, with more than fifty great vocalists and instrumentalists.

You can read the facts of these amazing achievements in the leading newspapers of the United States and Canada. They are the talk of the music and scientific world.

And the phonograph? It's the Official Laboratory Model of the New Edison, "the phonograph with a soul." Every Official Laboratory Model in our store is an exact duplicate of the famous original Official Laboratory Model which cost Mr. Edison three million dollars to perfect. It is capable of sustaining the test of direct comparison; we guarantee this.

Get an Official Laboratory Model for Christmas. You will have the one phonograph which brings you the living performances of great artists exactly as those artists have given them. You know this is so! The proof has been given! The absolute, scientific proof!

Say the word,—and we'll save an Official Laboratory Model for you, and deliver it in time for Christmas.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

Test It Yourself

You'll be able to recognize its superiority with your own ears—in every kind of vocal and instrumental music. Come in and see whether this isn't so. We'll gladly give you Mr. Edison's famous Realism Test.

Money Help

Ask about our Budget Plan. It shows you how to make best use of your Christmas money. It brings your New Edison for Christmas, and makes 1921 help pay. Careful, systematic spending always makes money go farther.

Prices

There is no inflation in Edison Prices. "Edison stood the Gaff" to keep his favorite invention within the reach of everyone.

"Felt Like Eating"

Man and Wife, All Run-Down from Farm Work, Were Greatly Helped by Ziron.

"MY WIFE and I, after a hard spring on the farm, were tired and run-down," says Mr. E. B. Mulkey, of Route 1, Acworth, Ga. "We neither felt well. I knew my blood was bad, as I had little boils on the back of my neck.

"We felt we needed a builder. We had heard of Ziron and thought it must be what we needed. It certainly was. We took it faithfully, and after a week or such a matter we began to feel better. My wife felt like cooking, and I sure felt like eating.

"Ziron sure did us good. It made us both feel stronger and better for the fall work, which everyone knows is 'some work' on a farm. My boils began to dry up, though just at first they seemed worse.

"We are much better and can highly recommend Ziron, and gladly do so for it sure did us good."

Ziron is a safe, reliable, tonic medicine, good for men, women and children, when an iron tonic is indicated. It is easy to take and contains no habit-forming drugs.

POOR WOMAN MAKES SACRIFICE

"For years I have doctored for indigestion and severe bloating with gas, all my money has gone for doctors and medicine which did me no good. I had lost all faith in medicines and as I have to work hard for the few dollars I earn, was afraid to risk any more money. A year ago my neighbor told me to try Mayr's Wonderful Remedy. I have found it to be the best medicine in the world and I am glad I made the sacrifice." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal track and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.

Republicans have already announced plans whereby the number of government employees at Washington is to be reduced just one-half. This means that 237,500 job holders of the government will be turned off and their names taken off the payroll. This is one of the first economies that will be undertaken by the new Republican administration.

The Democratic National Committee has "blacklisted" a group of prominent Democrats whom they blame for their recent party defeat, owing to the fact that they did not co-operate and directly assist in the campaign. We don't blame the committee for wanting to put the responsibility off on somebody else. The Democrats made such a poor showing at the game of getting votes that nobody could be proud of the outcome for them.

Imagine a poet for Secretary of Labor in the Cabinet of the President of the U.S.A. No wonder Wilson has made a mess of this government. He himself is first of all a dreamer and follower of altogether unpractical ideas of statesmanship. Then to add to the dilemma, he surrounds himself with a cabinet composed of men whose business has been studying out idle poetic stuff of the pink cloud variety. Secretary of Labor, Wilson, plans to return to his former occupation of verse writing.

"IN MEMORIAM"

The day is at last upon us when we hear ascending from many and varied places to the sacred altar of traditional Democracy, the solemn requiem as it is being breathed by a sad and dejected group of faithful followers over the prostrated and vanquished form of their broken and demolished idol, for many long years hallowed and worshipped as the "solid Democratic South."

Tennessee and Oklahoma, and other border states of Missouri and Maryland have yielded up their former blind allegiance to the idol and set their feet out upon the new pathway that leads to a participation in and exercise of political rights for reasons better and more fruitful to the people than those of the weary and footsore years that have been spent in the barren waste and monotonous ways of traditional Democracy; an allegiance that has been clinging to this Democracy, not because is was Democracy, but because it was traditional.

The justly famous donkey in many states and counties has been starved to death on account of his uselessness, and the well-known "rooster" is no longer perched upon the lofty places shouting his defiant challenge of political supremacy across Bill Brandon's "verdant hills and placid valleys," and some other Southern orator's fancied land where "by night the cotton whitens beneath the stars and by day the wheat locks the sunshine in his bearded sheaf."

The prejudices of the Civil War have been removed from the minds of the people in many places throughout the South, and they marched forth on last Tuesday with a vision of their broadest duties as American citizens, ready to wield their ballot in the interest of the one common cause of the whole United States, free from the erstwhile sectional prejudices.

The victorious elephant in his mad stampede of the country on Nov. 2nd did not stop at the traditional political fence that hes heretofore bound the land of Dixie to Democracy. As a result of his wild rampage of the country his tracks are left indelibly stamped in many places over the land of cotton. In more than one instance he, as Harper, the cartoonist says, carried whole states away with him "and he didn't even need them."

Great, therefore, are the wails and groans of the routed legions of "solid Democracy" in the South. But their prayers ascend to a political god that is void, and unable to answer with cheer and comfort. Verily their "son of man" himself hath not a place in all the United States to rest his weary head without being terrified by the horrible tracks of the elephant.

We are sorry for the upset and vanishing forces of this "solid" political army. But in our sympathy we can find no trace of comfort for them. We have told them in the past that the day was coming when the solid South would be solid no more. But they laughed at us and believed us not.

Now that the day of trials and tribulations is at hand, we can but commit them again into the hands of their own confused leaders whom they have followed to despair. And these leaders appear to be in the most hopeless condition of all, out of which to cheer the clamoring hosts of a traditional Democracy that has lost its tradition, and of a solid South that has lost its solidity.

Mr. Frank Thomas spent Sunday with his mother in Clanton.

Wrecked Hopes of the "Solid South."

Wrecked hopes and thwarted ambitions mark the course of last Tuesday's election as far as the South is concerned. All that is left to the Democratic party is a Solid South no longer solid, with a huge breach in its center and its upper bastions crumbling to ruin. From the bloc of Southern States, true to the cause of Democracy for half a century, Tennesse departed. Of the border States, the outer rim of the Southern compact, Kentucky alone rested in the Democratic column and that by a pitifully narrow margin. All the rest of the nation, 37 states, casting an electoral vote of 404 out of 531, voted Republican.

Political analysis may probe for the causes, but the South can only shudder at the result. There was scarcely a thinking man in America who did not realize that 1920 was a Republican year; that the nominee of the San Francisco Convention was doomed to defeat ere his name was acclaimed in the convention hall. But no one expected so overwhelming a reversal of fortunes as has occurred. Not Will Hays himself looked for it, not the most ardent Republican dared hope for it.

The South alone was left to the Democratic party. The West, the Middle West, the East, the border states, all alike deserted a Democracy that had held the rains of power for eight years. For more than a half century the South has voted the Democratic ticket, its electoral vote being cast in one solid mass for the Democratic nominee, regardless of where he was born, what were his ideas, how pleasing or unpleasing his personality. In all that time not a single Southern man has been named by the Democratic party for President or Vice-President. The nearest approach to it was Woodrow Wilson, born in the South, but nominated while serving as Governor of an Eastern state far removed by geography, history and tradition from Mason and Dixon's line.

Year after year the voters of the South have trudged across their hills and valleys, have left their farms and plows, have quitted their offices and stores to vote for men who bore the Democratic label, though hailing from a region for removed from the Land of Cotton. A few feeble voices have been raised now and then in behalf of a Southern man for one of the high honors of the party, but only once in sixty years has such a cry been taken seriously. In 1912 a few more than 100 delegates cast their ballots for a Southern man whose whole life had been spent in the South and among the Southern people. And be it said to their credit, they stayed true to their colors to the last momet until the great-hearted Underwood, in order to end a hopeless deadlock and send a thousand weary delegates back to their homes with something accomplished, something done, ordered his name withdrawn.

With that sole exception, the cry of party expediency has been too strong for serious consideration of the name of a Southerner. It has been said that a Southerner could not draw the votes in the North, the East, the West, or the Middle West, and candidates who came from states ranging geographically all the way from Nebraska to Maine, and, mentally, all the way from William Jennings Bryan to Alton Brooks Parker, have borne the standard of Democracy. And all this time a man who hailed from that part of the country where "by night the cotton whitens beneath the stars and by day the wheat locks the sunshine in his bearded sheaf," was barred from any chance at the highest honors his party might confer.

That day is ended. The day has come when the South must rise and assert itself, must demand its rights, must insist upon the reward of six decades of faithful allegiance to a party that has always gone elsewhere for its commanders. The Solid South shows danger of crumbling. For the first time since the bloc came into being, it has been broken, for the first time all of the border states but one have deserted.

Expediency has ruled, and once more expediency has failed. Had a Southern man been nominated at San Francisco, it is not conceivable that he would have lost Tennessee. It is certain that he could have held Maryland and Oklahoma. In other words, he would have drawn to the Democratic fold all the electoral votes cast for Cox and could have added at a minimum thirty more, and probably Missouri and other states in addition. And with him he would have brought at least three United States Senators that were lost and doubtless a score or more of members of the House. So, in this case reasons of expediency even would have dictated the nomination of a Southern man as the issue developed.

The day is past when the South can longer be flouted. The Democracy must recognize the claims of the bloc on which its fortunes are builded, else the bloc is likely to dissolve. Ways might be found to handle the one great issue that has bound the South hand and foot to one party. It is not necessarily true that that one question will always shackle this section to Democracy's chariot.

Tenessee has broken away, and the whole South will watch the Volunteer State's flirtation with the G. O. P. Wards and counties and parishes in other Southern cities and states returned Republican majorities for the first time.

All this is fraught with meaning to the observer. If the South is to be held together as the foundation stone upon which the Democratic party expects to build its structure for the future, the South must name the standard bearer in 1924. This is plain talk, but it is the time and the place for plain talk. The Birmingham News serves warning now on the Democratic party that the South will not forever labor in the vineyard without hope of reward.

The time is not yet ripe to talk of candidates. Nineteen-twenty-four is a long way in the future, but when one talks of a Southern man for president, his mind naturally turns to the South's most distinguished son, Oscar W. Underwood, who stands like a giant among Southerners, the foremost son of the South, one of the few real statesmen of the nation.

Oscar W. Underwood not only could have kept the South solid this year, but he could have added the border states, and he could have drawn thousands of votes in the North because of the confidence in which he is held by the business interests of the nation.

As the leader of the Democratic forlorn hope in the Senate for the next four years Underwood is going to loom bigger and bigger, and the time will come when he must be considered for the Democratic nomination.

But the point The Birmingham News strives to make clear is not wrapped up in the personality of any one man. On principle the South is entitled to name the next standard bearer of the party, and if the party must resort to expediency and ponder over geographical conditions, then expediency and geography alike demand the selection of a Southern man in 1924. —The Birmingham News.

A CALL TO DUTY

Washington, Nov. 9.—"The Reublicans of the country will be guilty of self-delusion from which they will later suffer if they look upon the result of the recent election as a party victory," declares the Republican Publicity Association in a statement issued today through the president of that organization, Jonathan Bourne, Jr. "It is a party victory only in the sense that Republicans will be restored to control of both the legislative and the executive branches of the government, but an analysis of public sentiment as manifested in political discussion leads to the conviction that the course pursued by thhe voters in making their ballots was determined by their dissatisfaction with the Democratic party and its administration of the afafirs of the government, rather than by the implicit confidence in the Republican organization. More than ever before in its history the Republican party it now on trial before the country.

"The situation which confronts the United States is a critical one. By many it is believed to be one of the most critical in our history. However, that may be, none will gainsay the assertion that the problems which confront the nation are not only most difficult but most oppressing.

"For eight years we have had an administration of watchful waiting, of surrender to foreign rivals, of internationalism rather than Americanism, of personal government rather than govenment by law, of extravagance and inefficiency rather than economy and high stadards of public service.

"We are assured by the successful Republican nomines that they propose a return to the government of the Constitution, a representative government with each of the three co-ordinate branches exercising its own functions in co-operation with but not subjection to the others We are assured that there will be conference by the head of the administrative branch of the government not only with the members of congress but with citizens everywhere who are in a position to render valuable advice and assistance. The problems of the day are not, therefore for solution by the president and by congress alone, but but all citizens are invited to perform their duty as such by making such suggestions as they can to aid in that reconstruction process through which the government will encourage individual initiative, build up a permanent industrial prosperity on a solid basis, and assure the perpetuity of government of, by and for the people.

"From beginning to end of the campaign, Senator Harding manifested his full appreciation of the seriousness of the task he would assume if elected to the presidency. The rank and file of the Republican party should emulate his example and in the hour of victory should not permit their rejoicing over partisan success to blind them to the fact that the election is a call to duty and responsibility rather than a bestowal of the rewards of political victory.'

MONEY IN HOGS

We call attention of the farmers of Chilton County to the article in the paper signed by the committee on hog raising in which they point out the exceptionally favorable conditions that confront those who will prepare hogs for the market now and in the future. The price of hogs has not come down like the price of cattle, while the cost of materials that go into the fattening of hogs has fallen much lower than it has been in the past.

Right now farmers would find great relief from the cotton stringency if they each had two or more fat hogs which they could put on the market at the present prices.

We think it a good plan for farmers to begin this winter to plan to prepare as many hogs for the market as they can carry over next summer and fall so they may have them to sell next winter.

Now is the time to begin your plans for doing this. Then when the hogs are ready for the market they can be sold co-operatively right here in Clanton. If you are interested we urge you to see one or all of the committee which is composed of J. D. Collins, W. I. Mullins and J. N. Dennis, and arrange to carry the proposition out on a systematic and business basis.

EIGHT MILLION TO BE SPENT

It is said that the Alabama Power Company plans to spend eight million dollars in the construction of their power plant and new dam at Duncan's Riffles. The thought has occurred to us that the farmers of Chilton County might find it to their advantage to arrange to work with this company at their construction works and make more money than they can hope to make in the next two or three years out of cotton.

An enterprise of the magnitude of this one will necessarily demand the labor of thousands of workmen. Of course many of these laborers will be brought from distant regions. But there will be a chance for every working man in Chilton County to get a job there if he wants it. The men who live close by in Chilton County can be the first on the ground with their applications and can get the work if they want it.

It will be a job worth the while of any laboring man, and it seems to us that the opportunity is more attractive than is now offered in the growing of cotton.

There will be work enough here for the next two years to employ every farmer and laboring man in Chilton County, and many hundred more besides. We would be glad to see our people in Chilton County get their part of this eight million dollars.

WEST CHILTON

November has been regarded as the saddest of the year, but the present beautiful autumn days do not quite sustain that thought.

W. R. Redden went over in Bibb Saturday to attend the burial of Mr. Frank Walker at Antioch.

Rev. Bailey of Minooka has been called to the pastorate of Union Springs Church.

Mr. Charley Cost of Pleasant Grove fell dead October 30th.

Rev. W. P. Lowery has been called to the pastorate of Macedonia.

Misses Delene and Verna Wright are teaching at Freeman.

The voters, both male and female here turned out liberally on the 2nd inst.

Rev. Waldrup and Mr. Sorrell attended the burial of J. C. Edwards son, who died in France, at Isabella Cemetery October 30th.

Mr. Barber of the I. B. S. A. came down from Birmingham and conducted the funeral.

The election officials at Macedonia on the 2nd were honored with a rich treat in a bountiful and nice dinner and supper given by Mr. J. Proctor Nix and his noble wife. It was all that could be desired and was duly appreciated by the officials. We doubt if the occasion was equaled any where in Alabama on that day. Mr. and Mrs. Nix are fine people and this noble act proved it abundantly. The election officials hereby tender them their hearty thanks and best wishes.

Already the Wilson Cabinet members are seeking other jobs to take up after March 4th . That is one of the things that the voters will be pleased to come as a result of Hardin's election. We suspect that many a man and woman cast their votes against Cox because they knew his defeat would mean the rout of Mr. Wilson's worthless cabinet.

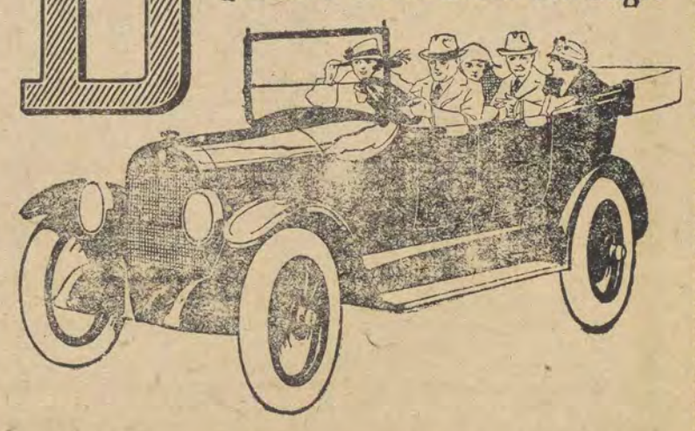
CONFESSION OF THE NEWS.

We are especially anxious for our readers to notice carefully the editorial copied from The Birmingham News and appearing on this page of The Union-Banner. There is a whole lot of truth in what is said in this article, and we take it as nothing but a confession on the part of The News to the very condition that we have been trying to get the people to see for a long time regarding the political slavery of the South. The South has got nothing for its loyalty to the Democratic party, and the confession of the fact by such a newspaper as the News means that somebody has waked up.

Since last spring more than 500,000 workers in the United States have been thrown out of employment by the closing of factories and curtailed industrial operations.

About the "whitest" Democrats in the country have been placed on the "blacklist" of that party; and likewise, about the "blackest" of the whole gang are enrolled on the so-called "white list." It looks this way from the names on the different lists as announced by the National Democratic Committee last Sunday.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured



by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists. 75c.

JACK'S MOTHER

A mother stands in the anxious crowd,
Dressed in black, her gray head bowed,
She sees the proud mothers embracing their sons,
Those grave, grim soldiers who conquered the huns.

She dries back her tears and tries to smile,
As the soldier boys pass her, mile after mile;
She looks at the colors,—the Red, White and Blue.
There's pride in her heart, for her boy fought too.

Not a flag at half-mast on this gala day,—
They all float unfurled along the way.
She's proud of the boys who came marching back;
But her poor heart bleeds, for — Where is Jack?

Almost hidden by poppies there's a little mound,
Away across the sea, in Belgium's ground,
That holds all she loved, her pride, her joy,—
The earthly remains of her gallant boy.

All glory to those who fought and died,
Who offered their all for their country's pride.
God's solace for mothers all dressed in black,
Who waits in vain for their lost boy, Jack.

PASTORS AND WORKERS CONFERENCE

A meeting of the pastors, deacons and workers of the Unity Association of the Baptist Churches is called to meet at Clanton on Monday, November 15th, for the organization of a Pastors and Workers Conference to meet monthly for the purpose of discussing the work and problems of our churches and for mutual fellowship and encouragement. It is probable that the monthly meetings will be held at different places in the Association, but the first meeting is called to meet at Clanton, as the most accessible. Please notice that all the brethren and sisters of the churches as well as the pastors and deacons are cordially invited to participate in the conference. The meeting will commence about 9:30 or 10 a.m.

Rev. W. A. Goss, Chairman.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

Two nice congregations were present last Sunday both morning and evening. There will be no morning service next Sunday as the pastor was excused to take part in a Sunday School Convention at Pleasant Grove. There will be preaching at night at 7:15, p.m. The subject will be "The Confessional of Romanism." Everybody is cordially invited to attend the services of the church. Baptists living in the community are cordially invited to attend the services of the church.

The attendance last Sunday was 101. With our present equipment we can take care of about thirty more. Sunday School is one of the greatest moral agencies for the coming generations. Most people never forget the early influences of the Sunday School. If you desire your children to become good christians and noble citizens you cannot do better than send them to Sunday School.

The Baptist State Convention meets at Decatur on the 16th, and it is hoped a goodly delegation will be present from the church. It will be a very significant convention as many very important matters are to be considered and determined such as, the building of a hospital, the moving of Howard College, the moving of the Orphans Home to Troy, and the location of a summer encampment. The leaders of our State convention need the prayers of all God's people. The pastor desires to be of service to the people of the community regardless of creed or profession whenever needed. Let him know your needs.

P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

Dr. and Mrs. Hayes and Miss Hattie Jones motored over to Montevallo to see Mr. Heath Jones Tuesday.

Mr. M. Y. Luckie of Birmingham is visiting his brother, Mr. R. E. Luckie.

"I'VE SUFFERED AGONIES BUT DRECO RELIEVED ME".

ONE PERSON AFTER THE OTHER KEPT TELLING OF THE GOOD DRECO WAS DOING.

Relieved Constipation, Stopped Gas Forming, Eased Kidney Trouble Strengthened Vital Organs.

"It seemed like the good news of what Dreco was doing spread fast, for I kept hearing people talk about what it was doing until I decided to get a bottle also," said Mrs. Sallie C. Bragg, of Newmarket, near Huntsville, Ala.

"I've sufefred agonies from gastritis. My food scured in my stomach filled me with gas, and caused griping pains and a choking feeling in my throat. My bowels were constipated sso that I had to take medicine almost every night. I had been under treatment for kidney trouble for months—seems like I had taken everything but the right thing. I was losing hope of ever being well again.

"When I started taking Dreco I was truly in a bad condition. I could eat but very little solid food. Dreco acted in a soothing manner on my stomach, and stopped the gas almost at once. My food began to nourish me and my nerves got steady. My bowels acted in a normal way each day; the headaches sstopped and my sleep became restful, and I'd rise in the morning feeling refreshed. Dreco has proven a wonderful tonic to my vital organs and made a new woman out of me."

Dreco is made from the pure liquid extracts of many herbal plants, which act on the stomach, kidneys, liver, bowels, and enrich the blood.

All druggists now sell Dreco, and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Co.

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her.

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since . . . I sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too.

REPUBLICANS OF THE SEVENTH TO DECIDE ON COURSE.

GADSDEN, Nov. 6—Republican leaders of the Seventh Alabama District will meet here on Nov 17 to finally decide whether to contest the election of Congressman L. B. Rainey according to announcement here today. Oliver D. Street, former United States District Attorney at Birmingham, is in charge of the interests of C. B. Kenemar, the defeated Republican candidate, and he will really make the decision, it is said.

Gordon Ashley, Kennemar's campaign manager, frankly stated that he would rather air the alleged irregularities in registration in the federal court, than to contest the election, although in a conference of leaders here Friday night he stated that he had about reached the point where he would advocate cuting down the state representation in congress if it takes that to get a square deal at the hands of the Democrats of the Seventh District. Mr. Ashley also stated that he spent less than $3,000 in the campaign. The committee, he said, did raise $25,000 among the manufacturers of the state, but it was sent north and was used in the national campaign.

Democratic leaders say that the contest will be for the purpose of forcing Alabama to allow negro women to register and vote, and that when the case gets to Congress it would open the flood gates of sectionalism and race prejudice. They deplore what they call the lack of sportsmanship of the Republicans in refusing to accept the defeat gracefully, but are willing to let them go the limit in stirring up the race question along the lines indicated.

A DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM

Thorsby Institute and the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute have each undertaken the formation of a local development program to cover a period of five years. The proposed program will mean much to Thorsby and vicinity and we take pleasure in giving you below just a phase of the program tending the erection of the following buildings:

Two dormitories for girls, each to accommodate at least fifty; a large kitchen and dining room, fitted up to give students the best of service; one large dormitory for boys; a large new school building, fitted to better take care of the increasing enrollment of students; a large community house or hall ample and fully equipped to serve the people as a community center; one house for the president of Thorsby Institute.

Concerning the program as announced, the president's house is nearing completion. It is a six room bungalow and of very attractive appearance.

We can also announce that the ground has already been broken for the erection of one of the dormitories.

The citizens of Thorsby should feel proud of the Thorsby Institute and the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute, for the proposed building program that they have already begun to put into effect, and their efforts in this direction should receive the hearty co-operation of the whole community.

THANKS FOR HELP.

Mr. W.H. Goodgame wishes through these columns to express his gratitude and appreciation to the people of Thorsby who so willingly labored and worked in saving his lumber, warehouse and cotton in the mill and gin fire. He realizes the valuable help rendered him, and is deeply grateful.

He reports that he had a very pleasant trip, and the Georgia people expressed keen interest in the progress of Thorsby in development.

* * *

Last Saturday night the Christian Endeavor of the Thorsby Congregational Church gave a social at the girls dormitory. A large number of young people were present; games were played and delicious refreshments were served.

* * *

On last Wednesday night a large number of friends met at the home of Mr. J. L. Foss and gave him a big surprise, honoring him on his birthday. Mr. Foss is a leader in the Lutheran Church, has been superintendent of the Sunday School for years. There were about 75 guests present to enjoy the party. A number of intereting talks were made, music was rendered by some of the girls and delicious refreshments were served.

Those who were present at Sunday School at the Baptist Church last Sunday could no doubt notice what a large attendance they had. It is said that the attendance numbered about 92, which is the largest number they have ever had. The Baptists of this town have been up and doing and they are surely getting results.

THORSBY FIRE

The most disastrous fire since the burning of the town several years ago, occurred last Saturday at noon, when the planing mill and gin owned by W. H. Goodgame, were totally destroyed. The origin of the fire was said to be in the boiler room, and when first noticed had gained such headway that it was impossible to stop its progress into the mill room and gin, the latter being at the time in operation. Those present at the time stated that it spread so fast that an atempt to save eiher mill or gin was useless, and they centered all efforts to keeping the fire from getting to the lumber pile and cotton warehoue near by.

It was most fortunate that it happened at that time of day, because as soon as the alarm was given scores of people arrived from town and by their hard work and assistance the fire was kept from spreading. It was also fortunate that the wind was blowing in a northerly direction, as otherwise no work could have saved the warehouse and lumber piles on the south side of the mill.

Mr. Goodgame stated to the Union-Banner reporter that his losses would amount to between $13,000 and $15,000, which is partly covered by insurance. He also stated that just as soon as he can make arrangements, he will rebuild the planing mill and also the gin.

We are certainly proud to know that Mr. Goodgame is coming right back, and we know his friends will stand by him.

MELODY MAKERS COME FROM FAMOUS ISLE OF KAHULAUI

Kahulain Quartet, Talented Hawaiian Musicians, to Sing Here.

If there is one particular spot in fair Hawaii where there is a preponderance of music, mirthland melody, that spot is the sunny island of Kahulaui Here, almost in the shadow of the famous Mt. Haleakai, is the fountain head of the alluring, fascinating music of the Hawaiian people.

From Kahulaui come these four clever native musicians who make up the Kahulaui Male Quartette. They have won considerable fame for themselves in their native land and they are clever musicians,—masters of the steel guitar, ukelele and other native instruments. The Kahulaui Boys have beautiful voices. They charm with the sweet melodies of the island and they sing them as only unspoiled native Hawaiian musicians can sing them. The members are G. Keolha, A. Nawaho, Victor Loa and Joseph Koalikini.

The Kahulaui Hawaiians will appear here on the evening of Nov. 17th, at Bates Hall, under the auspices of the Thursby Lyceum and Entertainment Bureau.

THE UNION-BANNER

VOL. IX. CLANTON, ALA., NOVEMBER 18, 1920 NUMBER 34.

REYNOLDS THANKS VOTERS

Editor Union-Banner:

I intended to write last week and thank the people for their votes, but as I was in County Court and Commissioners Court practically all the week I was unable to write before your paper went to press. So I want to take this means of thanking all who voted for me and especially thank the ladies who voted the Republican ticket.

We had a great county and national election. The people's cause has triumphed and we once more have a government of the people. I want the ladies to have an equal show with the men in the councils of the Republican party, for they are just as much responsible for the citizenship as the men and their responsibility is just as great as the men's; they are entitled to hold office if they are qualified, and I think they would make as good officers as a large part of the official work in this county is now done by ladies, and I am sure they are just as efficient as men.

I want to call the attention of the ladies who are under 45 years of age that they will have to pay a poll tax or they cannot vote. It is a good idea for you to never miss one year, for it is harder to pay two year's taxes than one. There are some men in this county who missed paying poll tax for a year or two and thought they would pay it in the future, but the accumulation was so much that did not pay it and thereby they have lost their citizenship. I sincerely hope the ladies will never get in this condition. I hope all the white ladies in this county will remember that they will have to pay their poll tax by February 1, 1921 or they cannot vote next year. No woman is due any back poll tax, but every woman who was under 45 years of age on October 1, 1920, will be due a poll tax, which must be paid between that date and February 1, 1921.

All Republicans should feel proud of the vote we received in the State; I think it will total nearly 75,000. Four years ago we received about 22,000. We have a Republican party started in the State and I hope we will continue improving and increasing it Now is the time to start for a campaign for the election to be held two years from now. We must have two political parties in Alabama if we have a good government; for we can never expect our taxes to be lowered until we have some opposition in politics. What kind of business men would we have if there was no opposition or competition?

I hope to see the Republican party organized in this State on a basis of votes and not Federal office holders. I want to see the organization in the counties recognized and I think all recommendations for State appointments should come through the State organization, for this is the only way we can get a Republican party organized in Alabama. I hope that those that are appointed will be persons who will try to build up the party. Of course I think that the Republicans should be apopinted to the offices, but I do not think that appointments are all that there is to be considered, but we must try to have people appointed who are qualified and who will do the work and help the party.

I want to thank those who helped me financially in the State campaign. I received the following contributions: M. D. Foshee, $25; Grady Reynolds, $100; W. M. Wyatt, $15; J.D. Collins, $10. I received the above from citizens of this county, and received $180.00 from citizens throughout the State, making a total of $330. I spent $616.16, and gave six weeks of my time speaking and going almost day and night. I did the best I could to help up a Republican party in the State, and I find the people ready for two parties and all that we need is for some worker to go out and work from now until the campaign to be held two years from now.

I want to say just a few words to the people about our local condition. We have a few who are anxious to keep up a factional fight from now until the election to be held two years from now. They seem to think that there is no other way they can be noticed; but the people had better keep their eyes on the knockers, for I have never seen any one kick into a party, but many have kicked out. "A Texas pony never can kick into the harness, but can easily kick out of the harness."

We have seen the result of kickers in this county and we know what it leads to. If party officials do not do what you think they should, it is much better for the party to go to them and tell them than to try to stir up confusion in the whole party. We have had several kickers in this county for the last twenty-five years and not a single one has ever had hopes to help the party. All have finally proven themselves enemies and have wanted to destroy the party.

I want to say for my part that I will do in the future as I have in the past, and that is, do what is right as near as I can and treat all the people right; and if ever anyone sees where I could do better I shall at any time be glad to listen to their advice.

Let's all try to do our duty as we understand it and work for the Republican party's future, and when any one in this county wants a federal appointment let them ask for the endorsement of the county committee. We have a good committee and one that will represent all the people. I hope the ladies will feel that they are as much entitled to appointment as men are.

I hope everyone will keep an eye on the person who tries to keep up confusion in the party, for now is the time to put an end to party strife for now there is no campaign on.

Again thanking the voters, and assuring them that I am always ready to do anything I can for the interest of the Republican party, I am,

Yours very truly,
L. H. REYNOLDS.

SAM PATE THANKS VOTERS

Thorsby, Ala., Nov. 15, 1920.

Editor Union-Banner:—

Will you allow me a short space in your paper to extend my thanks to the voters of Chilton County. Mr. Wyatt briefly expressed our thanks through the paper last week, but I feel that I ought to personally state to the voters that I appreciate the confidence you have in my as shown by your votes which elected me as your Tax Assessor on Nov. 2.

I especially want to thank the ladies who participated in the election. I feel like they did their part in helping us elect our ticket. I am going to try to show my appreciation of the office by doing right by every citizen of the county.

Thanking everyone who voted for me, and hoping no one will ever have cause to regret doing so, and with best wishes for four years of peace progress and prosperity, I am

Yours truly,

POLITICAL COMMENT

PAYS AS HE GOES

The refusal of president-elect Harding to accept a battleship to carry him in regal state to Panama comes as a refreshing comparison with the actions of Bos'n Jo Daniels and Roosevelt the Lesser. The former, it will be remembered ordered a superdreadnaught, fully manned and equipped to take him to the Democratic convention at San Francisco at a cost of thousands of dollars to the American taxpayers. The latter found it quite impossible to reach his summer palace, after his nomination, without a large American war vessel to boss around and take him there. Daniels and young Roosevelt have carried on for some time as if they thought the American Navy was their own particular yacht club, without regard to the cost to the people. But the time is swiftly approaching when those two worthies will have to pay for their sea voyages out of their own pockets, hence, quite likely, they will stick around home, unless Henry Ford puts a peace ship at their disposal.

A SANE COUNSELLOR

Reports from center of political activity during the campaign give a great deal of credit to the political sagacity and tireless activity of former Senator John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts, who was in charge of the New York headquarters. It will be remembered that in 1916 Weeks surprised the country by making a very close race for the Republican nomination for the presidency. Although not having a very wide personal following at that time, he made a preconvention campaign that won him the confidence of a very wide circle of friends among the more substantial people of the country. He is of the deliberative type, not seeking the lime-light, and his judgment is held in high regard by men in business and in public life. Hs plan for a joint Congressional Commission on Reconstruction, had it not been defeated by President Wilson, would undoubtedly have saved the country billions of dollars.

TO EACH HIS SHARE

The message which Senator Harding sent to his running mate is indicative of a new policy in national administration. Said Senator Harding: "My heartiest congratulations overthe great Republican victory to which your strength added so materially. You are to expect to play a full part in the coming Republican administration." All through the campaign Mr. Harding indicated his intention not to try to make his a one-man administration, and following the election he has reiterated this idea. It is expected that Coolidge will be invited to participate in cabinet meetings and will be called into conference on other important occasions. In this manner Mr. Harding will be able to lighten his own burdens, and, moreover, the vice-president will be kept in constant touch with public affairs so that he will be ready at any time to undertake any work that may be assigned him.

A "GOOD MIXER"

Tasker Lowndes Oddie, the newly elected Senator from Nevada, is a mining man, in private life. He studied law and was graduated from the law department of the University of the State of New York, but he entered active business pursuits instead of following that profession. Nevertheless, he practiced law to some extent and served as district attorney of his country in 1900. He was one of the early operators in the Tonapah mining district in Nevada, and, during the war, rendered especially valuable service to the government as a member of boards dealing with problems in connection with metal production and conservation. He served in the Nevada state senate from 1904 to 1908, and made such a creditable record that he was elected governor for the term 1910-14. He is known as a "good mixer."

MR. RATLIFF RECOVERED

Mr. Wesley Ratliff has been dismissed from the Clanton Infirmary after recovering from an operation for appendicitis performed by Drs. Gragg and Marcus. The patient has returned to his home near Pletcher. He is the father of the little Ratliff girl who was operated on at the Clanton Infirmary for appendicitis last summer.

ALA. BAPTIST CONVENTION IN SESSION

Ninety-Ninth Annual Conference — Will Spend Vast Sum for Big Hospital—Birmingham Man Presiding.

Decatur, November 17.—The second session of the ninety-ninth state convention of Alabama Baptists now in session here at the First Baptist Church, was held Tuesday night. It was exclusively devoted to the hospital report of Dr. J. R. Hobbs, chairman of the hospital commission.

The report recommended that ten committeemen, one from each congressional district, be appointed with authority to name seven men and women to determine the location of one or more hospitals. It also was recommended that one large hospital be built at once, and later several smaller branch hospitals. The initial expenditure is to be $750,000.

At two o'clock this afternoon W.H. Smith of Birmingham was re-elected president of the convention. The vice-presidents are A. D. Smith and A. F. Smith. Rev. W. M. Wood of Birmingham was re-elected secretary for the sixteenth year. Secretary-Treasurer B. F. Green read his lengthy report, a synopsis of which already had been publicly announced at the afternoon sesion. The report was referred to a committee.

Thousand Attend.

The convention sermon by Rev. W. M. Murray this morning marked the opening session of the convention. Nearly 1,000 delegates are in attendance, representing more than 2,000 churches and a membership of over 225,000. The executive council last night received reports for presentation to the convention which show that Alabama Baptists raised $4,150,000 toward the Baptist 75 Million campaign, an amount in excess of the state's apportionment by $150,000.

Questions of great interest to Baptists of the state to be dicussed at the meeting will be the enlargement of Howard College, enlargement and removal of the orphans home and the establishment of a hospital in the state. Judson college, it is stated, will receive consideration also.

Wednesday's programme will be devoted largely to missions and education. At the morning session missions in Alabama will receive first attention. Secretary Green will lead the discussions for the first 20 minutes. Missions in southern states will be reported and discussed by Dr. J. R. Hobbs, a representative of the home mission board. Dr. J. W. Phillips, a representative of the foreign misison board will make a report upon that branch of Baptist work .

Notable Speakers.

The afternoon session will include an address upon Christian Education by Dr. W. C. James, of the Southern Baptist educational board. Ministerial education will be discussed by Dr. J. C. Stivender. These two addresses, it is understood, are being expected with much interest and an overflow attendance is assured.

The evening session has been announced as "College Night." The entire question will be covered. Among those who will speak are Dr. Charles B. Williams, president of the Howard College, Dr. Paul V. Bomar, president of Judson College, and Dr. J. A. Lowery, president of the Baptist Collegiate Institute.

The churchfolk of Decatur are extending every possible hospitality to the visiting Baptists. The local Baptist congregations are receiving such assistance as is required from their neighbors and friends of other denominations. The social plans, arranged by the people of Decatur, are extensive and indicate a decided cordiality.

PIONEER, BORN AND RAISED

Peter Norbeck, who will succeed Edwin S. Johnson as Senator from South Dakota, on March 4, is a pioneer. He was born a pioneer. According to the records, he was born at Vermillion, South Dakota, in 1870, when sod shanties were thte most common habitation, and buffaloes still roamed the plains. He was one of the builders of the industries of the state, contributing his part largely by drilling wells to supply water for a region where water was difficult to secure. He was educated at the University of South Dakota, served three terms in the State Senate and four years as Governor. He is one of the new Republican members of the Senate who may be classed as a "business man."

HEATH JONES

G. Heath Jones, former well known and popular citizen of Clanton, died at Montevallo last Friday after a brief illness with pneumonia. The remains were brought here Saturday and buried in the Clanton Cemetery Sunday.

For the past three years Mr. Jones had lived in Montevallo, where he held a position with the Latham Mercantile Co. During his residence of many years in Clanton Heath was connected with some of the most prominent mercantile houses of the past, among them being W. Kanter & Bro., and E. M. Pinckard & Co. While in the employee of these firms he had dealings with great numbers of people both of Clanton and various parts of the country. His number of friends always grew as his acquaintance widened, for he was a man whom to know was to love and admire. He as kind, courteous and honest and his conduct toward his fellow man was always governed by his strict adherence to the golden rule, which he lived day by day.

True to his friends, thinking and practicing nothing of harm to anyone made for this man a place in many a heart that will feel the void that is created by his departure from the walks of life.

The deceased was the son of Mr. Andy Jones of Mulberry Community, where the family was reared, all of whom survive to mourn the loss of the first member of the family circle to cross the river of death. Besides the father and mother the other members of the family are: Hugh and Spann Jones, Mrs. J. P. Hayes, Misses Hattie, U. L. and Irene Jones.

Funeral services were held at the Clanton Baptist Church Sunday afternoon, conducted by Rev. Ogletree of Montevallo, an dwas attended by a large number of sorrowing friends and relatives.

The announcement has been made that Rev. J. D. Hughes of Coopers will preach at the Friendship Baptist Church just north of town on next Sunday night, beginning at 7:30, p.m. Rev. Hughes is well known around Clanton as a splendid preacher and a very good man with it. Everybody who can is urged to come out and hear him preach.

The challenge of Thorsby still stands against Clanton for the organization of a commercial club. What are we going to do about it? Shall we get busy and show our neighbors that we have some life in us or shall we sit down on the job and thereby tell them that we have lost our pep?

When we go to the post office on one of these rainy days that nice bit of muddy sidewalk between Upchurch corner and Downs Hardware Store makes us wonder what has become of a certain paving ordinance which was promulgated by the Town Council once upon a time. And we suspect foot passengers to and from the Exchange Hotel are prompted to musings on the same subject after they have made the stretch that lies between Chandler's Store and the hotel front.

The merchants are pleading and begging their customers to buy their goods, offering all kinds of reductions in prices. As one Clanton firm has put it, "The bottom is out of prices already." But buying seems to be going rather slow, we suppose owing to the inactivity of the cotton market just now. We don't know what is going to be the result of the present spell of tight times. But one thing is sure, somebody is going to have to sacrifice before things get back to normal, and we look for the farmers and local merchants all to come out with a certain proportion of the loss registered against them.

We learn that the committee on drainage of the swamps around Clanton have something to report on the proposition tending toward the initiation of the work. By next week we hope to get in toucn with them and give our readers a detailed report of the progress of the plans. We hope that all the people who own swamp lands around this town will be ready to get up behind the scheme and let's push it through. Other places in the state are reclaiming their useless lowlands from the snakes, frogs and mosquitoes. Clanton must do likewise. We have more wealth tied up in untillable swamps than we have on the surrounding hills. We must get it in shape to put our hands on.

THE SALEM CEMETERY

Now that it is assured that the new dam at Duncan's Riffle is to be built by the Alabama Power Company, the question of what will become of the cemetery at Salem, is an interesting one. It is said that when the waters are backed up by the new dam the pond will cover the ground to a depth of several feet at the cemetery.

Can a cemetery be moved? It might be removed under some circumstances, but we doubt if those circumstances exist at this burial place. There are many bodies that were buried in this cemetery many years ago, the dust of which could not be separated from the native clay. These bodies were not buried in vaults nor enclosed in metal caskets. They were laid away in the cheap wooden coffins made by the community blacksmith and long since coffins, bodies and all have been reduced to the clay from whence they came.

Doubtless not a few of those people who have relatives buried in this sacred lot will be averse to having it submerged; and the river is going to be damned up so that water will cover the earth at Salem. All of which makes us interessted in seeing what is to be done about the matter. There will be some way around the question, for the power company is not to be puzzled by any proposition that stands in front of such a gigantic program is this one.

TELL THE EDITOR.

Every newspaper editor is desirous of printing all the legitimate news of his subscription field. That is the object of his paper

But unfortunately an editor is partly human—he is at least moulded in human form. He does not possess a dozen pair of hands, or legs, or eyes, or ears, for the collection of this vast fund of information.

That is why the editor urges you to tell him what you know—to keep him informed of the doings of yourself and family, of your friends, or of the community in general.

It is the only way to make a good paper—and a good paper is one of the prime requisites to a good community in which to live and do business.

Tell it to the editor.

He'll tell others—if it is tellable. —Exchange.

We intend to publish the figures of the Republican vote in Alabama if they are ever announced at Montgomery. The official count there is due to have been made this week, but has been delayed owing to the fact that one county has not sent in their returns. We are anxious to give our readers the vote that was polled by the Republican ticket in the state and will do so as soon as we can.

NO PROTEST FILED AGAINST THE DAM WORK.

Up to the closing hour Tuesday evening the Alabama Public Service Commission had not received notice from any source that there would be any objection made to the request of the Alabama Power Company for permission to construct a huge dam and electric power plant on the Coosa River at Duncan's Riffle below Lock 12. The request filed by the Power Company a week ago will be heard by the Public Service Commission Wednesday.

The proposed development will be known as Mitchell Dam in honor of the founder of the Company, and will involve the outfitting of a huge electric generating plant estimated to cost between 10 and 15 million dollars, and ultimately will be a larger plant than Lock 12.

HEFLIN SAYS COTTON PRICE WILL ADVANCE

Senator - Elect Declares that Staple Will reach 30-Cent Mark By January 1st.

Thirty cent cotton by January 10 is the prediction of our Senator-elect Thomas Heflin, who spent a few hours in Montgomery Tuesday.

Senator Heflin was en route to Tuscaloosa, where he will speak for the American Cotton Association. He is optimistic over the outlook for the cotton man, and believes that the market is upward bound at an early date.

The Senator's prophesies on the course of cotton have in the past been uniformly accurate, and his present views on the project are cheering news to the man who is stocked up with the staple.

MRS. PARRISH DEAD

Mrs. Birdie Parrish, widow of the late G. W. Parrish, died at her home in Clanton at six o'clock Wednesday evening. She had been sick with pneumonia since last Sunday.

The deceased is survived by the following children: Clarence Parrish of Birmingham, Evan, Leonard and Howard Parrish of Clanton, Mrs. Grady Borland of Albany, Ga., Sallie and Inez Parrish of Clanton. All the children were with their mother when she died.

At the time we go to press funeral arrangements have not yet been announced. She will most probably be buried with her husband at Concord Cemetery.

FLORIDA GAVE 44,800 VOTES TO THE G. O. P.

Jacksonville, Nov. 16—The Official count of the vote in the general election in Florida as announced here tonight is as fololws:

President, Democrats, 90,516; Republicans, 44,803.

Henry W. Pond of Rockford was in Clanton last Friday on a business visit. His visit to the Union-Banner office was much enjoyed by the editor. Henry broke the news to us that he was married last week to Mrs. Crawford, widow of the late Judge Crawford.

WHY YOU SHOULD HELP STOP THE CIGARETTE CURSE.

Teachers are more in demand now than ever before, but the country is spending far more for the abominable cigarette than is being paid the untiring instructors of the young. The Son of God said: "Go ye into the world and preach My Gospel to every creature," but more money went up in tobacco smoke in 1918 than the Christians of America had invested during a hundred years to evangelize the balance of the lost and sinful world.

Awful as this was, cigarette smoking increased 47 per cent.

Now when nearly all young men are confirmed cigarette smokers, when older men are taking to the habit by leaps a ' bounds, and the medical director of the U. S. government saying that one of the worst tendencies of today is cigarette smoking among women, when little boys are taking to the habit like ducks to a pond, and their teachers saying that when they smoke cigarettes they destroy brain cells and thereby make it impossible to accomplish what they ought to in life, when officers of the law say practically all criminals are cigarette smokers, while successful soul winners tell us that often the whiskey drinker and gambler are easier led to a saving knowledge of Him who did salvation bring, than is a lost man who smokes cigarettes, on account of the insidiousness of the enslaving habit. Won't you for God's sake and for the love of humanity, write your representatives in the National Congress and the Senate, asking for a law prohibiting the manufacture and sale of cigarettes?—International Anti--Cigarette League.

COUNTY HAS NOT REPORTED VOTE; COUNT IS HELD UP

Because returns from the recent general election in Alabama have not yet been filed with the secretary of the state from one county in the state, the canvassing board, which was to meet at eleven o'clock Tuesday morning to make an official check of the returns, was unable to hold the meeting. It is not known when they will hold the session, everything being held up until the returns from this city is filed.

The board is composed of the governor, secretary of state and attorney general. They will make an official count of the votes in the state, and issue certificates of election to the successful candidates. One of the results of this count will be the definite decision regarding the Seaport amendment.

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

PROMINENT ALABAMA MAN PUBLICLY ENDORSES DRECO

HAD ACUTE INDIGESTION, LIVED ON EGGS, MILK AND TOAST. COULD EAT NO MEAT AT ALL. DIZZY SPELLS ATTACKED HIM.

Now Declares that Dreco, the Herbal Remedy, has Given Complete Relief.

"I have suffered from a severe case of acute indigestion and gastritis a long time; was living on milk, eggs and toast, when I started taking Dreco, and I am better now than I have been in a long time," says Mr. F. M. Dunbar of 213 Washington Ave., Montgomery, Ala., in a signed statement for publication. Mr. Dunbar is in the charge of telephone maintenance for the A. & W. P. R. R., and one of the most substantial citizens of the city. He makes this open statement, believing that it will benefit others who are sufferng as he did.

"I was afraid to eat meat and many other things I craved, for I knew I would suffer agony afterwards. I often waked up during the night with shortness of breath and pains in the region of my heart. I had dizzy spels at times I was afraid I would drop in the street from them.

"I was so badly constipated that pills and such medicine had no effect on me and I had to take enemas for relief.

"I have now taken two bottles of Dreco and the change in my condition is little less than marvelous. I can eat almost anything I want, and never have any bad after-effects. I have not had a dizzy spell recently, and best of all my bowels act regularly every day, without a pain and no straining. I feel better than I have in a long time, and I give all the credit to Dreco, which I strongly recommend to every one who suffers as I did."

All druggists now sell Dreco, and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Co.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

The regular services of this church will be held next Sunday morning and evening, the night service commencing at 7:15 p.m. Owing to the inclemency of the weather on last Sunday night the sermon on the Confessional of Romanism was postponed until next Sunday night, when it is hoped more will be present to hear it.

The Sunday School meets at 10 a.m. and the Sunbeams at 2 p.m. The Junior band will meet at 3 p.m. Mrs. Broadhead is leader of the Sunbeam Band and Mrs. D. C. Alred of the Junior Band. At the close of the morning service the regular church conference will be held.

On Thursday, November 25th the church will co-operate with the Methodist brethren in a Thanksgiving Day service, commencing at 10 a.m. The pastor of the Baptist Church will preach the sermon, and the members of the Methodist Choir will furnish the music. The time of the service has been arranged so as not to conflct with other events of the day, so it is hoped that a large number of the churches will make an effort to attend this great annual occasion to render their thanks unto God for all His goodness to us during the past year.

The pastor will give his illustrated lecture on the Wonderland of New Zealand on Tuesday the 22nd at the court house in the interests of the new building fund. This will be given under the auspces of the lades aid of the church. There will be over 100 views of the country and of the natives thrown upon the sheet which will make the lecture of interest to all. The lecturer has resided in this charming and beautiful country for eight years, so will know whereof he speaks. The entire proceeds will be given to the building enterprise. The ladies are asked to co-operate n the selling of the tickets and in helping us to make it a financial success. It will also be given during the week at other places in the county.

The pastor will be absent from the city the greater part of this week attending the State Convention at Decatur. P. G. CARTER, Pastor.

Things Worth Thinking About.

Have you ever thought how nice our town would appear if we kept our walks and streets clean, our parks in good shape, to strangers who pass through during the day? Then also if we had electric lights that our streets and buildings could be lighted at night, it would add another drawing card to the outsiders as an up-to-date clean and healthy town to live in. Now is the time to do things, through our chamber of commerce, which welcomes the co-operation of every citizen of the town.

The Lutheran Ladies Aid met last Thursday, at the home of Mrs. A. E. Reagan, an unusually large crowd attended and an enjoyable afternoon was spent.

The oyster supper which was given by the Baptist Sunday School Saturday night resulted in a grand little sum of money, which is to be given to the church .

IT CAN'T BE DONE

How often is this not the answer, given by citizens of the town, when approached on subjects relating to some movements for the building up of the town. There is no doubt that this statement holds true with regard to the individuals who make statements like this, for surely no proposition ever so small can be successful among an individual or individuals who hold this view of things, and because of this would turn neither mind nor hand in the direction of progress. If we say things can't be done, they surely will not be done, but on the other hand, if our motto be "They shall be done," or "We will know the reason why they can't be done," we shall find in most cases that our objection will have become accomplished facts, and our doubts will have vanished. Which shall your motto be?

Mr. G. C. Walker of Clanton made a visit to our city last Friday p.m.

CONGREGATIONAL CONFERENCE OF ALABAMA.

The readers of the Union-Banner were told last week something of the speakers at the annual meeting of the General Congregtaional Conference of Congregational Churches in session at Thorsby, and were promised some additional facts about the same in a later issue.

The speakers mentioned last week were all present except Dr. Bloom, and the correspondent has been misinformed when told that he was present. His place was filled by Rev. Chas. L. Fisk, the religious education expert assigned to the southeastern field. The conference program, as before stated, was made into main divisions—a world program of Missions, and Education. As Drs. Moore and Keller lifted up the world Christian Program before their hearers, they did it so powerfully as to lift their audience up with them. As they took us from point to point on the great battle line of the Kingdom forces, every one seemed to feel anew the compelling power to forget "the things that are behind and reach forth the things of the future, pressing forward to the mark of the prize of the high calling of God as it is in Christ Jesus." Perhaps few of us will be able to attain the standards set for us in these convincing appeals and picturizations, but we cannot fail to seek newer heights in Christian service since having heard them. As Dr. Fisk, with his strong array of forceful facts, presented so effectively by word and chart directed our attention to the ever present challenge of the youth of our land, showing us clearly the critical age periods in childhood and youth, we all felt as if we could not rest content until there is placed at the door of every family the best of opportunities to compell choices. We have all known and heard Miss Sarah E. Luther, secretary of Exceptional Education in Alabama, but we were never more impressed by her and her charming personality than when she was so eloquently directing our attention to the field and the program of our beloved State in her program of education for reaching and helping the illiterate and the backward among us.

Time and space will not allow a full report of the Conference, but we want every progressive minded citizen to know that the people of Thorsby have had an unusual treat, and that no matter what may be the turmoil of labor in the coming years, nothing shall be able to take from us the great riches in thought and in spirit that was brought to us during the recent gathering of these Christian workers.

THORSBY CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

In spite of the rain and bad weather on last Monday evening, twenty members of the Chamber of Commerce were present at the meeting held in the Masonic Hall, when Mr. Chas. Jones, assistant secretary of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce, gave us a splendid talk on the work that an organization of this kind can and ought to do, in order to build up a town like Thorsby. He said "the keynote of success to our chamber of commerce was in loyalty and work of its members who should study and picture in their minds the possibilities we have here, and then each work to gain this end. He said these things could not be accomplished in a short time, but would take months and even years, but by the continuous and hard work of this organization they would surely come." That the degree of success would be measured by the efforts put forth in obtaining the objective.

Rev. J. M. Graham, president of our chamber of commerce also put some enthusiasm in the members with his remarks. He stated that if Thorsby would show the right spirit of progressiveness, would show their willingness to cooperate in plans for the upbuilding of the community, the plans now under way for a building program as was mentioned in previous issues of this paper, calling for an expenditure of approximately one half million dollars, would be realized.

To be at a chamber of commerce meeting and hear such talks by both Mr. Jones and Pres. Graham, could not but create enthusiasm among its members. Now we know that there are a great number of Thorsby citizens who yet are not members of this body, who are needed by this organization as well as they need the chamber of commerce in the interet and welfare of Thorsby. The question is, are you doing your duty to your home town, when you are not a member? Better join now, and help put Thorsby on the map.

Last Thursday morning Mr. John Johnson met with a painful accident when he together with three other men were motoring thru from Birmingam enroute to Montgomery to attend the Masonic meeting, while coming over the mountain the driver became confused owing to a heavy fog so that he was unable to see the road plainly, and instead of turning at a curve as he should he went up a high bank causing the car to turn turtle two or three times. Mr. Johnson was pinned upder the car and sustained several injuries. He is at present in the hospital in Birmingham and seems to be doing nicely, his friends here wish for him a speedy recovery.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

There will be services at the Baptist Church next Sunday, November 21st, at 11 o'clock in the a.m. and 8 o'clock in the evening. Rev. W. P. Lowery, pastor of the church, will have charge of the services. Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. will meet at the usual hours.

On Thursday, Nov. 25th, which is Thanksgiving day, the three churches of the city will come together and have a union service. This service will be held at the Baptist Church at 10:30 a.m. Rev. J. M. Graham will deliver the Thanksgiving Sermon. Special music will be rendered by the young people. We hope that all the people of the town will attend and make this a great service.

The Ladies Guild will hold its next meeting at the home of Mrs. C. H. Thomsen on Friday, Nov. 26th instead of on Thursrday, the 25th, that day being on Thanksgiving. So don't forget the change.

We still have not heard from the knockers, and the challenge of some weeks ago still holds good, for an open discussion of the merits and demerits of Thorsby.

The famous Legg Sausage, made at Thorsby, is known over this and other states. This fact was brought home to us by one of the Thorsby residents who on a visit to Mobile came back with the report that while there she was served at a meal with what the people said was the famous Legg sausage. Why, she said, I can get this every day at home, because it is made in Thorsby.

Not only are the Thorsby strawberries known everywhere, but we now present to the public the famous Legg Sausage, made only in Thorsby.

REMEMBER to ask your grocer for Calumet Baking Powder and be sure that you get it—the Indian head on the orange label.

Then forget about bake day failures. For you will never have any. Calumet always produces the sweetest and most palatable foods.

And now remember, you always use less than of most other brands because it possesses greater leavening strength.

Now Remember—Always Use

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

There is no waste. If a recipe calls for one egg—two cups of flour—half a cup of milk — that's all you use. You never have to re-bake.

Contains only such ingredients as have been officially approved by U. S. Food Authorities, is the product of the largest, most modern and sanitary Baking Powder Factories in existence.

Gluten gives flour a good part of its food value—the element that nourishes the body. To be sure of getting it, use only pure baking powder with plain flour, (not self-rising flour).

Calumet Columbia Muffin Recipe

—4 cups sifted flour, 4 level teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 eggs, 2 cups of sweet milk. Then mix in the regular way.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists. 75c.

MONTGOMERY TO GET NEW EXPERT ON DRAIN WORK

Alabama will have another drainage expert of the United States government assigned for work in the state, and headquarters will be established in Montgomery at the federal building after December 15. This was announced at the National Drainage Congress held at Atlanta, Ga., last week and the news brought to Montgomery by J. M. Moore, head of the state department of pure food and drugs.

After Mr. Moore, in a speech to the congress, told of the drainage work in the state, S. H. McCrory, director of the United States Bureau of drainage investigation announced that he would assign a man from his department to be at the disposal of Alabama farmers in draining matters.

The man is at present located in the western part of the country, and is an expert on farm drainage.

Mr. Moore stated that this meant a great deal to the farmers of Alabama and would give an impetus to drinage work in the state.

Buck Gore and Oscar Jones look much wiser than they did before their trip to Montgomery last Thursday. If you are a shriner you probably understand their unusual display of wisdom.

SAYS CHEMIST IS PUBLIC BENEFACTOR

"Being a doctor and suffering for many years with stomach trouble, I feel I cannot do justice to so great a public benefactor in writing. Mayrs Wonderful Remedy is everything you hace claimed for it. I cannow eat and nrelish victuals I have not dared to eat in many years. Am feeling like newly born." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicts. One dose wll convince or money refunled. Sold by Alred Drug Co., and all good druggsts every where.

Walter Gillespie was in Clanton last Saturday. He is employed under Sheriff Jackson of Shelby county as a guard in the strike district at Roebuck's Mines. Mr. Gillespie was very exultant over the splendid success of the Republican ticket in Chilton County in the recent election.

Who was it that said that there were going to be three eclipses in the U. S. this year?—a partial eclipse of the sun and moon and a total eclipse of the Democratic party. We have not seen the first two, but the last one has come true to prediction.

Eruptions of the Skin Cause Torturous Itching

If you are afflicted with any form of skin disorder, you are well acquainted with the flaming, burning itching that these diseases produce.

Skin diseases are caused by an impurity or disorder in the blood, and there is no real and genuine relief within your reach until such impurities are removed.

S.S.S. has given great satisfaction in the treatment of these disorders, because it is such a thoroughly satisfactory blood purifier. It cleanses the blood of all impurities, and thus counteracts the effects of the germs that attack the skin.

Begin taking S.S.S. today, and if you will write a complete history of your case, our medical adviser will give you expert advice without charge. Address Chief Medical Adviser, 158 Swift Laboratory, Atlanta, Ga.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

Editor Union-Banner:

I want to say a few words about the Sunday School Convention held at Pleasant Grove Baptist Church No. 1, on Second Sunday in November.

The meeting was called to order by District president, Mr. H. R. Oden, at 10:30 o'clock. After song and prayer Prof. J. L. Johnson was introduced as first speaker. He made several interesting impressions about how to stop the leaks in Sunday Schools. We were sorry that more of the older people were not there to hear them.

Next speaker on program was Rev. P. G. Carter of the Clanton Baptist Church, who spoke eloquently on the Sunday School work and its products.

After dinner Miss Della Williams, our county secretary, was introduced. She spoke about 30 minutes on equipment. She gave us many methods and interesting plans how we might get these equipments, especially for teaching the beginners as they should be.

Last on program was Miss Ethel Bean, a state worker from Montgomery. Well, if you have ever heard Miss Bean you know more about how rapid and interestingly she talks than I can tell. I am sure every one present felt very much inspired by her speech on Sunday School work.

We feel fortunate indeed in having such good speakers and workers with us. Am sure all who were present feel much inspired. If the cool weather or any other justifiable cause hindered you from being with us we are indeed sorry. But for those who just did not care to take part in making the day a success I want to say it may be a long time before you have another opportunity to such a treat as this one. Mr. Oden promised us good speakers and he certainly did do his part.

All together now, to do the best we can this winter. Instead of thinking the weather gets too bad to go to church and Sunday School just try it and see how much better you will feel by having done your duty.

Myrtle McAfee, Secretary.

Record Republican Vote In Alabama on Nov. 2nd

REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES POLL HIGH WATER MARK OF OVER 75,000 VOTES IN ALABAMA ON NOVEMBER 2ND.

Shattering all previous records, with the aid largely of their women folks and siezed doubtless with the contagion that swept the United States on November 2, the Republicans as a party in Alabama polled the impressive total of 74,690 votes (the high mark) for its national electoral ticket, and in one race, for the United States Senate (long term) polled 77,337 votes.

Offsetting this vote the Democrats polled 163,254 votes (the high mark) for its national electoral ticket and in the Senatorial race (unexpired term) the party's candidate secured 160,-680 votes. Higher figures than those for the unexpired term were polled for the party nominees for several State offices, the Republican candidates in opopsition failing to keep pace with the ticket of electors and nominees for the Senatorial posts.

Meeting to consolidate the votes from the 67 counties of Alabama as cast in the election of November 2, the general election board of the State worked until after 7 o'clock last night before its work had been completed, and at which hour Governor Thos. E. Kilby began signing his official proclamations declaring the results of the balloting for the several offices.

The meeting of the board definitely settled the status of the three proposed constitutional amendments which were submitted at the time of the general election, the report of the board showing that each had been decisively defeated in the State. Proposal Number 1, by which the State would have been authorized to lend its credit for the development of Mobile harbor polled 77,480 votes against 89,071, losing by a majority of 11,591 Proposal Number 2 by which the people of Jefferson county would have been enabled to vote for or against the issuance of bonds for the development of Birmingham, polled 70,198 votes with 91,698 against, the majority in defeat being 21,500, while Proposal Number 3, which would have authorized counties to levy a special tax for good roads after elections thereon, was defeated by a vote of 58,109 for to 99,070 against, or a majority of 40,961 against.

Tabulated figuress reveal the fact that the Seaport Amendment was given a majority in twenty counties of the State including the Big Three, the Birmingham amendment carried in 17 counties, including the Big Three, while the Special Good Roads proposal was favored in only 9 counties, and again Jefferson, Mobile and Montgomery voted favoraably.

A significant feature in connection with the Republican raid on the Democratic strong-holds of Alabama lies in the fact that by polling the impressive vote that fell to the party, under the laws of Alabama it is entitled to conduct a Republican primary at the next election at the expense of the State. The section of the election law making this provision stipulates that whenever a political party shall poll 25 per cent of the total vote cast in any election in the State, it shall be given the privilege of holding a primary in the next election year at the expense of the State

Roughly the G. O. P. polled an average of 74,600 out of a total of 239,-000 cast.

Not since the days of 1860-65 have the Republicans ever approximated the vote their candidates received in the recent election, and while the vote cast therein was practically double that usually cast in presidential years, the party of Harding and Coolidge more than doubled the vote the G. O. P. ticket headed by Hughes in 1916 received in Alabama, when the vote was slightly under 30,000. The inroads of the Republican party, however, is not only foretold in the figures relative to the national electoral ticket and Senatorial candidates, but is further to be found in the fact that their candidae for circuit judge in the Eighteenth circuit was successful over the Democratic nominee, while a large number of county officials in Fayette, Chilton, Shelby, St. Clair, Walker, Winston, and Franklin counties will be Republicans during the next four years.

The Republican national ticket was successful in ten Alabama counties, its Senatorial ticket for the long term in eleven, the county of Walker turning its back on Senator Oscar W. Underwood, (successful in the primaries of 1920 against one of her wealthy citizens) after having given the electoral, unexpired Senatorial and congressional tickets fair majorities.

The showing of the Socialist and Prohibition tickets was, perhaps, considered very poor, for while the former polled approximately 1,000 more votes for its ticket of national electors, its candidates for the Senate, congress and judicial seats in Jefferson county trailed miserably, the high man on the party's electorial ticket received2369 votes. Tally, on the prohibition electoral ticket, led the field with 757 votes, no candidates being offered by the party for any other positions.

The consolidated vote as to various other offices which the people of the State or districts were required to fill, shows that aside from the congressional fights in the Fourth, Seventh and Tenth districts and the race for judge of the Eighteenth circuit, opposition to the Democratic candidates was practically nil.

In the Fourth congressional district Fred L. Blackmon was returned to congress by a majority of 3981 over Judge Longshore of Shelby; Wm. B. Bankhead was returned from the Tenth by a plurality of 1728 over Chenault, Republican, and a majority of 1541 over Chenault and Walker (socialist.) In the Seventh L. B. Rainey's plurality over C. B. Kennamar, (republican) was 1039 while his majority of Kennamar and Meadows (socialist) was 806.

W. L. Longshore of Columbiana, defeated E. J. Garrison for judge of the 18th circuit by a vote of 5797 to 5540, a majority for the former of 257.

The official vote for all candidates before the electorate in the election, as announced by the board, after its work was completed, follows:

Presidential Electors:

Democrats: Adams, 155,894; Blan, 155,960; Clabaugh, 155,945; Crook, 155,958; Cunningham, 159,958; Deese, 156,220; Denson, 156,005; McQueen, 155,762; Miller, 155,961; Quiin, 155,957; Smith, 163,254; Walker, 155,965.

South is Growing More Friendly to Republicans

RECEPTION GIVEN TO HARDING IN NEW ORLEANS IS POINTED OUT BY MARK SULLIVAN IN THE BIRMINGHAM NEWS.

New Orlenas, La., Nov. 20.—When Senator Harding was addressing the open-air crowd in New Orleans Thursday just before sailing for Panama, I stood on the city hall steps behind him with the owner and editor of one of New Orlean's newspapers, a man who not only is a Democrat by conviction, but is so tied to that party by tradition and official association that it is possible to speak of him as a Brahmin among Democrats.

The remark which occurred to this man as we watched the upturned faces was this: "The significant thing about that crowd is that there is hardly a negro in it. On former occasions when Republican presidents visited New Orleans the occasion was regarded by the negroes as their particular day and more than half the crowd was colored.

"That crowd that has come to hear Harding," he continued, "is representative of the people who voted for him. They are as good as any people in our city. In some respects they are the best people in our city.

"The people who voted for Harding include most of our banking people, most of our mercantile people, and most of the people connected with our leading industries. Actually two-fifths of the people of this state voted for Harding, and most of them were people of this class.

"The negro element in the vote that Harding got was a negligible fraction, not over 3,000 or 4,000 at the outside. With the votes of people of the best class, Harding carried several districts of this city, and came close to carrying the city as a whole. If the Republicans had been well organized and had made a real fight, or if the Democratic vote had not been stimulated by the fact that a proposal for a new constitiution was voted on the same day, Harding might well have carried Louisiana."

All these things and others to the same effect, this Democratic editor said, and he said them not with bitterness or regret, but with satisfaction, and this satisfaction with the prospect that the South may soon cease to be a solid unit politically and may become a normal section, like every other part of the country, doubtful as between the parties and with both parties contending for it in each election.

Satisfaction General

The satisfaction over this prospect is general with the class of Democrats of whom this speaker is typical. In some parts of the South this satisfaction is put on the ground that it is more wholesome for a community to have two parties contending for its votes than for one party to have a monopoly of them. They cite the educational value of political campaigns, political delegates and political pamphleteering.

In Louisiana the satisfaction over Republican victory is not entirely altruistic. Louisiana is less a cotton state than the other Southern states. Louisiana is a sugar state, a rice state and a lumber state. And all three of these industries need, or think they need, protection.

When Sentor Harding crossed the state from west to east on his way from Texas to New Orleans he passed through no community that is not a sugar or a rice community.

All this satisfaction with Republican victory on the part of those Southerners who enter into that satisfaction includes one important assumption. It includes the assumption that the Republican party, if and when it becomes equal in power to the Democrats in the South, will take the same attitude that the Democrats take toward negro voting.

Regarding Negro Vote

It goes on the assumption that wherever the negro population is half or close to half of the whole, that element shall not be solicited to vote and become a balance of power between two white factions. If the South thought the Republicans would be likely to do in the future as they have in the past to stimulate the negro to vote so as to give the many pawns to unscrupulous politicians to bribe the negro and buy and sell his power in the national elections; if the South thought the Republicans were going to continue these practices the Republican party would have no better prospects here in the future than in the past.

But the South has come to feel that nearly everybody now agrees about what is best to do about the negro as a voter in communities where he is so numerous that his vote would be the determining factor.

Aside from the satisfaction of the sugar people, the rice people, the lumber people and the other commercial and financial classses with his election, Senator Harding at New Orleans made the same impression of simple friendliness that he has made elsewhere in the South and received from the audience a tribute that was clearly intended to make him feel that he had their good will and good wishes.

SWAMP DRAINAGE PROJECT TO BE PUSHED.

Definite steps are already being taken to push forward the drainage project that will mean the reclamation of hundreds of acres of the finest kind of lands lying right around the gates of the city of Clanton. It will mean that instead of having low and wet soggy swamps lying all round the city on every side save one—the west side, we shall be surrounded by broad acres of the most fertile lands in the county, lands that will, when drained by the big ditch, produce fifty to a hundred bushels of corn to the acre without a bit of fertilizer.

The application has already been prepared by an attorney to get the matter before the Court of Probate of Chilton County. The necessary papers have all been fixed up, and it is now down to a matter of putting your name on the dotted line. Many of the owners of this low swamp land have already signed up. There are many others who will sign up as soon as they get a chance at one of the applications. Mr. W. W. Fox, Mr. P. D. Wilson, and Mr. J. D. Collins each have one of these application blanks, which any land owner within the proposed drainage district may sign.

The applications that are now being made are to go to the Probate Court calling for survey of the lands and swamps to be drained. The survey will be made by a competent civil engineer appointed by the Court to make the investigation and report the same to the Court. Upon the report and findings of the engineer, the Court of Probate shall decide as to whether the project will be worth carrying out under the provisions of an Act of the 1915 Legislature providing for the organization of drainage districts and paying for the costs and expenses of installing and maintaining drainage systems so as to promote the public health and for the reclamation of low lands that have heretofore been unfit for cultivation, and putting them into a state of usefulness and profit to the owners.

It is estimated that the cost of the court in having the preliminary survey made will be about a dollar an acre for the lands proposed to be drained. This amount is pledged by each man, that is one dollar an acre for as many acres as he has in the swamp, when he signs the application. If the drainage district is declared by the court and the drainage association is untimately declared and put into operation, this initial payment of one dollar per acre will be refunded to those who paid it in.

There is no use in talking about what an advantage this project will be to the people who own lands in these swamps. That is a matter that can be seen by a blind man. What we want now is to get the matter on foot and going. Whether you have any land to be drained or not, if you live in Clanton or anywhere near Clanton, you ought to get busy and do some talking for this project. Let's get rid of the swamps. Let's banish the mud, water, frogs, snakes and mosquitoes, all at one fell swoop. Let's clean up this country around Clanton. Then maybe somebody will start to Clean up Clanton.

BUSINESS MEN SHOULD ORGANIZE.

The letter of our worthy and well qualified Mayor which appears on this page prompts us to editoralize some more on the subject of a commercial organization for Clanton.

For some weeks past we have been saying something on this subject, because we were moved to do so by the open challenge delivered to Clanton by the Town of Thorsby through Mr. Legg, their Commercial Club Manager. But we will leave the Commercial Club subject right here and take up Dr. Gragg's letter in the order which he writes.

His reference to the building of roads under the State bond issue raises a timely question. Many people have been asking themselves (and others) what the State is doing under the provisions of the bond issue for building roads with Federal aid. Many citizens asked that question before they voted on the road tax amendment on Nov. 2. Failing to get an answer to their question they voted against the amendment. The result was an overwhelming defeat for the proposition of more tax privileges for road purposes.

People would like to see more being done in the way of road building under the State Bond issue. Possibly the state is doing all it can. And as Dr. Gragg says some counties are getting roads built. There is a way to get roads under this system. Why can't Chilton County get some of them? We could at least start a movement that would determine what steps we would have to take to get some of the work done in our county.

Now as for the organization of business men. Right now is the opening of an era of great progress and develpment. Clanton is right in the pathway of this enterprise. There are many things that we need to have done in order to take care of our interests. Those things cannot be done without an organization of business men. We need a Commercial Club. Why can't we have one? We can if we will.

REPUBLICAN PROGRESS IN ALABAMA

In another column of this issue of The Union-Banner we are publishing the figures of the recent general election in Alabama, showing the votes as cast for the different political party candidates.

On the whole these figures show a tremendous gain for the Republicans in the state, which is cause for much gratification to those who have labored and fought under adverse circumstances for the establishment of a Republican party of some consequence. The one significant thing about the result and the favorable consideration given the Republican party on Nov. 2 is the showing of what can be done by making a fight.

If the Republican party in the state had sat down and done nothing in the past campaign we would have been yet right where we have always been, a negligible quantity in the state's politics. But by taking some advantage of our opportunities we see a total of over 77,000 votes cast for our candidate for United States Senator. Judge Reynolds made a vigorous fight for his cause and the cause of the party and he was rewarded by a vote that is something like twelve thousand ahead of the average of the other Republican candidates.

The vote cast for the Republican ticket in the state on Nov. 2 will entitle the Republicans hereafter to a primary election at te expense of the State, a privilege that has not heretofore been enjoyed, because the present state primary laws require a party to poll 25 per cent of the total vote of the state in order to have a state primary. This accomplishment alone is worth all the effort that has been made in the past.

ABOUT PUTTING UP THE BARS

Democrats over Alabama have become greatly alarmed at what they are pleased to call double-dealing on the part of a great many people in Alabama in the recent election and the primaries that preceded the same. The Montgomery Advertiser, Mr. J. T. Gorman of Mobile and Mr. G. T. McCullough of Cherokee County are especially drastic in their remarks concerning those who are alleged to have voted in the Democratic primaries and then in the general election turned and voted for Republicans. Here is a paragraph from the editorial of the Advertiser that savors of reason broad and consistent, especially in its treatment of the standing of Republicans.

It would be useless to deny that following reconstruction for many years a social and business prejudice existed in certain sections of the State against Republicans. In the passing of years this prejudice has passed; a man loses nothing of his standing in the community by being a Republican. It is his right to be a Republican, if he prefers that party, and he can become one without any consequence to his position in the community. If he prefers the Republican party, let him by all means affiliate with it. But if he becomes a Republican let him stay out of Democratic primaries. Let him wear one uniform or the other not a hybrid affair in which he can deceive the fighting force of one or the other parties.

We would remind these gentlemen that in the future the Republicans in Alabama are going to have a primary of their own. This will eliminate much of their double-dealing. It will give Republicans a chance to vote Republican in primaries as well as General elections. And too, we might suggest that the Republicans may consider putting up the bars to keep Democrats out of their primaries, but we hardly expect to see them doing it.

Don't you suppose that the main reason Democrats want the bars put up is to keep the Democrats in, rather than keep the Republicans out?

ALOES AND A HAIR SHIRT

Unless the Democratic party purges itself of the forces that have been dragging it to destruction, it can never hope to wield any important influence in American politics again. The outstanding lesson of the elections is that the voters are first of all Americans. They will support that party and that candidate who most strongly concentrates his efforts to the welfare and growth of his own country. The Democratic party has been drifting away from that policy. The first few years of the Wilson administration the party was dominated by men who put partisan considerations before attention to the country's welfare. That alone was sufficient to bring ultimate defeat, but soon after the outbreak of the European war it became evident that the President and his party lieutenants were determined to add internationalism as an object to which the nation's welfare must be sacrificed. The combination of gross partisanship and Europeanism as the objectives of Democracy, to the practical exclusion of all that tended to make America supreme, brought the defeat which an outraged electorate administered on November 2nd.

The Republican party has always been the party of America. In its very first platform (1856) it declared "That the maintenance of the principles promulgated in the Declaration of Independence and embodied in the Federal Constitution are essential to the preservation of our republican institutions." On those principles it has stood ever since. In spite of the efforts of the Democrats to wreck the sort of government planned by the forefathers, first through endorsement of the Confederacy in the Civil War and now by efforts to effect a surrender to foreign control, the Republicans have kept the nation intact, and our marvelous pre-Wilson prosperity is evidence of the remarkable efficiency of their administrations.

Economists differ as to the best means for promoting American trade and industry, and it is along those lines of difference that political parties must be formed if they are to keep a place in our councils. International relations should never enter into politics at all. Of two diverse opinions on a foreign question, one is bound to be more American than the other, and behind the former all shades of political thought should unite. The sooner the Democrats realize and apply that basic principle of American politics the earlier will they regain some of their lost prestige.

WESTERN FARMERS DEMAINDING AID

We note with interest a United Press Dispatch from Washington appearing in the Birmingham News Monday, which has the following to say about the demands that are being made by the western farmers:

"Party lines are to be obliterated and forgotten by mid-Western and Western members of the House and Senate this Winter in an effort to do something about the situation which has stirred resentment among farmers and live stock raisers, it was learned here today.

Informal conferences already held among Republican and Democratic members from Western states have resulted in a decision to hold a formal conference of all senators from Western states soon after the Democratic session begins, Senator Hithcock, of Nebraska, stated today.

At this conference a working program is to be mapped out if possible for concerted action by senators from farm and live stock states regardless of party in the interests of producers."

You see what a stir has been created among Congressmen and Senators when the Western farmers get in the pinches and call for help. Every one of the Western Representatives is getting busy seeking something that he may be able to do to help the farmers out there get the right kind of prices for their cattle. It is not recorded that any of those farmers have gone to Washington to demand help. They must have only sent the word along that they needed help and their representatives are getting busy.

Now, let us turn about and look at another beloved, though sadly neglected portion of the U. S. A. How about our Southland, "where by night the cotton whitens beneath the stars, and by day the wheat locks the sunshine in his bearded sheaf?" What is the conditions with the cotton growers?

What about the small farmer who raises two bales of cotton to pay his debts with, and hopes to have a few dollars left with which to buy the kids a pair of shoes? Now the cotton will not even pay the debts and the kids are shivering in their bare feet.

What about the appeal that these Southern farmers made this fall in order to have their cotton crop saved? Did their appeal create any sensation at Washington? Did Tom Heflin and Osker Underwood and Bill Oliver and Ed Almon and our other famous representatives start anything up there seeking to get relief for Alabama and other Southern cotton growers?

Did W. P. G. Harding and Dave Houston, those mighty Southerners, throw the Federal Reserve System and the Department of Agriculture into fits when the Southern farmers called upon them for help?

If they did we don't recollect anything about it.

What was the matter then? Are not the Southern Represenatives as zealous for the interests of the South as the Westerner for the West?

Yes, that may be true. But the difference is that the politician from the West has got to do something for his constituents if he holds his job at Washington. While in the South all the politician has to do to hold his job is to swell up in his importance and look big, going about the country blowing the flames of prejudice between the north and the South on the race question, and telling the people if the country goes Republican, hell will be to pay generally.

Tom and Osker and Ed and Bill all knew last fall that Alabam would elect them to Congress again, whether they did anything for the Southern farmers or not.

The Western Congressman or Senator knows that he has got to dance when he gets to Washington, for his calling and election is not so sure as in the South.

In the West if the Democrats don't do it, the Republicans will. The result is that everybody does it; and when the Western farmer gets in bad with his wheat and cattle he is helped out at Washington.

In the South if the Democrats don't do it, the Republicans won't have a chance. The result is nobody does it; and when the Southern farmer gets in bad with his cotton, he has to stay in the rut and wear himself out against fate, while his Congressmen and Senators sit in their easy chairs at Washington glorying over the great and magnificent "Solid Democratic South."

ECRASEZ L'INFAME

Washington, Nov. 22.—"As the echoes of the Republican landslide of November 2nd grow fainter the propaganda urging league membership on the United States once more waxes in strength," asserts the Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonothan Bourne, Jr. "A dispatch from Geneva states that the general view of the Europeans and Latin Americans is that unless the United States accepts membership the League of nations will not survive. Probably because they find no one else who will agree to pay the bills. Information via cable arrives almost daily that the present members of the league, which is now taking stock of itself in Geneva, will agree to almost any reservation which we see fit to make, if we will only come in. But they are reported as objecting to the adoption of a new scheme. And why? Because Mr. Wilson, succeeding in his intention of so interweaving the league with the treaty that they could not be separated, has made it impossible for us to become a member of the league, whatever may be our reservations, without at the same time accepting the responsibilities to be found in the Peace Treaty itself. Those responsibilities include membership on a large number of commissions charged with re-drafting European boundaries, holding plebiscites, allocating raw materials, government over certain defined territories, the apportionment of rolling stock, the working of mines, the numerous other financial, governmental, and economic features with which the United States has no immediate concern, and which, were we a party to the disputes engendered, would engage us in constant bickering and the taking of first this side and then the other.

"Meanwhile certain international banking interests are hoping against hope that President-designate Harding may be induced to place at the head of his Cabinet some man who will represent their views and who might be able to exert an influence which would write us into the league, even with reservations. Their chief desire is evidently to place the United States in the position of having to guarantee their foreign investments, at the sacrifice of the lives of American soldiers, if necessary. The attitude of the league members and of these banking interests seem to be that if they can only get a reservational slip-knot over Uncle Sam's head they will be able to tie his hands and draw it snugly later on by way of amendments to the league covenant. They smirkingly term this a compromise. It would ultimately be a surrender.

"The answer of this country to the league of nations idea was loud enough to be heard down the aisles of time for a century to come. If certain interests are by self-seeking so deaf to that answer that they must continue their vicious propaganda in the face of its nation-wide repudiation, it is probable that the agitation will continue until Mr. Harding has taken his oath of office and, with the aid of the Senate, has put the eternal quietus on this persistent endeavor to internationalize the United States. A Congressional joint resolution to establish peace can come none too quickly for the American peace of mind. Following that, if the nations of Europe, Asia, and South America wish to cooperate with us in drafting a measure to prevent a resort to arms before there has been a resort to right reason we will be glad to meet them half way. But there must be no fettering of American independence, no possibility of coercing the American will to act. If foreign powers insist on the preservation of the league, inextricably interwoven as it is with a treaty which is satisfactory to none, they thereby insist on our remaining outside the compact, and such a situation would be properly chargeable to Mr. Wilson's handiwork. It was sure the purpose of the reservationists that if the United States had to go into the league, it would go in under proper safeguards, at least. But the people have spoken, and we are not compelled to go in. The people have now trusted the nation's safety to Mr. Harding and an overwhelming majority in Congress, and that trust will not be breached, though the world howls and the international banking interests ring their pieces-of-eight on the marble floors of the national legislature."

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

MAYOR URGES ORGANIZED EFFORT

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 24, 1920.

Editor Union-Banner:—Through your paper I wish to say that as a citizen of our Town, I feel that our business and professional men are to some extent neglecting their duties to our town and county. It has been quite a long time since our State voted the bond issue for good roads; yet I see very little effort on the part of our leading men to get busy and see that we can get some benefit locally from the bonds. Other sections of the state are getting roads. Why not Chilton County?

We are on the eve of additional industrial developments of gigantic proportions. That of itself is calculated to stimulate business and relieve the present depression that we are now experiencing locally.

It seems to me that a Commercial Club, or some such business organization should be fostered, and by going after these things with an organized effort we could accomplish much good both for Clanton and Chilton County.

Can we not arouse some interest in this matter?

Yours for a better town and county.

V. J. GRAGG.

HON. JOSEPH D. BECK.

Washington, Nov, 23.—One of the numerous farmer members of the next Congress will be Joseph D. Beck of Viroqua, Wisconsin. Mr. Beck will also come to Congress with a very extended practical knowledge of labor and industrial affairs. He was born on a farm, educated in the common and State Normal schools and graduated from the University of Wisconsin. He taught in district and high schools, was Commissioner of Labor and Industrial Statistics and Chairman of the Industrial Commission of Wisconsin, his service in these two latter capacities extending over a period of sixteen years. He also served as President of the International Association of Labor Bureau officials 1908 to 1910. As a farmer he gives his chief attention to live stock and is a breeder of Guernsey cattle.

HON. CLARENCE D. COUGHLIN

A new Republican Congressman who combines the qualifications of a lawyer and a business man is Clarence D. Coughlin of Wilkes-Barre, Pennsylvania, who was a successful candidate in the recent election. He is from what is known as the "Progressive" element of the Republican party and was Secretary of the Roosevelt organization in his county in 1912. He was one of the organizers of the Public Safety Committee of his State and was appointed by the Governor on a special committee to revise and codify the criminal laws of the State. He is interested in various industrial enterprises in his section of Pennsylvania.

HON. MANUEL HERRICK

In the Republican victory which made inroads in the heretofore Democratic State of Oklahoma, one of the effective workers was Manuel Herrick who was elected to Congress over his Democratic rival. Mr. Herrick is strictly a self-made man and the training he received while achieving his own personal success undoubtedly went far to win him the confidence of his constituents in his campaign for Congress. During the campaign one of the arguments made against Mr. Herrick was that he was lacking in education. Herrick admitted this, and asserted that his lack of education was due to the want of opportunity and the adverse conditions of his childhood. Nevertheless he worsted his rival in the discussions on the stump during the campaign. He is a vigorous debater and has taken an interest in all public questions since his childhood. He will be one of the interesting characters of the next Congress.

HON. I. CLINTON KLINE

The Sixteenth District of Pennsylvania is one of the Districts that has turned from Democratic to Republican in its representation in Congress. The man who won the District over to the Republican side is I. Clinton Kline of Sunbury, Pennsylvania, and an orator of more than local renown. He is a college-traied man and prior to his entering the practice of law had some experiences as a school-teacher and a farmer. His District which had heretofore been Democratic by about four thousand votes has now become Republican by a similar majority.

A WEDDING OF INTEREST.

One of the most interesting bridal affairs of recent date among the people of this section is involved in the marriage of Mr. Ivy Blalock to Miss Janie Taylor, which occurred this afternoon (Thursday), about 4:00 o'clock. The happy young couple left Clanton shortly after noon, and proceeded by automobile to the home of Rev. J. S. Kelley, where they underwent the sacred and solemn rites, uniting themselves together for all time to come.

After being married they left for Falakto, where they caught the 5 o'clock north bound train for Birmingham. They will visit friends in that city for only a few days, and return to Clanton to make their future home.

Mr. Blalock is an enterprising young barber of Clanton. He has practiced his profession in several cities of the State, also he served in the army during the recent war.

Miss Taylor is a very successful school teacher. Her home is in Clanton, but for two or three years she has been giving her services as a teacher in the rural districts of the county. She is at this time first assistant in the Poplar Springs school. She is a lovable teacher and a competent instructor, being a graduate of the Chilton County High School.

The many friends of the young couple will learn with pleasure that they are married and will wish them long and uninterrupted happiness.

WIDOW PREFERRED TO MEET DEATH AT HOME

"For many years I suffered from stomach trouble. All the doctors I tried helped me but little. All said I would have to go to hospital and be operated on for gall stones or I would not live much longer. I told them I preferred to meet death at home. One day I picked up an advertisement of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and since taking a course of it more than a year ago have not had a single pain in my stomach, have good appetite and can eat anything." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.—Alred Drug Company, Clanton, Ala.

AUCTION SALE OF HOGS

Mr. Fox, the auctioneer, went down to Verbena Tuesday to pull off an auction sale of hogs for the Estate of D. I. Deramus. The event was very successful and resulted in the sale of 58 of the finest pure bred Poland China hogs. There were not very many people at the sale but those who were there meant business. When Mr. Fox began to put the hogs up the people bought them. Some were bought for breeding purposes and some for meat.

All who are interested in the breeding of hogs should see the male and female breeders that are kept by the Deramus Estate. There are two each of males and females, Poland China, Registered, each one weighing over 750 pounds.

Fox, the auctioneer, is a very successful salesman on the auction block. If you have anything you want turned into cash, see him. If he can't get results, just consider you have a dead proposition on your hands.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Hart motored over to Selma Sunday to meet Mr. Hart's mother who is their guest.

Mr. C. Y. Holly and Miss Autie Crawford of Birmingham spent Sunday with the formers parents.

W. J. Moates of Pletcher was in Clanton Thursday.

SOUR STOMACH INDIGESTION

Thedford's Black-Draught Highly Recommended by a Tennessee Grocer for Troubles Resulting from Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.— The efficiency of Thedford's Black-Draught, the genuine, herb, liver medicine, is vouched for by Mr. W. N. Parsons, a grocer of this city. "It is without doubt the best liver medicine, and I don't believe I could get along without it. I take it for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver.

"I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Many other men and women throughout the country have found Black-Draught just as Mr Parsons describes —valuable in regulating the liver to its normal functions, and in cleansing the bowels of impurities.

Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine is the original and only genuine. Accept no imitations or substitutes. Always ask for Thedford's. E 93

JUST GETTING ALONG FINE SINCE STARTED TAKINC DRECO

Well known Mobile lady suffered from stomach disorder, constipation, kidney trouble and dizzy spells.

Declares her relief is complete since taking Dreco, the root and herb juice remedy.

"I am getting along simply fine now, and don't have to take an enema each day, as I formerly did, since Dreco, the great remedy has done so much for me," says Mrs. John T. Fred, 109 Government Street, Moible, Ala.

"Dreco is the greatest medicine I even encountered in my life. It has done for me what nothing else has done, and that is why I want every one to know about it, so they too, may get well.

"For a long time I have suffered from constipation and kidney trouble; severe pains in my back and limbs caused much suffering. I could not stoop over for the pains, and my joints were very painful. My appetite failed and I was growing very weak and falling off in weight.

"Two bottles of Dreco have relieved me of all pain and my bowels act regularly as a clock. My appetite has returned and I have gained in weight. Does and one wonder that I am happy over my deliverance from pain, and that I should want every one to know and profit by my experience?

Dreco is a vegetable compound made from the pure juices and extracts of many different roots, herbs, barks and leaves, it acts on the bowels and relieves constipation, increases the appetite induces sound restful sleep, quiets the nerves, stimulates the kidneys to full healthy action, thereby ridding the system of poison which causees catarrh and rheumatism.

Dreco rouses a sluggish liver to healthy action thereby relieving headaches, giddy spells, biliousness, foul breath, bad taste in the mouth, sallow complexion, heartburn and as a general tonic and syetem builder it is unexcelled.

All druggists now sell Dreco and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Co.

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

THORSBY INSTITUTE

A play entitled "The Pilgrims and their Journey" will be given Saturday night, November 27th, by the Helen Keller Literary Society in commemoration of the three hundredth anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims.

The first scene is laid in the office of the city officials in Leyden, Holland in 1619. The English embassador asks the Dutch Burgomaster for the arrest of William Brewster, the puritan pastor, because he had been sending books back to England, which glorified the puritan faith.

The second scene is laid at the Puritan quarters in Leyden. Master Robinson presents to the people the difficulties in the way of making Holland their permanent home. While discussion is going on orders are received for the arrest of William Bewster. The Puritians decide that it is best for them to leave Holland.

The third scene is laid in New Plymouth in America in 1621. The Puritans have suffered much during the winter andhave lost many of their number. They have lived in fear of the Indians, but their fears are set at naught, by the friendly visit of "Samoset."

In the fourth and last scene, Samoset brings the chief Massasoit to the colony and the Indians and Puritians draw up a peace treaty. The Mayflower then leaves the colony and starts on its return to England. The cast of characters in the play are:

Dutch Burgomaster....Clayton Sharpe
English Ambassador..Chester Maddox
Elders in the Church
William Brewster.....Arthur Male
William Bradford.....Zell Pope
John Carver, Governor of Plymouth .....Arthur McCary
John Robinson, Pastor of Plymouth church .....Yancey Kelley
Samoset, Indian.....Porter Lee Music
Puritians and other characters: John Wesley, Lily Smith, Gresham Lowery, Mattie Scott, Eura Hughes, Theo Brackin, Robert Sheppard, Elliott Lyon, Jennie Woodham, Eugene McCrary and Herbert McClain.

We were unable to report the splendid programme given by the Helen Keller Literary Society assisted by the pupils of the public school, illustrative of the modern Health Crusade, in our last issue. Songs and recitations by pupils of the public school were rendered, after which Rev. J. M. Graham gave a very forcible address on the work of the Health Crusade. The playlet entitled "The Imps" given under the direction of Mrs. Loveland very effectively illustrated how indifferent the parents as well as school board sometimes are to the vital questions concerning the health and proper care of the children until they see what harm these Imps (of ill health) can do. The scene of the play portrayed the Imps awaiting the coming of the children to the school ground, when they could then mingle with and touch them while in their play. There are so many of these Imps that a trained nurse to care for the children is unable to cope with their number, and the children become affected with various ills. The school board, deeply engrossed in its business affairs fail to take notice of this serious situation until they are called upon by the Doctor and nurse as well as the parents of the children, who through much argument make them see the true situation, and prevail upon them to take vigorous action in ridding the school and grounds of these dangers.

Before the close of the program Prof. C. M. Williams of the Public School, reported the findings of the State Department of Public Health resulting from the examination of the public school children and Institute students. The report showed that many were in need of medical attention, especially on account of deseased tonsils and hook worm infection. He urged parents to take steps necessary to bring their children to full physical fitness.

Foss met them at the station and brought them over to Mrs. Biggs' home, where eloborate preparations had been made for them by several young ladies. A delicious four course dinner was served and covers were for ten. Mrs. Biggs was assisted by Marjorie Fox, Emily Ellsworth, Ethel Loveland and Nannie Lindquist. After dinner music was enjoyed and a general good time was spent after which all went to the Institute where the entertainment of the Hawaiians was given and greatly enjoyed by a vast audience. These young men were very appreciative of the splendid hospitality which was shown them in the little town of Thorsby.

It may be interesting to the citizens of Thorsby to know that daily shipments of the "Legg Sausage," made in Thorsby, are leaving the packing plant. Only last Saturday evening a shipment of over five hundred pounds went to Mobile. We are informed that this is only the beginning. We would suggest that the farmers get busy and raise hogs to supply the growing industry.

FESS TAUNTS DEMOCRATS FOR "SOLID SOUTH" LOSS

Greatest Gains in Election of Republican House Members Are from Dixie Land

Washington, November 22.—That the Republican party has been encouraged by the unprecedented majorities in the election to invade the solid South and in the future wage a systematic campaign there is evidenced by a statement of Representative Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, chairman of the National Republican Congressional Committee. He says:

"The election offers many suggestions for the student of political campaigns. The election of a President by an overwhelming majority unlike anything in the history of elections, backed by a Senate majority in a contest in which the Democrats claimed good chances to win eight seats, but in which they won nothing and lost ten, giving the Republican a majority of 22, and a House by the incredible majority of 176, is an interesting episode in campaigns.

"Since the Civil War the partisan line of demarkation has been the Mason and Dixon line, the old dividing line between the free and slave states. Democracy's hold upon the Southern section has ever provided its chief support. Not infrequently the North and West are strongly Republican so that the contest is often referred to as the Solid South against the United North and West.

"This election has shown a smaller number of Democratic members of the House from the North and West than Republican members from South of the dividing line. In the border states, neutral in Civil War, Delaware, Maryland, Kentucky and Missouri, Harding carried all but Kentucky, three of them elected Republican Senators and they returned 24 Republican members of the House and only 10 Democratic members. In addition, Harding carried Tennesssee with 5 out of the 10 Congressmen. He seriously reduced the Democratic majority in the other Southern States.

"The Republicans chose fifteen districts in the South in which to make contests. These were taken as tests to ascertain the feasibility of attempting to break the "Solid South." The list included 3 in Virginia, 3 in North Carolina, 1 in Alabama, 3 in Tennessee, 2 in Texas and 3 in Oklahoma. These were in addition to the border states. Of the fifteen tests we won seven, and made remarkable showing in the other eight. We did not enter either Georgia or Arkansas, both of which were represented as very good fields for Republican policies. The result demonstrates the possibility of disintrigating a minority rule in the Southland which would not only be a valued result to the nation at large, but a good thing for the South as well.

"In the vast country North of the Ohio River and west of the Mississippi save Texas, the Democrats have elected less than a score of members to the House, and not a single Senator. They hold only two members on the Pacific Coast, First and Second Districts of California; not a member on the Canadian border, save four in New York; only two in New England, the Tenth and Twelfth in Boston. Republicans won solid delegations in Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, the Dakotas, all the states west of the Mississippi and north of Oklahoma, except in California. They won all but one in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and Missouri, and all but four in New York.

"The outcome of the election carries an interesting story. It spells in unmistakable terms the rebuke of Wilsonism as an un-American effort to override by autocratic methods American rights safeguarded by Constitutional limitation in our organic law. It is a repudiation of Wilson's effort of group control in which entire blocks of votes were sought through official favor as in the Adamson Act. It demonstrates the keenness of the voter to the danger of sovietizing of our industries under the captivating caption of democratization of industry, the best example of which was the Plumb Plan of rail control. It also demonstrated that American labor is not only sound at heart, but independent of dominations from labor officialdom. No man has ever yet delivered the labor vote in this country, nor is it likely ever to be so delivered.

"The enormous Republican plurality was largely due to the woman vote, not altogether because of Republican policy toward woman suffrage or toward progressive measures which appeal to the woman instinct and sense of right, but, in addition, the pronounced dislike of the character of the Cox campaign which was an offense to the refinement of the womanly sense of public service. The composition and character of all Republican meetings which displayed an intelligent enthusiasm and tone of refinement unknown to political campaigns foreshadowed the drift of the woman voter.

"The tremendous vote of confidence given the new administration is not confined to positive favor toward Republican administration. It included a vast mass of our citizenry who were woefully tired of Wilson and demonstrated an ending of the Wilson regime. It also included a pronounced conviction of business America, not confined to employers of labor, who have become properly alarmed over the fateful disintegration of American enterprise, and to an official suspicion that every man who succeeds must be more or less dishonest. It includes a respectable portion of labor which knows that the best insurance against unemployment and low wages is sound business methods where both the rights of labor and capital are respected. In addition, it was a woman's protest against undignified methods of campaigning and to their sense of leadership in America.

"The problems involved in this election are both imminent and commanding. The electorate is not committeed to any particular party. It demands devotion to the country's welfare rather than to party fealty. Parties are mere means to be employed to reach definite ends. The support today may be opposition tomorrow, dependent upon how the party in power treats the problems committeed to it.

"Our first duty is to secure relief from war taxation. This can only be done by getting away from war conditions. Formal peace must be established at the earliest moment, and war laws discontinued. Taxation can be reduced only by reducing the cost of government. The executive and legislative must cooperate to cut this costs to the bone. The war machine must be dismantled by eliminating every war agency not absolutely necessary in peace time.

"The persistence of the frightful government expenditures, which is at least seven or eight times what it was before the war, demands immediate attention and reorganization. If we succeed in saving in the short session what was saved in the earlier sessions of this Congress, we can most probably repeal the excess profits tax and may be able to reduce the upper ranges of the surtax. It is to be hoped this can be done without the substitution of any new form of tax.

"Steps will most likely be taken at an early moment to create a commission composed of members of Congress together with well-known experts on the taxation question, not members of either House to investigate and report on the needs and possibilities of tax revision .

"One of the earliest measures to be enacted and inaugurated in practice is the Budget System, which was vetoed by the President at the close of the last session."

AN APPEAL

To the Republicans of the Country and All Those Who Aided Them:

The Republican success in the 1920 election has been commensurated with the quality of our candidates and the righteousness of our cause.

This success is the partnership accomplishment of all Republicans everywhere and of hundreds of thousands of well-wishers of good government regardless of past party affiliations.

To all of those we now appeal, because it is the mutual responsibility of us all who will share alike in the consequent mutual benefit of good government.

The plan of limiting campaign contributions to $1,000, adopted by your national organization, has left your party unmortgaged.

It has been a most advanced step in placing the business of politics on the highest plane, and has brought an interest on the part of thousands who never before have been concerned with politics.

Some weeks before election it was apparent that the expenses provided for in our budget, with the strictest economy, would exceed the contributions, but we were unwilling either to leave undone any legitimate effort essential to complete success or to change the method of raising money. We were then sure and we are now sure that every Republican desires that the expenses of the campaign be distributed in this manner.

Your presidential campaign this year cost no more that that of 1916, when a dollar went nearly twice as far as it does today.

Four years ago the bulk of the campaign fund came from 750 contributors, while this year the approximately $2,000,000 contributed to date for the presidential election has come from 50,000 givers.

The victory won, the raising of the deficit would be easy, indeed, if your committee were willing to abandon the policy of keeping down the average of contribution. This we are determined not to do. It was a fight of all the people. The result speaks for itself. It lifted a burden from the minds of millions and points the way to better and happier days. We ask now for that additional help from all which is merited both by the successful conclusion of the effort and by the consequent contribution to the welfare of all of our people and the glory of the nation.

Let us now have help from every American who is grateful for the victory and all that it means to the country. It might well be in the nature of a thanksgiving offering for the return to a certainly safe, sane, constitutional progressive government.

Let us by general and generous giving put the seal of approval upon the policy of putting a national administration in power free from any possible embarrassment of special obligation to any man, men or group of men. Let us make the contribution, whether large or small, and whether or not we have heretofore given, commensurate with our means and our appreciation, always within the maximum limit heretofore fixed.

Let us get our names on the corner stone of a sturdier political structure, upon the roll of those who have helped make possible a campaign of which, in methods and result, we may as Republicans and patriots be justly proud.

Most earnestly we urge that this aid be given quickly, that your committee may be enabled to discharge the party's obligations and turn to furthur constructive work in behalf of party and country.

Republican National Com.
WILL H. HAYS, Chairman.

Checks should be made payable to Fred W. Upham, Treasurer or James G. Blaine, Jr., Eastern Treasurer, and sent to the Committee's Office, 19 West 44th Street, New York City, N. Y.

"Our Budget Plan will bring the New Edison this Xmas!"

THIS is the time of the year when our Budget Plan is most helpful. You ought to come in right away and find out what it can do for you.

In the first place, it will put a New Edison beside your Christmas tree, (how the family will rejoice!)

In the second place, it will stretch your Christmas dollar so that you'll hardly feel the purchase.

The Budget Plan treats the New Edison as an essential of life, such as a home, and arranges payments on the sound "time" principle. It combines modern business practice with thrift.

This way of treating a dollar actually makes it go farther. Let us explain how the Budget Plan brings the longed-for New Edison for what an extremely ordinary gift would cost,—and makes 1921 thrift pay for the balance.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists. 75c.

FALAKTO

Mr. Grover Gilliland, a popular and talented student of the Clanton High School is suffering from an attack of pneumonia at his home south of Clanton.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Sandlin deeply sympathize with them in the loss of their little daughter, Verrie, who died last Sunday afternoon. It is deeply sad because Mrs. Sandlin is at Gragg's Hospital and could not be with the little girl during her last illness.

In an automobile wreck on the highway recently when two cars almost collided, Mrs. J. P. Stonecipher sustained a broken collar bone and other injuries. The car turned completely over spilling the five passengers in the ditch on the road-side. The other passengers were unhurt.

Last Sunday afternoon Mr. Erby Lewis and Miss Jettie Adams, not wishing to be any trouble to their friends slipped quietly away to the residence of a neighbor, who happened to have the proper legal authority, and had the solemn ceremony read which created for them a new existence in the holy bonds of matrimony. Immediately they drove to a cozy little home of their own in the neighborhood of Mr. H. W. Lewis', father of the groom.

OAK GROVE COMMUNITY

Everything is quiet around here. The people are almost done gathering their crops.

Dave Williams is visiting relatives in St Clair County.

Jim Cobb is working in Birmingham.

Our literary school is good. Prof. J. W. Anderson is our Principal this year.

Sunday School here is progressing.

Our Singing Society met last Sunday and singing was led by the following, using the 1920 books: Opening song No 141 by little Carl Wilson. Prayer by J. B. Northcutt. Lessons led by Prof. Grant, Prof. Dooley, Maxie Boswell, Lee Grant, L. D. Murphy, Paul Wilson, Miss Lesta Cobb, Miss Flossie Cobb. A beautiful duet was rendered by Messrs. Dooley and Boswell. Then the other directors led lessons again.

The organists were Misses Esta and Eva Atkinson, Annie Boswell, Lee Grant, Ralph Grant, Claudie Murphy, Flossie Cobb.

When we meet to sing God's praises in the right spirit we shall be blessed, for right shall conquer wrong.

SHOULTS

Last week it was impossible to write from this place as the correspondent was away from home the latter part of the week.

We were indeed glad to see the facts concerning the Sunday School Convention held at Pleasant Grove church on the Second Sunday last. Sorry such a few of the people were present. We need more Sunday School Boosters and less Fault Finders.

On last Saturday evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lawrence, Miss Drucilla Lawrence entertained about 30 of her friends in a most delightful manner at a singing. Miss Myrtle McAfee and Mrs. W. P. Hicks were organists during the evening. After many beautiful songs, games were played and every one seemed to have enjoyed the evening so much. Miss Drucilla with her family will move to the Collins Chapel community this week. The many friends and neighbors of this family regret very much to see them move. They will be missed in Sunday School at this place, also missed in literary school. We wish them much success.

Mr. Johin Mitchell of this community has sold his farm to Mr. Fred McGee, and is going to move near Lawley.

Mr. George Hamerick will move this week near Stanton if his wife, who has been sick for some time, still improves. We are sorry to see so many families moving away, and hope the vacant houses will soon be reoccupied.

Sunday School and literary school are still progressing nicely.

Next Sunday the singers of Pleasant Grove church are requested by the Supenintendent to meet early for a 15 minutes song service before Sunday School and preaching service. Everybody be present for preaching Saturday afternoon and Sunday at 11 o'clock.

Miss Betsie Lawley of near Lawley spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hicks. Miss Betsie is 88 years old and works all the time. She is the only member of her family living, except a few relatives in Arkansas. She makes her home with Mrs. Celia Hicks near Lawley.

Miss Eliza Hall spent the last two weeks with her niece, Mrs. T. C. Sneed of Centreville.

Owing to the Teachers Institute held at Bibb County high school last Thursday and Friday, Mr. Hort Walker, Mr. Alsie Maness and Miss Myrtle McAfee, students of this school were at home from Wednesday night until Sunday. They will also be home this week from Wednesday until Sunday on account of Thanksgiving.

We should this year celebrate Thanksgiving as we have never celebrated it before, not only with a feast of Turkey, cranberry sauce and many othr exciting things, but with prayer and thankfulness for the numerous blessings we have received in the past year. Let's be thankful also for those who are toiling every day in the interest of a better world. We have more this year to be thankful for than ever before. We must remember that we can be thankful this year for the accomplishment of the thing that Susan B. Anthony and the heirs of her opinion worked so hard for, and that is political equality—now a thing we enjoy. It is a delightful new version for hundreds of women in the United States, while for hundreds it is nothing but a name.

PILGRIM'S REST

Plantersville, Ala., Nov. 22, 1920.

Dear Editor:

Will you please allow me space for a few lines in your paper? Just telling a few things that have been going on in our country.

One thing worse than all is the poor old farmers with the blues knowing everything they have to sell is so cheap, and knowing how much it cost to produce what little they have got, but it never pays to worry.

We have got a good school at old Pilgrim and good teachers.

Had a box supper at the school house Saturday night, November 20. The crowd was small but anyway everybody had a good time. Mr. Bud Abbott thought he would get a certain box, but he missed it and got two more which cost him some money.

Mr. Martin Chandler and his brother, Frank, have planned a nice trip for Thanksgiving. Going to see some of their old friends at Wetumpka.

NEW HARMONY NEWS

Health of this community is fairly good at present.

Mrs. T. G. Culp has returned home from Montgomery where she underwent a serious operation and is doing nicely.

Mrs. Monroe Headley was a visitor at W. B. Cooper's Sunday.

Mrs. Ernest Surles is visiting relatives in Birmingham.

Mr. George Meeks of Montgomery is visiting friends here.

Mr. O. F. Bates and family visited at F. A. Bates Sunday.

Miss Willie Mae Sheppard visited Miss Rosa Bates Sunday.

Our new school house will soon be completed.

We have an evergreen Sunday School at this place. Everybody is invited to attend.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Genuine Ford Service---and Parts

Insist on genuine Ford parts for your Ford car. Mail order houses, stores and many garages sell imitation—counterfeit parts which have not the quality of the genuine Ford parts, but the Authorized Sales and Service Dealers sell only the genuine Ford-made Ford parts. You are safe with them, while your car is mighty unsafe if repaired with imitation parts. The real Ford parts are made from the same properly heat-treated steel as their counter parts in the Ford car. Every part is heat-treated according to its use. Depending upon the service they perform, Ford parts are tempered to insure the longest life. Tested after almost every operation while being manufactured under Ford supervision. Counterfeit parts range from thirty to seventy-five per cent below the quality of the Ford standard. Don't take chances; demand Fod parts, they're safer. Bring your Ford to us and thus make "assurance doubly sure." If you want a Ford car, truck or Fordson tractor, leave your order without delay, as now we can make fairly prompt delivery—Touring Care, Coupes, Sedans, Runabouts, Trucks and Fordson Tractors. Why not drop in and talk over your wants?

HARRELD STRIKES LUCK IN OKLAHOMA

Interesting Story Gathered On Early Career of Senator-Elect.

Washington, Nov. 20.—Politically speaking, the Republican senator-elect from Oklahoma has veritably "wallowed in luck" considering that only 14 years ago he settled in the new state with but $75 in his pocket. John W. Harreld went to Oklahoma from Morgantown in Kentucky and first located in Ardmore which is the home town of Democratic Congressman Charles D. Carter and where he practiced law for 11 years with no success to brag of. He then moved to Oklahoma City where fortune began to smile upon him through a connection with an oil company, in which he obtained a holding that proved to be most profitable, even though Harreld was not able to put in a large sum of money.

Last year Joseph B. Thompson, who was representing the district in Congress, died and a special election was called to fill the vacancy. Although the district was normally Democratic by about 5,000 Harreld obtained the Republican nomination and was elected over Claude Weaver, his Democratic opponent, by a majority of 708 votes. Harreld ran on an anti-League of Nations platform.

This year to the surprise of his friends, Representative Harreld announced himself a candidate for United States senator against Scott Ferris who had defeated Senator Gore for renomination at the Summer primary. It was generally supposed that Ferris was the one Democrat in Oklahoma who could not be defeated not even in a presidential election year. At any rate it is said that Harreld was about the only Republican in the state who had a hankering to try conclusions with a Democrat as popular as Ferris had heretofore been with the voters. The friends of Ferris thought he was simply invincible after defeating Senator Gore, and they looked upon Harreld with something akin to pity for daring to make the senatorial race against one who had represented his district in Congress for almost 14 years.

Every Drop of Your Blood Should Be Absolutely Pure

Any slight disorder or impurities is a source of danger, as every vital organ of the body depends upon the blood supply to properly perform its functions.

Many painful and dangerous diseases are the direct result of a bad condition of the blood. Among the most serious are Rheumatism, with its torturing pain; Eczema, Tetter, Erysipelas and other disfiguring skin diseases; general debility, which makes the strongest men helpless, and many other diseases are the direct result of impure blood.

You can in a large measure avoid liability to disease by the use of S. S. S., the wonderful blood remedy that has been in constant use for more than fifty years. S. S. S. cleanses the blood thoroughly. It is sold by druggists everywhere.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

There was a good Sunday School last Sunday considering the weather conditions, as 100 were in attendance. The preaching services were only fairly well attended. The word of God is needed here as elsewhere, "Forget not the assembling of thyselves together." Services will be held next Sunday as usual morning 11:00 A. M., evening 7:15 P. M. The Sunbeams and B. Y. P. U. Bands will meet at their usual hour.

The Union Thanksgiving service was fairly well attended. A good service was enjoyed by all who were present. The sum of $8.20 was taken up in the collection which was equally divided among the two orphan institutions of the Methodist and Baptist Churches. For the number present this was a creditable collection.

We cordially invite the general public to all of our services.

P. G. CARTER,
Pastor.

FRIENDSHIP

Health of this community is good at present and everyone seems to be enjoying life. The weather is kindly unpleasant but that doesn't stop our service at Friendship.

Our singing was simply grand Sunday. Rev. W. P. Lowery delivered a very interesting sermon which was enjoyed by everyone present. Mr. James Franklin sang a few songs in the morning, but on account of the preaching hour we didn't sing much untill the afternoon. W. O. Rich opened the singing followed by prayer by Mr. J. Z. Mims.

The directors for the day were W. O. Rich, James Franklin, Akins Collins, J. Z. Mims and Tom Wyatt.. Organists were Misses Alice Wyatt and Thelma Farley.

A very large crowd attended, and we give our thanks to those who so kindly helped us in our singing.

There was also a very large crowd at the service Saturday night.

Miss Lona Thompson spent last week with her parents in Selma.

Miss Mattie Dorminey has been visiting relatives and friends here this week.

Misses Mary Duke, Mattie Dorminey and Mr. J. D. Collins visited Misses Bertha and Nettie Dennis Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Blankenship spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Will Duke.

Miss Bertha Dennis took dinner with Mrs. Collins Sunday.

Miss Lona Thompson spent the noon hour with Miss Mary Duke Sunday.

Mrs. John Gore is visiting relatives in Georgia.

Mr. Lee Wilson from Montevallo was in this community Sunday afternoon.

IN MEMORY

The death angel visited the home of Mr. G. N. Mims Friday night and gently wafted the spirit of his beloved wife home to God who gave it.

She was nursed with the tenderest care, but alas! mortal hands could not relieve her pain but God whispered unto her softly, saying "Come unto Me and I will give you rest."

The earth was adorned with this beautiful flower for only thirty-nine short years when it had to drop and die. Now sorrow and disappointment over shadow this community like a mid-winter's cloud.

How sweet the thought though that a life so pure, full of innocence, full of love, now living happily in the home above.

She leaves a husband, six children and many relatives and friends who will greatly miss her presence here for she was loved by all who knew her.

Rev. M. J. Parrish conducted the funeral services. Her remains were laid in the cemetery at Temple Church to await the resurrection morning when friends and loved ones will all be reunited to part nevermore.

Cheer up Father and Children
Wipe your tear-dimmed eyes,
For Mother is sweetly resting
In her home beyond the skies.

SHOULTS

Rev. J. D. Martin on last Saturday afternoon and Sunday at 11 o'clock, preached in a very impressive manner two sermons. On account of the inclement weather not many were present. Rev. J. D. Martin will not be here next fourth Saturday and Sunday as usual on account of Xmas. He wishes to spend the Christmas holidays at home.

Mrs. W. P. Hicks entertained the members of her Sunday School class at her home on last Saturday afternoon. Many entertaining games were played after which cake and ambrosia was served. Many others with the class were present. All seemed to have a delightful time.

Last Saturday night at about 10 o'clock the residence of Mr. Howard Oden of this community caught on fire and burned down. He saved only a very few things as the greater part of the house was burned up before they were awakened by the roaring of the fire. This is a big loss to Mr. Oden as he had just completed some new additional rooms. We indeed do sympathize with Mr. Oden in this loss. The origin of the fire is unknown. We hope every one that is visited by the committee will send Mr. Oden some help. We should not wait for a committee, but go and take something.

Mr. W. H. Logan of Coopers brought his little son to Clanton Monday for an operation at the Clanton Infirmary.

FALAKTO

Dr. A. D. Scott, a competent veternarian has bought a part of the Greer place and contemplates improving it at once.

Mr. J. P. Stonecipher is erecting a new home just across the highway from his residence which will be occupied by Mr. Geo. Williamson and family.

The enterprising citizens 2 miles south of Falakto have filed a petition with the L. & N R. R. Company asking that Hawkin's Crossing be made a flag station. This is a much needed convenience to the thickly populated community and will greatly facilitate shipping from there to distant markets and give many added advantages in convenience and comfort. The new station is christened "Glendale."

The day before Thanksgiving Mr. and Mrs. Joe Looser invited their friends and neighbors to their home for a "spend the day party." All around the yard could be seen great stacks of oak shingles, kegs of nails, hammers and saws. Very soon they were put to use by a score of men who knew their business, while their wives were busy in the kitchen. A table fairly groaning with good things was spread for them at noon and when the shadows lengthened they fell on a completely covered roof that sheltered thankful hearts beneath. All present enjoyed the day and a feeling of good fellowship strengthened by thus being associated together and a good old custom revived.

Mr. E. D. Hand and family are visiting the home of Mr. J. R. Taylor at Cooper.

Mrs. T. V. Miller is slightly indisposed.

Mr. German Sandlin of Birmingham is visiting his parents this week.

The sun disappeared behind the hills in a blaze of glory. . . . . A lone bird winged its way overhead homeward bound. Two girls stepped out of an office building, the joy of youth in their faces. . . . . An automobile horn honked. . . . . A street car came to a grinding stop. . . . a dozen workers whose duties for the day were over, climbed aboard. . . . . A newsboy yelled "Fi-nul 'Di-shun—All about the Guv'ners speech—Fi-nul Di-shun!"

Martin Crosby paused for just a moment to enjoy it all. He loved it—every honk of the automobile horns—the newsboy's cry—the last ray of sunshine. It was good to be alive at the close of such a day.

A sudden gust of wind tore around the corner of the big office building and whistled down the street. Martin Crosby instinctively buttoned his light overcoat and thrust his right hand in a pocket. This was the first cool day of Winter, and a little woman with the light of love shining in her dark brown eyes had brought Martin's light overcoat out from the land of moth balls, and insisted that he don it.

Martin had smiled as she handed him the coat. He usually smiled when the little brown-eyed woman made suggestions. . . . . She was always making suggestions and always —Martin found them good.

As Martin's hand explored the dark recesses of the pocket, his long, tapering fingers came in contact with a small sticky piece of paper. Slowly the hand brought it to the light. Then a brief smile flickered for just an instant across his face.

Hardly knowing why he did so, he replaced the sticky paper in his pocket. . . . Three minutes later he was on a car—homeward bound—where a brown-eyed woman awaited his coming. Tomorrow he must see about her Christmas present—Christmas was only a short ways off.

Martin knew that he would find the little woman very happy on this nnight, for he had already telephoned her the good news. . . . it was too good to keep all those hours. It was her right to know at the earliest possible moment, for it was as much to her credit—possibly more—than his, that good fortune had at last come their way.

For years Martin had struggled upward. . . . fighting. . . . planning . . . . dreaming. . . . and for years a brown-eyed girl had believed in him—pushed him on when he would have faltered—cheered him up when the world appeared dark and unfriendly.

Finally they had married and the girl helped him still more. She, more than anyone else in the world realized the strength in Martin Crosby. . . . She, more than anyone else knew that he had it in him to succeed.

Starting out in life with a frail body, a very limited education, the road to success had been a hilly one for Crosby. Ofttimes the peaks appeared too steep for his physical strength. . . . But somewhere within the man there was a soul that was just as strong as his body was weak—a soul filled with sunshine—hope and faith. Both in himself. . . . Faith in God. . . . And this coupled with love for the little woman, who believed in him, had driven him on and on from the lowest position in the office of the city's largest wholesale machinery company until just this day at a meeting of the board of directors he had been elected General Manager.

Martin's eyes became suspiciously moist as he thought of what that little woman waiting at home would say as he held her in his arms and told her that his good fortune was due solely to ner unswerving faith in him. . . . to her help. . . . He knew that she would insist that the credit was all his own. . . . And he knew that it wasn't. . . . That made it all the sweeter. . . . her unselfishness. . . . never claiming credit for herself—always insisting that he was the greatest man in the world.

Martin knew that he was far from being the greatest man in the world, but he knew she thought he was. . . . And that was good. . . . Somehow he liked that. . . . Just as he knew that deep within her heart she rejoiced in the knowledge that he knew her equal so far as he was concerned, could not be found in any other woman.

Arriving home it all happened just as Martin knew it would. There was the little scene which other eyes would have profaned. . . . There were the soft, tender words of love intended only for each other's ears. . . .

Morning came. . . . Martin Crosby stirred uneasily on his pillow. . . . For some strange, unfathomable reason his dreams had not been pleasant. . . . He raised his head slightly to glance at the clock. . . . Something on his pillow caught his eye. He gazed more closely. . . . a bright, red spot. . . . Blood!

Amazed and frightened Crosby glanced at his wife. . . . She was sleeping peacefully. . . . Martin coughed. . . . A horrible thought quickly flashed through his mind. . . . He had coughed a great deal lately. . . . especially at night. . . . Once a long time ago a doctor told him he must be careful. . . . "You have a dangerous chest, my boy," the man of medicine had said.

The little brown-eyed woman saw the bright red spot. . . . Of course it frightened her. . . . She insisted that Martin see a doctor. He laughed at her fears, but something within him shrieked a warning.

He saw the doctor. . . . The doctor tinkered with strange instruments. . . . He thumped his chest . . . . He shook his head. "You must have an X-ray made," he said.

The X-ray confirmed the physician's suspicion — tuberculosis. . . . The long, hard effort to succeed. . . . the night work. . . . hasty eating to get back to work. . . . inattention to minor health details. . . . And now Martin Crosby with success in his grasp found himself in the toils of the most merciless of all diseases —the Great White Plague!

Martin Crosby was stunned. Stunned as a man is who sees all he has worked for taken away without warning or without apparent cause. . . . A picture of his struggles flickered through his brain. . . . the encouraging words of little brown-eyed woman rang in his ears. . . . And now it had all gone for naught!

Martin informed his employer of the physician's decision. . . . His employer was a kind-hearted man. . . a man who was very fond of Martin, but the young fellow saw a sudden fear in his friend's face, and he knew of what the other man was afraid— he was afraid that the disease might be transmitted from Martin to himself. Martin Crosby suddenly felt himself to be something unclean—something of which men were afraid as they might be of a leper. . . . He went nome to his wife. . . . And as he told her the story, he knew he was talking to the one person in all the world who would remain by his side, no matter what the odds. . . .

The telephone rang. . . . Martin's employer was at the other end of the line. . . . He had talked the matter over with the other members of the firm. . . . Martin should go West and remain until cured. . . . perhaps two years. . . . then they would see what they could do for him in the store when he returned. . . . There would be a place. Maybe not the place he had worked so hard for—but a place.

Martin shuddered as he heard the words "Go West!" He had heard of the hundreds who had gone West, and out there—far from friends—far from those they loved, had died from loneliness—from wretchedness. His blood ran cold at the thought.

Someone else heard of his trouble. And this someone had a suggestion. The thing for Martin to do was get a job on a farm. Martin knew that the idea was absurd. In the first place there was nothing he could do on a farm, by which he could earn enough to live on. And besides —he knew there were no "light jobs" such as the friend mentioned on farms. He knew that his frail body would not stand the hardship.

There is a certain thing that men do when their backs are to the wall, the reason for which has never been explained. Nine times out of ten when the last hope has fled, most men will pick up some garment which has been cast aside for the time being and rumage through the pockets. . . . Don't ask me why they do this. . . . I don't know. . . . I only know that they do it. . . . The ordinary man may not think he does, but the chances are if he ever feels the solid foundation of hope slipping from beneath his feet, he will unconsciously do that very thing.

And so, Martin Crosby walked to the closet, where his light overcoat was hanging and without any apparent reason ran a hand in one of the pockets. When he withdrew the hand, there was clutched tightly between his fingers a small, sticky paper. He gazed at this for a moment. . . . then turned and said something to his wife. . . . Five minutes later he was on a street car cityward bound.

The kindly-faced gray-haired man leaned slightly forward in his chair and touched Martin Crosby on the arm. "There's nothing for your to worry about," he said, "Our physician says your case is in its incipiency. . . A few months in the sanitarium up on the mountain will put you all right. . . . There is no need for you to go West. . . . You can remain right here near your friends. . . . Your wife can see you as often as she desires. . . . You can be cured. . . easily. And by exercising the proper precautions there is no danger of your transmitting the disease to anyone else."

A few months later Martin Crosby left the mountain Sanitarium of the Tuberculosis Association. . . . A well man. . . . His health better in fact than it had ever been. . . . He had been taught how to live. His little brown-eyed wife was the happiest person in the world as they made their way down the mountainside. . . . together.

And in the city his job was waiting for him. . . . The place as General Manager for the machinery concern. . . . Martin's employer had gladly agreed to hold the place for him when he learned that it was only a matter of months, instead of years. . . . And now Martin was going back to claim the prize for which he and his wife had labored all these years.

Martin Crosby turned in his chair as the door opened and a little girl entered. Without waiting for him to speak, she opened the conversation. "I am selling Christmas Seals," said she, "The money goes to the Tuberculosis Association you know. It's a great work. . . . Thousands are cured of tuberculosis every year through the work of the Association."

Martin smilingly interrupted her. "You bet they are!" he exclaimed enthusiastically. "And it's nearly Christmas again too! A much brighter, happier Christmas this year than last. Things looked pretty dark then, little girl. Sure I'm going to buy seals. I'm going to buy all I can. My wife and I are going to spend all our Christmas money that way this year—and some more besides."

When the little girl had gone Martin took his watch from his pocket and carefully opened it. Securely fastened on the inner lid was the little piece of paper he had taken from his pocket the afternon he left his office to go home to his wife with the good news. . . . the same little piece of paper he had taken from his pocket the day in his despair he had rummaged through the pockets of his overcoat. . . . A Christmas Seal! A Christmas Seal bought at some time, dropped in his pocket and forgotten. . . . Forgotten until the time came for it to play its part in reminding Martin Crosby of the great work of the Tuberculosis Association.

Slowly Martin closed his watch. . just as slowly he reached for his hat and coat. . . .

The wind whistled around the corner of the big office building. . . . Street car bells clanged. . . . Automobile horns honked. . . . Newsboys called their papers. . . . The sun was disappearing behind the Western hills. . . .

Christmas was near again. . . . Happiness had already arrived. . . .

As Martin Crosby boarded a homeward bound car, he was whistling a merry little tune. . . . A brown-eyed woman would be waiting for him. . . . A little woman in whose eyes was the light of love and happiness. . . . No longer did either of them fear the Great White Plague. . .

Martin Crosby opened his watch and again looked at the little paper therein. . . . And his lips uttered a prayer of thankfulness.

The End.

GOOD HEALTH AND.

Tune—"Dixie Land."

I'd like to live in the years hereafter,
Tears will then be turned to laughter.
What a day, what a day, what a day
That will be—

When there is no tuberculosis
And no one takes the doctor's doses,
What a day, what a day, what a day
That will be—

CHORUS:
Some day there'll be no T. B.
Hooray! Hooray!
The T. B. germ can squirm and squirm.
He's doomed to get the G. B.
Hooray! Hooray!
Some day there'll be no T. B.
Hooray! Hooray!
Some day there'll be no T. B.

CLUB WOMEN AID IN CHRISTMAS SEAL AND HEALTH BOND SALE. . . . .GREAT ENTHUSIASM.

Now as always, the Alabama Federation of Women's Clubs are taking part in anything which has to do with bettering living conditions for the State, and every woman's club in the State has organized its committee to take part in the sale of Christmas Seals and Health Bonds. . .

The women entered the fight the minute it opened, and there will be no let up on their part until the sale closes.

The people of Alabama know from past experiences that when the women start after anything they get it, and they also know that this time will be no exception.

Mrs. H. E. Pearce, of Birmingham, is well pleased over the manner in which the women throughout the state have taken hold of the work, and is confident that they will break all previous records. This is the first time the womens clubs, as a whole, have undertaken the sale of Christmas Seals, but it is known that they have been successful at everything they have ever undertaken, and equally as well known, that they will make a wonderful record on this occasion.

COUNTY HEALTH OFFICERS.

Doing Great Work In Modern Health Crusade. Assisting in Putting It In All Schools.

Alabama may well be proud of her excellent County Health Officers who are assisting in every way possible in putting the Tuberculosis Association Modern Health Crusade in all the schools, . . . While it is true that this work comes under the supervision of the County Superintendents of Education and the teachers, they are glad to have the assistance of the County Health officers whose advice to the children in the carrying out of the program is very essential. . . . Many of the County Health Officers have not only devoted considerable time to placing the Crusade in the schools, but have aided materially in the organization of committes for the sale of Christmas Seals and Health Bonds.

The County Nurses are also doing a wonderful work, and it is the plan of the Association to have a nurse in every county of the state within a short time. Many counties already have these nurses and once a county has such a nurse, that county will always have one, for it only takes a short time for a nurse who understands tuberculosis to demonstrate her worth.

TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION PLAYS NEEDED ROLL IN HEALTH WORK.

Illinois which has for some time past been devoting considerable attention to health conditions within its borders finds that the Tuberculosis Association is a great power for good as is evidenced by the following article by Mrs. F. L. Stevens, Secretary-Treasurer of the Champaign County, Illinois, Tuberculosis League published in the Urbana (Illinois) Daily Courier.

Antiquated ideas and unfounded beliefs about tuberculosis began to give way to intelligent thought and practice in this country about the year 1911, when an educational health campaign was inaugurated, having particularly to do with tuberculosis. Lecturers, teachers, literature and exhibitions were used fully and freely to spread the knowledge that while tuberculosis is one of the most prevalent, it is also, in its early stages, one of the most easily cured ailments.

It was during this period of nation wide activity in health matters that the Champaign County Tuberculosis League was organized. ts officers, Judge J. O. Cunningham, president; Dr. C. W. Johnson, vice-president; Supt. W. W. Earnest, secretary and treasurer, were men whose breadth of view, keen sympathies and intelligent purpose gave to the organization an impetus that has made it an important factor in all health and allied problems in the county.

Started With Visiting Nurse.

The league is still enriched by the devoted services of Dr. Johnson, who has also served as its president and board member, and by Superintendent Earnest, but the splendid labors of Judge Cunningham are now an invaluable memory. The officers of the league have ever been men of broad vision, who have devoted time, skill and energy to public welfare. Of these, special mention should be made of Prof. T. J. Burrill, whose community service will ever be a rich heritage; of Prof. S. A. Forbes, James Boland, Prof. H. A. Harding, Prof. E. J. Townsend, Dr. W. F. Burres, at this time president of the organization, and Dr. W. E. Schwengerdt, vice president.

From its beginning, the organization has maintained a visiting nurse, whose aim has been to detect unsuspected cases of tuberculosis in time to ceck and cure the disease before it has reached the period of infection; and to teach those affected how to care for themselves so as not to become a menace to their families and associates. Dr. Carrie Noble White, visiting inspector, was the first appointee of the board of managers. In 1916 Dr. Maude E. Nichols, a trained nurse and a graduate in medicine, was appointed to succeed Dr. White. Dr. Nichols' devoted service is recognized and appreciated by both those who have benefited by her care and by those who have followed the results of her labors.

Movement For Sanitarium.

In 1916 the needs of a tuberculosis sanitarium, where consumptives may have scientific care and treatment, became a matter of public interest. By a vote of the people a tuberculosis sanitarium for Champaign county was decided upon and the following appointed to a sanatorium board: Dr. Charles B. Johnson, James T. Boland and Prof. Stephen A. Forbes. The sanatorium is not yet realized, but progress has been made. The board of supervisors for the county have made generous appropriation from time to time—special mention may be made of an appropriation of $10,000 for a sanatorum site; of the maintenance of a visiting nurse, and of an appropriation for a tuberculosis survey. A special committee on tuberculosis from the board of supervisors recently elected consists of Messrs. Gray, Mohr, Singbusch, Holl, Van Vleck.

During the entire existence of the league, and the latter in co-operation with the sanatorium board, a dispensary and clinic has been maintained. Miss Florence A. Pinkston and Miss Alice Burnham, both registered nurses, hold clinics at the dispensary, Imperial Building, Champaign, on Wednesdays and Saturdays of each week from 1 to 2 o'clock. Since June, 1918, 109 patients have been examined by city doctors who have given volunteer service. Since June 1918, the sanatorium board has sent five patients at county expense to state sanatoriums for treatment. The nurses have made 1891 calls upon tubercular patients, which added to other visits made a total of 2,631. Special mention should be made of visits to mothers of young children, with instruction in the care and feeding of babies.

Work Extended.

The distribution of literature pertaining to tuberculosis, care of the child and parental care has been a feature of the work of the visiting nurse. Fully 40,000 paper napkins have been furnished to patients who are expectorating.

The county survey shows 254 cases of tubercular disease, 125 of which are located in Champaign and Urbana. The 254 cases discovered give only a partial view of the prevalence of the disease since 32 cases were reported by the Urbana exemption board in the medical examination of the first draft. Since none of the names of this group of cases were on any of the other lists of patients gives rather conclusive evidence that there is a large amount of latent or incipient tuberculosis in the county not known to physicians and not reached by survey methods.

Wasted Lives

Tuberculosis kills producers—chiefly men and women between the ages of 15 and 45.

It claims workers—active men and women in the homes, the office and the shop.

It causes 150,000 deaths in the United States every year.

It costs the United States in dollars and cents about $500,000,000 annually.

More than 1,000,000 persons in this country are suffering from active tuberculosis right now.

Most of this waste could be prevented.

Tuberculosis menaces every community, every home and every individual.

And yet it is curable and preventable.

It is spread largely by ignorance, carelessness and neglect.

The National Tuberculosis Association and its 1200 affiliated state and local organizations wage a continuous winning war on tuberculosis.

The work of these organizations is financed chiefly by the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals.

Buy and Use

Tuberculosis Christmas Seals.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE TO BE SUCCESS.

Workers Eenthusiastic—All Records to Be Broken.

All records will be broken in the Christmas Seal Sale put on by the Alabama Tuberculosis Association, commening December first, in the opinion of those who have studied the situation and it is anticipated that every person in the State will buy the Christmas Seals and Health Bonds.

People have now come to realize that in buying Christmas Seals they are not giving anything. They are merely buying health insurance for themselves and families and the Christmas Seal Sale should not be considered in the nature of a drive to raise money for unfortunates across the seas, for it is nothing of the kind.

There isn't a man, woman or child in Alabama who isn't in danger of contracting tuberculosis so long as there are people in the State who have the disease and it is to cure those who already have it and prevent others from having it that this money is being raised.

Every penny a person pays out for Christmas Seals is just that much of a guarantee against himself or some dear one being caught in the clutches of the Great White Plague.

Alabama was away down the list last year in the sale of Christmas Seals. It is felt that the State will make a better showing this year.

Christmas Seal Sale Now on Buy!

COMMANDER BOOTH INTERESTED

Salvation Army To Aid In Seal Sale.

The Salvation Army ever ready to assist in all worthy causes has agreed, according to Dr. George Eaves, to aid in the 1920 Christmas Seal Sale. In speaking of this Dr. Eaves said:

"We are pleased to announce that the Salvation Army will cooperate in a definite way with the Christmas Seal Sale in every city where they have a corps or outpost.

"Commander Evangeline Booth, of the Salvation Army, has issued instructions to all officers, staff members, cadets and other salaried workers of the Salvation Army from the Atlantic to the Pacific, numbering between 30,000 and 40,000 men and women, to participate definitely in the Christmas Seal Sale. The participation of the Salvation Army is as broad and general as the individual local situation in each community will warrant.

"In general, however, Commander Booth has definitely stipulated that Wednesday evening, December 8, and all day Thursday, December 9, shall be set aside as periods when the Salvation Army forces shall lay particular stress upon tuberculosis and the Christmas Seal Sale. Throughout the United States the Wednesday night street or open-air meeting of the Salvation Army Corps in all of the more than 800 cities in which the Army operates will be devoted to tuberculosis and to the sale of seals.

"On Thursday the paid personnel of the Army will be at our disposal in any other way we may wish as, for example, the manning of booths, the distribution of literature, personal solicitations, etc. These men and women in uniform are ours to serve. Detailed arrangements for service in each community should be worked out with the particular staff officers in command. These officers are being instructed from headquarters in New York and from provincial headquarters in Chicago and San Francisco, and are also being urged and directed in every way possible through the "War Cry."

"In addition to this co-operation Commander Booth is definitely requesting each member of the Salvation Army to set aside 25c a week for a suggested period of a month or so to be used for the purchase of Christmas Seals. Considering that the workers in the Salvation Army are generally paid very meagre salaries, the sacrifice incident to the fulfillment of this request from the Commander is conspicius and should set an example to others."

"DEAR SANTA: PLEASE MAKE MOTHER WELL."

Christmas morning this year will dawn bleak and gray for thousands of little kiddies, whose only Santa Claus will be the stalking spectre of Tuberculosis, exacting his toll of 150,000 lives this year in our country alone.

Can we—can you—reflect on our Christmas Spirit witr a sense of righteousness if we have failed to include Christmas Seals with our gifts?

Tune—"Smiles"

There are germs that make you sniffle,
There are germs that make you sneeze,
There are germs that bring you influenza,
And that spread all kinds of dread disease,
There are germs that steal away life's roses
And that lie in wait for you and me,
But the germ whose special scalp we're after
Is the germ that they call T. B.

There's the cent you spend for candy,
There's the cent you spend for gum.
There's the cent you put aside toward thrift stamps.
By and by you'll have a tidy sum.
There's good sense that makes you save your pennies,
For the things that have a value real
And the cent that has the greatest power,
Is the one spent for a Christmas seal.

Forces Organized and in the Field

Work of Selling Christmas Seals and Health Bonds Under Headway.

The Christmas Seal and Health Bond Sale is fully organized in this section of the state and reports drifting in indicate that more seals will be sold this year than ever before.

The sale of the Health Bond is somewhat of a new departure, but it is understood that these are being rapidly disposed of, many people wanting one or more of the bonds in addition to the stamps they purchase to put on their letters.

It has possibly occurred to but few people that their letters which go out over the country to other people at this season of the year are more or less an index to the writer's character. . . . Yet such is the case. . . . It may be that some good people will not buy the stanps . . . but if any good man or woman fails to buy Christmas Seals it will be because he or she has not had the opportunity, and, to dig right into the soul of the matter—and it has a soul; a big one—there isn't a person in the state who hasn't an opportunity of buying the seals, and a Christmas Seal on a person's letter is a pretty good recommendation to the person to whom that letter is sent. . . . It shows that the writer is a person with a heart. . . . and that is the kind of person most people want to receive letters from. . . . And, if the party receiving the letter hasn't brought the Christmas Seals, when he sees them on the letters coming to him, he will at once remedy that defect by buying some to go on his own. . . . Thus the good work goes on. . . . Every person, therefore, who buys Christmas Seals will, by putting the Seals on his letters, help the Tuberculosis Association to sell more. Everyone is therefore urged to buy Christmas Seals and put them on every letter they mail—put them also on Christmas packages. . . . There isn't a man or woman in the world who won't feel better over receiving your package if the Christmas Seal is on it . . . live testimony of the fact that the person who remembered them also remembered humanity . . . which after all is about all we are put here for. . . . Christ lived on this earth . . . suffered on it, and finally died on the cross for humanity. . . . Surely we can spend a little money for the same cause, especially when every cent we possess or ever will possess comes from the Father whose children we all are.

Nothing we possess is ours. . . . It is only entrusted to our care and the manner in which we handle it should be given careful consideration.

BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS AND HEALTH BONDS.

Keep your conscience clear.

Do your duty. . . . And no one else will have to inform you when that has been done. You will know!

ALABAMA NOW BUYING CHRISTMAS SEALS AND HEALTH BONDS — ENTIRE STATE ENGAGED IN GOOD WORK.

Reports from Alabama Tuberculosis Headquarters in Birmingham, are to the effect that the Christmas Seal and Health Bond Sale is now on throughout the State . . . .People appear more enthusiastic this year than ever before, says State Headquarters, and it is felt that every man, woman and child in Alabama will not fail to take advantage of this opportunity to aid in the fight against tuberculosis.

There are 50,000 cases of tuberculosis in Alabama. This plague must be wiped out. It takes money to do it. And it is to get this money that the Seals and Bonds are being sold.

Every county is fully organized for the sale. There is a strong rivalry on among the various counties as to which shall sell the greatest number. This section of the State might as well have that honor as any other. It's entirely up to the people living here.

PRESIDENT WILSON ENDORSES CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE.

Believes In Work Of Tuberculosis Association.

President Wilson expresses himself in no unmistabeable manner as to whether or not he believes the people of America should assist the Tuberculosis Association.

His letter follows:

25 October, 1920.

THE WHITE HOUSE,
WASHINGTON, D. C.

My dear Doctor Hatfield:

I cannot too often express my profound interest in the work being done to check tuberculosis. My interest in the movement is very great and lasting and I wish for it the most complete success. I hope that the little stamps that you are seeking to sell will find millions of purchasers.

Cordially and sincerely yours.

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE.

The Christmas Seal Sale of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association for Chilton County will be started in a few days. It is hoped that the people will co-operate in the buying of Seals and thus lend their aid to the splendid work that is being done in fighting tuberculosis in Alabama.

W. M. Wyatt, Editor of The Union-Banner is the Seal Sale Chairman for Chilton County. The Ladies Clubs of Clanton have agreed to help in the Sale campaign, and committees from among those ladies will be organized and ready to start the sale in a few days.

Committees and boosters for the sale will be organized in the Towns of Thorsby, Jemison and Verbena, in order to give the citizens there a chance to co-operate in this good cause.

Readers of the Union-Banner this week will find a great amount of the space given to a description of the work of the Tuberculosis Association. We urge you to take special note of those articles, and lend your help in bringing Chilton County up to a full measure of her duty in supporting the work through purchase of the Christmas Seals.

J. Stealey Jones of Cooper was a visitor to Clanton on Monday. Mr. Jones is rather a pertinent talker, and we don't suppose he ever heard or saw anything in his life which he could not readily match with a story or some remark fitted to the occasion. While here Monday he called on the Editor. As this was the first time we had seen him since November 2, we naturally drifted into a discussion of the results of the election. Mr. Jones said he blamed the Democrats themselves for their overwhelming defeat, which he stated reminded him of this story: A young man had been regularly and faithfully courting his sweetheart for many evenings. The courtship had reached the advanced stage, getting him into deeper water than he had ever been before. Finally one evening as they were parting after their tryst, he thought he must surely have a kiss. He had never kissed a girl in his life. He drew his loved one up close, planting a fervent kiss upon her rosy cheek, whereupon he was overcome and fainted. After he had regained his normal poise his girl looked at him rebukingly and said: "You needn't blame me John. You did it yourself."

Come-hear Rachmaninoff on the New Edison

RACHMANINOFF has not only made RE-CREATIONS for the New Edison. He has also made recordings for one of the standard talking-machines.

We are glad to announce that these talking-machine recordings may now be heard. We want you to hear them—and compare! Determine for yourself which gives you the real Rachmaninoff.

Let us play Rachmaninoff's Edison RE-CREATIONS for you. Mark how clear, how true the piano tone. See how every note in his runs, every accent in his interpretation, every shade in his pedalling is perfectly RE-CREATED.

This was proved by a test made at Mr. Rachmaninoff's home in New York City. He played the Second Hungarian Rhapsodie (Liszt) in direct comparison with the RE-CREATION of his performance by the New Edison. The absolute fidelity of the RE-CREATION to the artist's original peformance astounded the listeners.

Make the Rachmaninoff comparison. It will guide you right in selecting your Christmas phonograph.

Ask also about our Budget Plan

It brings your New Edison for Christmas without squeezing your pocketbook. Remember, too, that, in buying a New Edison now, you are virtually buying a before-the-war-value with an after-the-war-dollar. The price of the New Edison has increased less than 15% since 1914, and a portion of this increase is war tax. "Edison stood the gaff" to keep his favorite invention within the reach of every one who loves beautiful music.

MILCH COWS FOR SALE—Two good, fresh, milch cows. Price reasonable. May be seen at Mrs. W. L. Honeycutt's place near Union Grove. 11-25-2t pd.

Miss Margaret Wood, a former popular teacher in the Clanton Grammar school, was a visitor to friends here last Sunday.

IN MEMORY

On November 14 the death angel visited our home and took from us my dear grandmother. She was only sick a short time. All was done for her that loving hands and physician could do, but God saw best and had prepared a better home for her and His will must be done.

She was the mother of seven children. One was taken from her ten years ago to that glorious home and now she has gone to meet her darling son there where there will be no more parting with them. She leaves a husband, six children, forty grandchildren, five great grandchildren and a host of relatives and friends to mourn her loss, but we know she is at rest and we must try to live to meet her in that greater world where we shall part no more.

Grandmother was 73 years 2 months and 24 days old and had lived a member of the Methodist church for 30 years. Her body was layed to rest at New Salem cemetery on Monday, November 15, at 2:00 P. M., the funtral services were conducted by Rev. A. C. Wells.

A loved one from us is gone;
A voice that is still
A chair is vacant in our home
That never can be filled.
Sleep on dear grand mother, weep not for her dear grand father for she is at rest in that heavenly home above where there is always peace and joy and love.

Her loving grand daughter,
ATTICE FARRIS.

Ex-County Treasurer, J. Bice, now of Montevallo, was among the visitors to Clanton Monday. Some months ago Mr. Bice was seriously injured by an accident at his saw mill in which he was run over by a heavily loaded lumber wagon. His recovery has been slow but he is about to get back to normal now. For the past few weeks he has been visiting at Ensley. He is now at home with his sons at their mill near Montevallo.

There will be a box supper at this place Wednesday night, December 22, 1920.

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

PERSONALS

Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Owens of Oriskany Falls, N. Y. arrived at Thorsby Monday P. M. having driven all the way from northern New York in their car. Your correspondent is advised that Mr. and Mrs. Owens will make Thorsby their home. Mr. Owens is a Congregational minister and will be engaged in Sunday School work, covering the States of Alabama and Georgia. Again Thorsby has cause to congratulate herself. Of all the fine places of residences in Alabama and Georgia Thorsby stands out upon investigation as the most desirable place for the good people to locate in. We extend to them a most cordial welcome to our state and county and to Thorsby. Rev. Owens was a schoolmate, class mate and room mate of Rev. J. M. Graham some years ago in Atlanta, Georgia.

Mr. R. W. Owens, stated that he found a piece of road in Chilton County to be as good as any he had traveled on while some of the road in Autauga County was as bad as any he had seen.

On last Saturday night Mrs. J. E. Biggs entertained a number of guests at cards. The prize for the highest score was awarded Mr. C. S. Howard, while the Booby prize was won by Mrs. Biggs. A delightful time was enjoyed and delightful refreshments were served. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Reagan, Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Howard, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hanson, W. M. Parnell, and Miss Naemi Turnquist.

Last Friday afternoon the Ladies Guild of Thorsby, enjoyed the hospitality of Mrs. C. H. Thomsen. Quite a number of members and friends of the guild were present. Several new members were taken in at this meeting and several applicants to be voted in at the next meeting. We hope that all the ladies of Thorsby will join this splendid orgnization and help boost the work which it is doing.

Miss Hattie Davenport of Birmingham spent Sunday with her parents.

Mrs. Stephen Pittman of Montgomery, is visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Horn.

Mrs. Emma Adams of Birmingham made a visit to our city Sunday.

The big sale of Pate Bros. at Thorsby comes to a close next Saturday, when they will give away the $100 Luxatone Phonograph. Be there with your tickets. You may be the lucky one.

On Tuesday last the members of the Ladies Guild, with some friends, met at the home of Mrs. J. H. Goddard and completed three quilts. One a nice wool quilt which is to be sold at the bazaar that the ladies will hold on Satiurday, December 11, at the Thorsby Hardware Store .

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR WORK IN THORSBY

The Congregational Church of Thorsby boasts neither numbers nor wealth, but it has some things worth while, and one of the things of which it is proud is its Young Peoples Society. The meeting last Sunday evening was the best we have had this year. The topic was Home Missions.

Reports were given by the young people of conditions and needs in every section of this great land of ours. Talks were made on the immigration problem of the East, West and South Many other needs were brought before the meeting in a very vivid way. We believe that more such meetings should be held in every church. For we know that the future holds in store great problems for our young people.

If we want the young people of our Southland to take on the task with zeal, courage and faith we must help them on in their endeavor to get the vision and inspiration. Surely in these societies of theirs is the one place where we, by work and prayer, can aid them and cause them ever to feel that we are with them in all good work.

PROGRAM

Parent Teacher's Association of Thorsby City School, City School Building, Friday evening, December 3, 7:30.

1. Devotional Exercises, Rev. J. W. Davenport.
2. Betttr Sanitation for our school, Miss Mae Stoddard. General discussion.
3. Recent Health Inspection of our school children and some findings, Mr. C. M. Williams. General discussion.
4. How many parents give better cooperation with teachers? Discussion led by Rev. J. M. Graham.
5. Some values in organized play, Miss Bertha Littleton.

All parents and friends of our school are earnestly solicited to be present.

THE HELEN KELLER LITERARY SOCIETY GIVES PLAY.

The Helen Keller Literary Society gave a very interesting and instructive entertainment last Saturday night, November 27th, entitled, "The Pilgrims and Their Journeys."

The entertainment was opened by a grand march led by "Liberty" (Miss Bessie Hughes) followed by all the cast in costume. The cast included Indians, Pilgrim men and women, and children also such celebrites as Pastor Robinson, Governor Carver and Miles Standish. We were shown in the first and second acts, the scenes being laid in Leyden, Holland, where the Pilgrims were leading a quiet and peaceful lives of work and industry. They were endeavoring to keep their children from copying the Dutch manners, customs and ideals. It further pictured how they were printing and shipping books of their religion back to England, who then demanded the arrest and imprisonment of these usurpers, as they called it, of religion. The government of Holland regretfully conceded to the stand England took in the matter, to the amazement and alarm of the Hollanders, who resolved to go to America where they can worship God as they pleased. The next scene pictured the very interesting life they lead in America and closed with a tableau of all the cast, with Liberty in the center. As final they sang "America, The Beautiful."

The play was under the direction of Miss Emily Elsworth.

The big sale of Pate Bros. at Thorsby comes to a close next Saturday, when they will give away the $100 Luxatone Phonograph. Be there with your tickets. You may be the lucky one.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Peterson of Marbury spent Sunday in Thorsby visiting their parents.

THANKSGIVING AT THE COUNTY ALMS HOUSE

For several years the people of Thorsby have remembered the inmates at the Chilton County Poor farm on Thanksgiving day, and following the custom of past years, Mr. Miller, the manager, last Wednesday afternoon, took away with him from here, a large goods box filled with food, apples, oranges and candy for the inmates of the farm. Following on Thursday afternoon a company of some sixty or more, made up of students and teachers of Thorsby Institute, and the Sunday School class of Mrs. G. F. Harper, visited the poor farm, and there held a song and prayer service to help gladden their hearts. We hope that the gifts and visit made the day a little brighter for those people who cannot receive all the blessings of life that we do.

UNION THANKSGIVING SERVICE

This service was participated in by all the churches of Thorsby, being held at the Baptist church. All the ministers of the town took part in the programme, the sermon being delivered by Rev. J. M. Graham. He again in his masterly way presented to the people thoughts to inspire each and every one. A special musical program was prepared and rendered under the direction of Mrs. Nottage. An unusually large gathering was in attendance. An offering for the suffering Armenians was taken, which totaled almost twenty dollars.

Mr. Albert Anderson, who is at present located at West Point, Ga., spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Magne Anderson.

On Saturday night, December 4th., at 7:45 o'clock, at Bates Hall, an entertainemnt will be given by the Queen Esther Sunday School Class of girls, of the Congregational Church.

Tickets will be sold this week and it is hoped that as many as possible will buy the tickets and will help the young ladies in raising the funds which they desire for the Church and School work.

We are informed that Mr. W. H. Goodgame has purchased another outfit of machinery for the planing mill that he is rebuilding. The reconstruction work is now in progress, and it will not be very long before the wheels will again hum and lumber will be moving in and out of Thorsby as before. We told Goodgame that one could not keep a good man down, and "Bill" is proving himself to be the good man.

The large storage and cold plant has been completed and filled with ice. Hogs are being bought from all over the county and we are informed that Mr. Legg has been in Nashville where he purchased several cars of hogs to be shipped here. As soon as the hogs arrive here they will be killed and placed in the cold storage plant, awaiting their shipment in the form of sausage, Hams, Bacon, salt sides, etc. We hope, in the future, to be able to give the readers a full report of the activities of this growing concern.

DRECO GETS OUR SINCERE THANKS

Mother and Daughter are Relieved of Stomach Trouble, Indigestion Gastritis, Constipation and Dizzy Spells.

"Both my daughter Kate and myself have been taking Dreco, the root and herb remedy, and we are very thankful for the benefits it gave us," declared Mrs. S. J. Byers, the highly esteemed lady of Route No. 4, Birmingham, Ala.

"Our troubles seemed to be just alike, for both of us were constipated, and had to take pills or salts all the time to keep the bowels moving. If we would forget to take something every night, the next day we would be bound up, and have headaches and dizzy spells. Our food lay heavy and gave us a lot of pain, and the gas would bloat our stomach terribly, and gave a very uncomfortable feeling. Backache often caused me much suffering and it was an effort for me to bend over.

"Three bottles of Dreco have given positive relief to both of us, for we now eat anything we want and never have that gas nor pains in the stomach, nor dizzy spells. The headache has all gone and I have gained ten pounds. Dreco sure did the work for us alright."

Dreco does not contain any iron, potash, mercury or harmful minerals of any kind. Constipation quickly yields to the Dreco treatment, even when it has been of long standing. Sluggish liver become active, and backaches and rheumatism soon disappear.

All druggists now sell Dreco and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Company.

REMEDIAL LAWS ARE BEING URGED ON CONGRESS.

Washington, Nov. 29—Although Congress does not reconvene until a week from to-day, its leaders, now assembled here, are being bombarded with demands for early remedial legislation by agricultural and business interests.

Representatives of those interests have been informed by Republican and Democratic leaders alike that there is little likelihood of Congress finding time during the next three months to do much more than pass appropriation bills.

Until they have consulted with the President-elect upon his return from Panama the Republican leaders will not attempt, however, to complete their program for the approaching short session, they say.

A number of Republican Senators are planning to introduce bills after Congress opens which they state are urgently required by the country's agricultural interests.

Several Senators from the midwest declared they intended to support the Kenyon-Kendrick bill for the regulation of the packers. Thi measure is a hold-over from the last session, is on the short calendar as unfinished business, and will therefore have the right of way when the Senate begins the consideration of legislation. Senator Kenyon, Republican, of Iowa, one of its authors, declares he intends to press it to a vote, despite the opposition he anticipates it will incur.

Unless the Treasury Department asks to revive the War Finance Corporation to facilitate movement of the country's crops and to relieve the financial situation about which farmers are complaining, Senator Calder, Republican, of New York, will introduce a resolution calling upon it to do so, he says.

Senator Capper, Republican, of Kansas, who states he will accept the Kenyon-Kendrick bill, has prepared a bill "to stop gambling in bread and other esesntial food suplies," he announced.

"I will shoot this bill on the first day of the coming session," Senator Capper says.

"We must put an end to grain gambling on boards of trade. I am not advocating, and never have advocated, doing away with the exchanges and threir legitimate activities. What I am after is to stop the gamblers and protect producers of farm products."

Tthe Senate Finance and House Ways and Means Committees are planning to give attention to the taxation and tariff questions, members said, but aside from conductiong hearings they indicated thty did not believe anything could be done to meet the situation until the next Congress meets in March or April.

How a prospective mother prepared for baby's coming

Of all the vital adventures in life, the birth of a baby is the climax of nature's most wonderful evolution.

During this period, nature is supposed to be preparing the internal organism of a woman for a safe and speedy delivery; but it is more the exception than the rule when nature, unaided, performs her part at the crisis in a manner to relieve pain and contribute to comfort.

"I was afraid," writes a prospective mother, "until an experienced mother told me about MOTHER'S FRIEND,"

"—but now I cannot recommend MOTHER'S FRIEND too highly for I know it helped me wonderfully, and I can almost say my baby was born without pain. At the present time I am using it again, as I do not want to go thru the ordeal without it."

Three generations of prospective mothers have used MOTHER'S FRIEND. When gently applied, during the period of expectancy, it soothes the fine net-work of nerves, lubricates the broad, flat, abdominal muscles and prepares the way for an easier, quicker and practical delivery.

For valuable booklet—"MOTHERHOOD and The BABY"—free, fill in coupon below and mail direct to the makers of MOTHER'S FRIEND.

WARNING: Avoid using plain oils, greases and substitutes—they act only on the skin and may cause harm without doing good

Women and Health

Too many women, unfortunately, suffer in health, hence in loss of happiness, thru conditions or irregularities peculiar to their sex which might easily be relieved, with a consequent restoration of health and all that it means. To every woman suffering from such troubles we advise the use of Dr. J. Bradfield's Female Regulator, as a tonic of great value. This remedy, for women only, has been sold for more than 50 years, and is today, as always, depended upon for good results. At all druggists in $1.00 bottles. TRY IT.

WEAK, NERVOUS

Mr. Enoch Moore, of Oconee, S. C., tells how Ziron helped him: "I was nervous, and my limbs seemed to ache as though I was scared—or some such feeling, I can hardly describe it. I would have weak "trembles." I was sallow, had a draggy, worn feeling; didn't rest well at night. I read of Ziron and thought if it had helped others it might do the same for me. I knew I could at least try it. I began using

ZIRON

The Scientific Iron Tonic

and very shortly I felt better, ate and slept more, and the weak, nervous feeling gradually left me. It was a tonic—a builder—I needed, and Ziron seemed to hit the spot."

If Mr. Moore had not been benefited by the first bottle of Ziron he took, he could have gotten his money back, for Ziron is sold by reliable druggists everywhere on a money-back guarantee.

Insist upon Ziron Iron Tonic. When you need Ziron, there's nothing else as good, so refuse imitations and substitutes.

Ask your druggist for Ziron. Accept no substitutes. ZJ.3

"THE PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE."

By Jessie L. Marriner.

One of the most valuable assets of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association in its campaign against the spread of this dread disease is the work of the public health nurse. She visits reported cases at the request of the Health Officer and gives instruction to the patient and family on methods of caring for the afflicted person in suca a way as to avoid spread of the disease to those in daily contact with him. She supervises the hygienic treatment of the patient, shows how to build a suitable fresh-air shack or transform a second-floor bedroom window into a fresh-air sanitarium; she advises as to diet and may demonstrate methods of preparation of digestable and appetizing meals for the sick; she keeps a watchful eye up the other members of the family and urges all of them to seek the service of a physician for expert examination and advice as to the best means of keeping up to par physically and thus increasing their powers of resistance of the tubercle bacillus and all other predatory germs.

At the first appearance of lassitude, loss of weight or disturbance of the digestive processes these daily contacts are brought under still closer supervision by physician and nurse, their occupation investigated and so far as humanly possible the entire round of their daily routine regulated with a view to ensuring their well-being.

The care of babies and young children in the same house with a tuberculous person is properly made a major concern of the visiting nurse since it is the opinion of scientists that in a very high percentage of all cases the seed is sown in infancy or early childhood and awaits only favorable conditions for its development; common examples of such conditions are lowered vitality as a result of undernourishment or faulty condition of the blood due to the ravages of parasites like the hookworm or infections such as malaria and syphilis.

At a recent conference of the American Child Hygiene Association in St. Louis, discussion of this subject brought from an eminent authority an account of the infection with tuberculosis of a baby in his family who was exposed for only one-half hour upon the lap of a person suffering from the disease.

The protection of infants from accidental exposure to infectious material from the bodies of their grownup care-takers is both a science and an art which has been too long neglected by our system of public education; every boy and girl in the Grammar School should know the facts brought out in a government report during the war, namely that, "being a baby" is a far more dangerous occupation than that of a soldier on active service in the fire line of battle. In the absence of any attempt to impart this vital fund of information to the individual in his impressionable years the public health nurse appears as an eleventh hour aid to the ignorant and attempts to teach the family the very things that are nevessary to the present and future well-being of its youngest. This means individual instruction for every member of the family or rather conversion of each to the modern doctrines of baby culture frequently the efforts of the nurse are rendered futile and of no avail because of failure to successfully proselytize the grandparents of the baby and win them over to enlightened methods of feeding, bathing, airing and protection from unnecessary handling or contact with grown-ups, but even so the public health nurse is the most effective agent we have for spreading the gospel of a new day for the baby. She comes with her hands ready for service; she wins the confidence of the family and when she points out that every year numbers of babies die in that town who might have been saved by intelligent care and that the lives of a number of mothers are lost every year because of lack of adequate medical attention and nursing care at childbirth, she gains a respectful hearing; if she goes further and assures the family that what is happening in their town is being repeated in every town in their county and that the more rural sections suffer proportionately the greater loss, the most complacent among them will become concerned; if she mentions the fact that of sixteen of the so-called civilized countries which have been keeping accurate records of births and deaths for a long time, fourteen show fewer deaths of mothers and five show fewer deaths of babies under one year than our own United States, and that actually more women die in the United States, between the ages of fifteen and forty-five, from causes connected with childbirth than from any other cause EXCEPT TUBERCULOSIS, the women begin to look pained and ask why it is. When she responds in the words of the Prophet Hosea, "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge." the expression of her audience changes from one of questioning credulity to conviction and she has the family group in a teachable frame of mind.

If one is moved to ask how the record of our state compares with that of other states and learns that all this life and death bookkeeping has been so poorly done in our state that the U. S. Census Bureau cannot include our figures with those of the "Registration Area" from which figures are taken to represent this entire country, civic spirit is at once aroused and a demand is heard that "something be done about it"; this furnishes an opportunity to tell of recent legislation which requires complete and accurate reporting of births and deaths and prescribes rules and regulations for its enforcement and to emphasize the necessity of more interest and participation on the part of the citizens in the enforcement of these laws; the benefits of which acrue first to the state by providing a guidepost for guardians of the public health and ultimately to the individual and the family.

Important as he is the family baby does not come in for all of the attention of the public health nurse for the school child will have had a physical examination by the County Health Officer or County Nurse and record of defects will have been sent to the parents; inquiry with regard to this point will remind parents of Johnny's defective teeth which they have been intending for a long time to bring to the attention of their dentist or perhaps the nurse will be able to interpret to the mother the aims of the Domestic Science teacher or health supervisor in demanding that she come herself and bring Johnny to a nutrition class because of his being underweight for his height.

If the varied bits of service suggested here do not seem to justify the visit of a public health nurse to the family of a tuberculous person we will admit that she might dress the varicose ulcer on grandmother's leg and report her condition to the family physician or advise the mother as to the best method of dealing with a wayward or incorrigable daughter, in fact there is no spiritual or physical need which may not properly be the subject of consultation between the family and the nurse. In the words of Florence Nightingale: "Can there be a higher work than this? Can any woman wish for a more womanly work? Can any man think it unworthy of the best of women?"

"To make an art of life. That is the finest of all the fine arts."

As a means of furthering as rapidly as possible its plan of promoting and establishing public health nursing in every county of the state, the Alabama Tuberculosis Association has become affiliated with the Bureau of Child Hygiene and Public Health Nursing, of the State Board of Health; it employs a field nurse for promoting and pioneer work and places her on the staff of this bureau, her activities to be co-ordinated with those of the American Red Cross which are delegated to the same state agency.

All local efforts to discover and bring under supervision persons in the various stages of tubercular disease will be made under the direction of the County Health Officer wherever full-time health units have been inaugurated by the State Board of Health; while in counties not provided with such units public health nursing activities when undertaken will be under the auspices of the County Board of Health and directly supervised by the Bureau of Child Hygiene and Public Health Nursing of the State Board of Health.

"Executive Council Modern Woodmen of America cordially endorse movement of National Tuberculosis Association Chritsmas Seal Sale. Our organization vitally interested in conservation of life and in full sympathy your work."

JEFFERSON COUNTY WORK AMONG CHILDREN IN THE HOMES OF TUBERCULOSIS. PATIENTS.

My work with the Anti-Tuberculosis Association of Jefferson County represent seven years of service in the homes of the people where Tuberculosis is the special problem. I have long since come to know that many things besides instructing the patient how to get well and how not to make others sick, are included in Health Education. I soon learned to know that the child in the home is one of the most important factors there, and since he is so susceptible to infection from Tuberculosis, I began very early in my career here to center my efforts on him, insisting that all children who are exposed have repeated chest examinations and all such defects as diseased tonsils, adenoids, defective eyes and bad teeth be remedied, for all such defects lower a child's resisting power, and may lead to Tuberculosis.

We have insisted that good food, and fresh air be given freely, not only to the patient, but to all members of the family, especially the children, for what makes the sick well, keeps the well well.

Our invariable rule of having all contracts to Tuberculosis examined, has lead to finding many early cases among children, and we have been made happy many times by seeing these little ones restored to health.

Here is a story of how we do constructive health work in a home: In 1919 there was reporter to the Association, a man, Mr. E., very ill with Tuberculosis, living in a rural district. A visit from the nurse revealed the uselessness of removing the patient to Red Mountain Sanatorium. He died one week later, leaving a widow and six children. The nurse brought the mother and all the little ones to the clinic. The first examination showed on signs of Tuberculosis, but all had diseased tonsils and large adenoids, and three showed positive hook worm—all were undernourished and anaemic.

The mother was anxious to keep the children together, and the nurse realizing that the best social service can be rendered if this can be done; interested other agencies to assist in the relief and supply the proper food. The children were beginning to look well when the Flu epidemic came along. All of them had it and resistance was lowered again. After this signs of very early Tuberculosis manifested themséves.

As the signs showed, the children were taken to the sanatorium. At this writing five of them have been treated and entirely restored. Some are back in school, and homes have been made for some. One boy of seven years is still at the Sanatorium. It became necessary for the mother to obtain employment, so she could not keep the family together as the nurse had hoped, but she and the oldest son look forward to, and are working toward the day when the family can be re-united and the Anti-Tuberculosis Association is still keeping watch over them.

This is only one family, but similiar service has been rendered to many others. The problems are not always alike, but we face whatever problem there is and work it out.

In our work for children, we have been wonderfully aided by two or three dentists, who have given their service freely to those not able to pay. The Children's and Hillman Hospitals have always been ready to help in the nose and throat work, and a generous Optica Co., has supplied glases to our poor cases. I do not mention the names of these friends, as they want no advertisement, but I feel that with their aid, we have saved many a kiddie from Tuberculosis.

Samuel Gompers Champions Christmas Seal Sale Cause

Labor Leader Heartily Approves of Tuberculosis Association Work.

That Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is one of the real level headed men of the country everyone will admit. No one has ever heard of his endorsing anything which he did not in his heart believe to be right.

The following endorsement from Mr. Gompers speaks for itself:

"AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR
"Washington, D. C.
"November 13, 1920.

"Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, Managing Director, National Tuberculosis Association, 381 Fourth Avenue, New York. N. Y.

"Dear Sir:

"I trust that complete success may attend the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals. The work of the National Tuberculosis Association is particularly valuable to the working people of America and I heartily commend your good work to them for support.

"Very truly yours,
(Signed) "SAMUEL GOMPERS,

HEALTH CRUSADE WORK PROGRESSING IN ALABAMA,

Teachers And Children Manifest Intense Interest.

Miss Felta McWhorter, Crusader Director of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association is responsible for the statement that the interest of both teachers and children throughout the entire state is daily increasing in the Modern Health Crusade work. This program is rapidly being placed in the school of the State, and it will be only a matter of a short time until every school has taken it up.

The children are given certain wards for performing the work—banners and scales are offered the schools having the highest percentage of efficiency in the carrying out of the program and the movement is growing like a prairie fire.

Dr. B. F. Austin, County Health Officer of Morgan County, assisted by the County nurse, is co-operating in putting the program in the schools, as is Dr. Carl A. Grote, County Health Officer of Madison County, assisted by Miss Mastin, County Nurse—Lamar County is out for a record. Dr. A. A. Kirk is putting the program in the schools of Tuscaloosa County. Dr. W. H. Storey, Superintendent of Education of Pickens County has made the work compulsory in that county, and others are expected to follow his lead. In Hale County, Miss Martha Young, the well-known writer is doing a great work. The State Normal Schools have endorsed the work and have put it in their model schools. All schools in Jefferson County are adopting the work, and Miss McWhorter will assist Jefferson County in this work during the month of January. Mrs. E. B. Erwin will serve as part time Crusade Supervisor for Jefferson County.

Save Telegraph Poles.

Of 1,558 telegraph poles in the Montgomery-New Orleans line, which were pressure-treated with a light creosote oil, 1,040 poles were still sound after 16 years, says the American Forestry Magazine. In 91 per cent of the cases of decay, the fungi had entered the wood through checks and shakes.

HERBERT HOOVER BELIEVES IN TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION.

Thinks Everyone Should Support the Christmas Seal Sale.

Herbert Hoover, former Food Director and who has probably seen more suffering than most any other man in America, shows in the following letter just what he thinks of the Tuberculosis Association and its Christmas Seal Sale:

"HERBERT HOOVER
"42 Broadway, New York City,
"November 6, 1920.

"Dr. Charles J. Hatfield,
National Tuberculosis Association,
381 Fourth Avenue,
New York City.

"My dear Dr. Hatfield:

"I am very glad to avail myself of the opportunity you give me of expressing my opinion in regard to your coming sale of Christmas Seals for the National Tuberculosis Association. There is, perhaps, no problem of a health nature that we have to meet a sa nation that is more serious than that of tuberculosis. The National Tuberculosis Association has been and is still making a superb fight against the ravages of this disease and it deserves the support of every citizen who wishes to see a real improvement in the health statistics of his community and this nation.

"I wish you every success in your sale of Christmas Seals and in the splendid effort which the sale of those seals will allow you to continue.

"Yours faithfully,
(Signed) "HERBERT HOOVER."

School Children of Alabama Have Special Program For Week

Modern Health Crusade Being Pushed In the Schools.

The Modern Health Crusade of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association of which Miss Fleta McWhorter of Birmingham is director is putting on the following program in the schools of Alabama during the week, December 6-10. Special emphasis is being given to the program for Friday of that week and it is expected that many parents will be present on that day.

The program has been officially approved by Dr. John W. Abercrombie, State Superintendent of Education, and Dr. O. C. Bird, Physical Director.

The program follows:

DO YOU VALUE YOUR HEALTH?
Facts About Tuberculosis That Everyone Should Know.

Monday.

Question—What is tuberculosis?

Answer—Tuberculosis is a disease caused by the growth of your lungs, or, sometimes, in other parts of your body, of a very small germ. This germ, as it grows and spreads, produces and throws off poison which, unless it can be checked, will finally kill the person in whom it is being produced.

Question—By what other names is this disease sometimes known?

Answer—Lung trouble, consumption, "T.B.," the Great White Plague.

Question—Where may these tuberculosis germs be found?

Answer—In the bodies of people, cattle, hogs, chickens and birds. Also in dust and in dark damp places where the sun seldom shines.

Question—How do people get tuberculosis?

Answer—By getting the germs in the mouth or nose through eating them or breathing them ,and by getting them in broken places of the skin.

Question—Why are people afraid of tuberculosis?

Answer—Because every third person between fifteen and sixty die of it. It kills about one in ten of all people who die at any age. In our own country over 150,000 people die every year from tuberculosis. That is 400 a day, one every three and one-half minutes.

Question—Why should you bother yourself about it if you are not sick with it?

Answer—Because you, or some of your family, may develop it at any time; therefore, by knowing something about it, you can greatly lessen the chance of getting it, or should you get it, can lessen its danger to yourself and your family. Further, every man, woman and child worth the name wants to help others who are in trouble.

Tuesday.

Question—How may we keep from having tuberculosis?

Answer—By building strong bodies.

Question—How may we build strong bodies?

Answer—By having plenty of good food and sleep, and by working, playing and sleeping in the open air.

Question—What must I do if I get tuberculosis?

Answer—Get rest, fresh air, sunshine and plenty of food.

Question—How may I know if I have tuberculosis?

Answer—You may not know. You should be examined by a good doctor every year.

Question—Who, besides the doctor, can tell us about tuberculosis?

Answer—The Health Department and the Tuberculosis Association.

Question—How will the Modern Health Crusade help me fight tuberculosis?

Answer—By helping you to form good health habits.

Wednesday.

Question—How many people in Alabama has tuberculosis?

Answer—Sixty thousand (60,000).

Question—How many people in the United States have tuberculosis?

Answer—One million (1,000,000).

Question—Why do so many people have tuberculosis?

Answer—Because people who have it are careless about spitting, coughing, sneezing, and kissing.

Question—Should only those who know they have tuberculosis be careful about spitting, coughing, sneezing and kissing?

Answer—NO; everybody should be careful.

Question—What should people do when they have to spit, cough or sneeze?

Answer—Spit where people do not have to sit or walk and where the sun will shine and kill the germs, or spit in something that can be burned.

Question—How should people kiss?

Answer—We really should not kiss at all because kissing passes disease germs from one person to another. Certainly we should never kiss a person directly on the mouth.

Thursday.

Question—What is the Seal Sale about which we hear the people talking?

Answer—It is selling Christmas seals, known as the Tuberculosis Seal.

Question—Why are these Seals sold?

Answer—To raise money to fight tuberculosis.

Question—How is the money used in fighting tuberculosis?

Answer—It pays the expenses of the Tuberculosis Association in telling the people what to do.

Question—What has been done in Alabama?

Answer—Nurses have been sent among the people to teach them. Places have been provided where doctors give people free examination, and the Modern Health Crusade has been put into the schools. Besides all this, many books, papers and letters are sent to people telling them about tuberculosis. When there is enough money, special hospitals are built for people who are sick with tuberculosis.

Question—Who should buy these Tuberculosis Christmas Seals?

Answer—Everybody should buy as many as they are able.

Question—What should people do with the Christmas Seals when they buy them?

Answer—They should put them on all Christmas letters, packages and postcards, but they are not postage, and should be put on so as not to touch the postage stamp. In this way we show everybody that we are fighting tuberculosis.

Friday.

THE MODERN HEALTH CRUSADE. WHAT IT IS.

The following reproduction of a circular sent out by the Alabama Tuberculosis Association explains briefly the modern Health Crusade being placed in the schools:

(N. B.—this Circular and the folder, "Record of Health Chores"—which must be read to supplement this circular—explains the fundamental and necessary part of the Crusade program. Every leader should also have the certificate of enrollment and the circular, "Second Field of the Cloth of Gold." The latter is the guide to the Crusade tournament. It is important to give the children the stimulus of national and local competition. For the complete program, to be taken up in whole or in part as the leader may choose, the "manual" must also be secured.)

The Modern Health Crusade is a movement that has enlisted more than 3,000,000 American children. It is essentially a system of teaching and of acquiring good health habits and interest in public health. Through elements of play and romance, and various appeals suited to child psychology, it gives children the motive needed for the practice of hygiene. Under the Crusade system pupils DO the duties which are explained in books of physiology and hygiene but too often left undone.

The results of the Crusade are physical improvement and prevention of disease among children and their families, moral discipline and the awakening of community responsibility.

Who Crusaders Are.

Children from 6 to 16 years of age may become Modern Health Crusaders by doing the official health chores and agreeing to pledge on the certificate of enrollment. The certificate states that the boy or girl named "has agreed to TRY (1) to keep the Crusaders' health rules until the end of 1920, (2) to do nothing that may hurt the health of any other person, and (3) to help keep home and town clean; has done at least 75 per cent of the Crusaders' health chores for the number of weeks required for first honors in health knighthood; and, therefore, is enrolled through the year 1920 as a Modern Health Crusader with the rank of Page." Persons older than 16 who meet the requirements laid down may become Crusaders in senior membership.

The reader should study the folder, "Record of Health Chores," before proceeding further with this circular.

Insignia.

The certificate of enrollment is the award for the Page. It carries a statement of the health rules, on which the chores are founded. The badges for Squire and Knight are respectively round and elliptical buttons on colored designs. The badge of the Knight Banneret is a gold-plated metal pin. The three badges are provided with attaching pins. They are distinguished from each other by increasing number of stars and by varied designs, changed every year.

Advanced Order Decorations.

When titles are awarded "Advanced Order" (see chore record folder), the Crusaders receiving them are entitled to wear ribbons under their badges according to the colors of knighthood: yellow (or orange or gold) for Squire, crimson for Knight, and royal purple for Knight Banneret. The Crusade master (teacher or leader) writes "Advanced Order" after the word "Page" on the certificate of enrollment and a ribbon in light blue may be attached.

Source of Supplies.

Crusade printed matter and badges are provided by the National Tuberculosis Association (New York City), the directing agency of the Crusade, at lowest possible cost. They are ordered for local schools from the association for each state affiliated with the National Association. Schools in many localities pay for these supplies. For every school their purchase would seem as justifiable as purchase of textbooks on health at far greater expense. If school funds cannot be obtained, request for supplies may be made of the local health or tuberculosis association or Junior Red Cross.

Prices.

The prices per hundred for the principal supplies are (subject to change): Chore record folders, 20c; Brief explanation circular, 21c; Tournament guide circulars, 43c; Certificates of enrolment, 43c; Squire's buttons, 42c; Knight's buttons, 65c; Knight's Banneret badges, $4.85; Rolls of Health Knighthood, $2.50. Charges are pro rata in quatities less than 100.

Quantities Needsd for 15-Week Course.

Chore folder, 2 for each child; Certificate of enrollment and Squire's button, 1 for each child; Knight's button and Knight's Banneret badge, 1 for each child for (approximately) 60 and 50 per cent respectively of the class. Brief explanation circular, Tournament guide, Roll of Health Knighthood (for 40 pupils), 1 for each teacher. Tournament report form (50c per C), 2 for each teacher for each of the two tourneys. Schools conducting the Crusade over 30 weeks may, if advisable, present pupils with one set of certificates and badges instead of two, as explained in the chore record folder; but if the four insignia are awarded for the first fifteen-week period, a second set should be presented during the second fifteen weeks.

Tournaments.

Crusade tournaments are competitions between schools or classes for the best average record by pupils in the performance of the health chores. The Second National Tournament of Health Knighthood is conducted during the school year 1919-20. The tournament consists of two tourneys of fifteen weeks each. The victors in each tourney will receive banners and win national recognition and publicity. Any class or school is eligible and may choose its own fifteen-week period between September 7th, 1919, and January 31st, 1920, and between January 11th and June 12th, 1920. Thus, the period for the first tourney may begin as late as October 19th for a school holding session in January. (See "Second Field of the Cloth of Gold.")

Crusade Adaptable to Every School.

Most of the health chores are performed out of school hours. They are largely "home work" and as such are given credit in hundreds of schools.

If a school allows no time for Crusade work, the teacher may nevertheless give the pupils its benefit by distributing health chore folders, after a short explanation, for each pupil to take one home. After the number of weeks required for each title the pupil brings his folder to the teacher. She then issues to him a second folder and at her leisure inspects the first one and awards the certificate or badge, if earned. The teacher will find it helpful to ask the children prompting questions from day to day. Crusade work can be carried on at any time. Participation in a tourney is not necessary but is a powerful aid.

For schools that make a place in school hours for practical health instruction, the Crusade offers a program to fit the amount of time allowed. All or part of the following features may be carried out: Daily prompting and hygienic inspection on the health chores, collateral instruction in hygiene, supervised recreation, exercise and athletics, development of correct weight and posture, Crusade club activities, entertainments with playlets, knightings and motion pictures, and Order of the Round Table. For explanations, secure the "manual" of the Modern Health Crusade from your state association affiliated with the National Tuberculosis Association.

ALABAMA PEOPLE ALWAYS INTERESTED IN ANY GOOD CAUSE—WILL PUT SEAL SALE OVER.

The people of Alabama have never failed to respond to any worthy cause, and those responsible for the success of the Christmas Seal Sale feel that the present occasion is going to be no exception to that rule.

There are no people on earth more willing to help their fellow being than the people of Alabama, and further than this, they realize that in buying Christmas Seals they are not only helping someone else, but are buying health insurance for themselves. So long as anyone in the State is afflicted with tuberculosis just that long is any citizen of the State in danger of contracting the disease. Therefore, it behooves everyone to do his or her part in wiping out the Great White Plague and make the world a better place to live in.

Everyone should buy Christmas Seals; everyone will buy Christmas seals, and they will buy them to the limit of their ability. A few dollars spent at the right time has saved many a life—they will save many others. Now is the time for everyone to do his duty, and his duty is to buy Christmas Seals and Health Bonds.

He's Worth It—

Little Tim—counterpart of thousands of helpless little children, rich and poor alike—struggling to live against the savage attacks which tuberculosis makes upon his frail little body. If we fail him—but we must not fail. He's worth saving.

Buy Tuberculosis Seals Use Christmas

Each penny Christmas Seal you buy provides added strength to your local tuberculosis association in the fight against this preventable and curable disease.

WORK OF THE TUBERCULOSIS ASSOCIATION IN MORGAN COUNTY, ALABAMA.

At present there is no Tuberculosis Association in Morgan county. However, since a meeting of some of the officials of the State Tuberculosis Association with the county health officer, chairman of the County Board of Health, chairmen of the Home Service section, American Red Cross, Rev. Davenport of Decatur and the chief sanitary inspector, a movement is on foot for the early organization of a real, live, wide-awake tuberculosis association in Morgan county. This organization is not to be completed until a mass meeting is held in order that a greater number of people may take part in this new but greatly needed endeavor.

At the meeting, mentioned in the preceding paragraph, which was held during the latter part of October, Mr. H. D. Cullen, executive secretary of the State Tuberculosis Association, explained to those present a series of programs that might be undertaken by a county tuberculosis association, these programs varying according to the amount of money available. Mr. Cullen also spoke of the Christmas Seal Sale, explaining that by mutual agreement between the National Tuberculosis Association and the American Red Cross the seal this year is distinctly a Tuberculosis Seal and not a Red Cross Seal. He emphasized the importance of the sale of Health Bonds.

Modern Health Crusade Introduced.

It was about this time that the County Health Officer was in search of a suitable health program to be carried out in the schools of Morgan county, when Miss McWhorter came to the rescue with the "Modern Health Crusade." It was arranged for Miss McWhorter to return and present the "Modern Health Crusade" to some of the schools. Eight schools were visited, all of which manifested an interest in the crusade. Upon her return to Birmingham, Miss McWhorter sent a supply of crusade material. To date, the crusade has been introduced into seventeen schools, where the children have taken it up with enthusiasm that is most gratifying. The work is not introduced into a school until the teacher has expressed a desire to assist in carrying out the program. It might be appropriate to state here that one school has already rendered a splendid health program, using "The Stories, Songs and Rhymes for Health Crusaders."

In his address at the teachers' institute ,the County Health Officer presented the "Modern Health Crusade" and was pleased to note the great amount of interest shown by so many of the teachers.

Plans for Seal Sale Nearing Completion.

The supply of Christmas seals and Health Bonds has been received by the chairman of the seal sale committee for Morgan county. Sub-committees and chairmen have already been appointed in the chief towns of the county. A meeting of these committees is to be held Saturday, Nov. 27, for the purpose of formulating the final plans for the beginning of the sale Dec. 1. Trinity is planning to open the sale with a box-supper on the night of December 1.

The seal sale has been endorsed by the Kiwanis Club, Albany Chamber of Commerce and all of the ladies' clubs. The ministers have been requested to make a special reference to the Tuberculosis Seal Sale on Sunday, Dec. 5. They have promised cooperation in this worthy movement. All the newspapers of the county have been very generous in giving space for publicity. The managers of the moving picture houses have agreed to use the slides advertising the seal sale in their respective theaters.

THE LITTLE RED CROSS SEAL BEST KIND OF INSURANCE POLICY.

The growth of the insurance business in all its phases has developed more rapidly in the United States than practically any other line of commercial or business activity during the past few years, and is destined to develop even more rapidly during the next ten years than it ever has before, in the opinion of Judge William E. Fort, of Birmingham, one of the most eminent jurists in the South.

"It is enough to make a man gasp in astonishment," said Judge Fort when questioned as to his opinion of the growth of the insurance business of various kinds. "It hasn't been so many years since insurance companies in this country were few and far between. There was an occasional life insurance company—and only a few fire insurance companies of national reputation. Insurance premiums were high.

"Now you can get insurance for any legitimate purpose—You insure your car, if you are fortunate enough to own one. You insure your show windows if your are a merchant. You insure against the activities of the industrious burglar. You insure your fine horse—yourself—your wife—your babies. Pianists insure their hands—Singers their voice. There is hardly anything that you can't insure."

"And you believe in insurance?" he was asked.

Judge Fort nodded vigorously. "I most certainly do, but there is one kind of insurance, that we all have an opportunity to secure, that a great many of us seem to know very little about, or, knowing, hesitate to take advantage of, and it is about the best insurance I know of." "What kind of insurance is that, the interrogator asked in some surprise.

Judge Fort spoke with slow precision, the sincerity he felt showing in his voice—"Insurance against tuberculosis—for years the greatest menace of the human race. We can get insurance against that plague—insurance that guarantees gradually to wipe it out—insurance that it will be carried day after day, by skilled physicians, nurses and educators, until those already afflicted are cured—until those who haven't it are in no danger of contamination from those who have it; because this insurance provides for teaching care; teaching those who have it now to protect others—teaches those who haven't it how to avoid it—and if they should contract it, how they may be cured easily, quickly and safely, at home with their friends and loved ones."

"And this insurance—"

Judge Fort smiled. "All you have to do to get this insurance is to purchase the Christmas Seals and Health Bonds, which the Alabama Tuberculosis Association will put on sale December first, they will be sold throughout the state. And you want to remember that when you buy the stamps and bonds, you are not giving a cent to any one—You are giving nothing—You are simply buying insurance against tuberculosis. So long as the disease exists in the State, you or some loved one are liable to be the next victim. By furnishing the Association with money to wipe it out, you are only protecting yourself.—You are buying insurance. And you are buying it at an exceedingly low rate—the lowest rate I know of. All successful business men believe in insurance— Ask them if they don't. I wonder if many of them have thought of the Christmas Seals as insurance? I wonder if the housewife who employs a cook, has thought of the fact that if she does her part in the Christmas Seal sale, she lessens the chances of her cook contracting the disease and bringing its blighting effect into her own home

"We owe it to ourselves to buy this insurance. We must get rid of the idea that we are giving something to somebody when we buy the stamps and health bonds. We know that neglect has caused the spread of this obligation. The man or woman who pays out money for the eradication of tuberculosis is giving nothing and has given nothing, so far as money spent for that purpose is concerned. . . They have simply bought insurance for themselves and their loved ones."

The Spitting Habit

"Do you thoughtlessly or intentionally spit upon the sidewalks and pavements?

If so—stop it! It is a filthy and vulgar habit.

Why should you multilate the appearance of your town?

Besides being a disgusting sight to every paser-by, this is one of the most prolific means of spreading disease germs. No one who has a degree of civic pride, of a right conception of "personal liberty" will indulge in this dangerous practice."

OKLAHOMA SPLIT LOOKS HARD FOR DEMOCRATS

Campaign Manager For Senator Gore Gives Interview On Democratic Row.

Washington, Nov. 30—If the views of Aldrich Blake correctly size up the situation, the split among the Democrats of Oklahoma is a serious one and not likely to be closed up for several years. Mr. Blake managed the primary campaign for Senator Gore, who was defeated for renomination last Summer by Representative Scott Ferris, and he in turn was beaten at the November election by Representative Harreld, Republican candidate for United States senator. Evidently there is a "pretty howdy-do" down in Oklahoma, a state that has been so relisbly Democratic until now.

Although Senator Gore urged his followers not to knife Mr. Ferris, it would seem that they did not follow his advice, for Manager Blake, in a published interview in Washington, has "let the cat out of the bag," and according to his tale of woe, the Gore followers not only had a stormy time in the campaign, but they are very sore and are threatening to stir up trouble at the next election.

Mr. Blake's view may not be pleasing to the Democrats of Alabama and other Southern states, but the following extracts from an interview with Blake published by The Washington Post may prove interesting:

"The election of Representative Harreld over Scott Ferris by 30,000 votes was due to four things. First, the departure of Mr. Ferris from the principles of the party to follow blindly President Wilson: second, the revolt of the people against the methods used against Senator Gore by a majority of the Democratic newspapers of the state and by the Ferris Campaign committee. Although Senator Gore had for him hundreds of soldiers who went overseas and fought the Germans, he and his entire organization was branded as traitors, pro-Germans, Bolsheviks and what not. Our speakers were stoned or egged from platforms on numerous occasions. I was slugged in the course of a speech and left unconscious. We could not get our side of the story into the news columns of the papers, and many Democratic papers even refused to take it as paid advertising.

"The opposition of the people to the League of Nations and the drop in the price of cotton are the two other causes which contributed to Republican victory in Oklahoma. After Senator Gore was defeated I aided in organizing the Jeffersonian Club, composed of men and women who believe in the fundamental principles of the party. I believe that more than half of the Gore strength went to the Republican candidates for all offices. There is a demand for Senator Gore to run for governor, and should he run I am confident that he will be elected."

REPUBLICANS GAINED 51,736 VOTES IN ALA.

Nine Counties of the State Gave Majorities For Harding and Coolidge On November the 2nd.

Montgomery, Ala., Dec. 4.—Out of 155,994 votes polled for Gov. Cox and 74,605 for Harding, in the Nov. 2 general election in Alabama, Jefferson County cast the highest vote of any Alabama county for the Republican candidate, when Harding was given 7,124 votes.

The next largest county vote for the Republicans was 4,825 in DeKalb County. In Wilcox and Bullock counties, Harding received 2 votes each, while Lowndes County cast only 6 in his favor.

The Republican ballot was sufficient to permit the holding of a Republican primary at the expense of the state for the next election.

The Democrats gained 56,583 votes over the election four years ago, and the Republican gained 51,796 votes in Alabama.

WOULD NOT CONFIRM WILSON'S SELECTIONS

Republicans Urge the Senate to Turn Down Wilson Appointees and Leave Places for Harding to Fill.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Urging rejection of all pending and future Federal appointments by President Wilson, the Republican Publicity Association, in a statement issued through the President of that organization, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., says:

Almost incredible waste and extravagance marked the training, equiping, and maintaining of our army in France. It all took place under the eye of Secretary of War Baker and other appointees of President Wilson. The unspeakable mess in the Shipping Board occurred under the supervision of men whom Mr. Wilson had selected to look after the interests of our merchant marine. The impotence of the Department of Justice to bring relief to a country suffering from profiteering, radicalism, and open defiance of law is notorious. Again Mr. Wilson's appointees must be held responsible. The list might be lengthened to include other costly burdens that the people have been compelled to endure because of the men whom Mr. Wilson placed in responsible positions and kept there after their incompetency had been proven.

"Gross mismanagement of public trusts by Wilson appointees was one of the principal causes that rolled up the hugh majorities against Wilsonism on November 2nd. An explicit command came from the people to put new men in charge of affairs at Washington, whose concern for the public welfare would be paramount. A man was elected to the Presidency, who, the voters believed, would make appointments of that character.

"The Senate has before it thousands of so-called recess appointments made by the President—appointments to vacancies occurring since the adjournment of the last session on June 5th. Under the Constitution, all the civil appointees in that long list automatically go out of office at the close of Congress on March 4th unless they receive the confirmation of the Senate before that date. Included in the list are several new members of the Shipping Board. The country has no reason to believe that they are of a higher character than those other selections of Mr. Wilson under whom enormous wastes were perpetrated. It is announced by Mr. Tumulty that the President has offered him the chief justiceship of the Court of Customs Appeals, a life job at $10,000 a year. What his qualifications are for the position are not manifest. Fifteen thousand promotions have been made by the President among the officers of the Regular Army. It is openly charged that favoritism is apparent in many of the selections.

"Now, what is the lesson to be learned from all this? Would not the United States Senate be grossly recreant to the mandate of the people at the polls if it permit those Wilson appointees to be confirmed? The country has decreed that on March 4th Wilsonism shall end, and is it not the plain duty of the Senate to make that decree a reality? If those appointments are confirmed it will mean that the baleful influence of Wilsonism will be continued through a period of several years. President Harding would enter upon his administration with a handicap that he could never shake off. He would be forced to deal through agencies established by his predecessor, owing no allegiance to him, and whose treachery might at any moment bring disaster to his policies.

"The long list of army promotions are hardly less important than the Wilson civil appointments. The officers in high command have it in their power to bring success or failure to a military program for which the Republican party is responsible. Every man promoted should first receive the endorsement of President Harding, who is to be the Commander-in-Chief of the Army for the next four years. He will be denied the right of passing upon his subordinates if the selections which President Wilson has made shall receive the approval of the Senate."

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT MAKING PROVISIONS FOR T. B. EX-SERVICE MEN.

In connection with plans for the expenditure of a considerable portion of the $46,000,000 appropriated by Congress in July to the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, the Director, Colonel R. G. Cholmeley-Jones, has called upon the National Tuberculosis Association for consultation and expert advice in the development of plans for first class care and treatment of every man and woman who served in the War under the United States' flag, and who is disabled on account of tuberculosis.

The Bureau of War Risk Insurance is planing to appropriate or utilize institutions already existing or being constructed under the direction of the U. S. Public Health Service, the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers, and the Army and the Navy. Patients will also be cared for in local private and public sanatoria in various parts of the country where sufficient beds cannot be found in existing federal institutions.

The plans worked out by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance and the National Tuberculoscis Association include:

1. The construction of first-class sanatoria, and proper care and treatment of every man and woman who needs it and can be induced to take it.

2. Provisions in sanatoria for occupational therapy and pre-vocational training.

3. Utilization of state, county, municipal and private sanatoria where the best interests of the patients require it.

From data furnished by the Bureau of War Risk Insurance it is estimated that nearly 12,400 tuberculous men and women need treatment at the present time as beneficiaries of the Bureau of War Risk Insurance, and by 1924, when the peak load is expected, this number will be increased to 13,800.

The Mountain Branch of the National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers at Johnson City, Tenn., has just been opened as a 100 bed sanatorium for tuberculous ex-service men. It is now known as the Johnson City National Sanatorium, and is located in the hills of eastern Tennessee. Dr. Glenford L. Bellis who has recently returned from France, where he was Medical Director of the Princess Eugenie Tuberculosis Hospital at Lyons, has been made medical director and Superintendent.

Rev. J. M. Graham and Rev. Owens of Thorsby were visitors to Clanton last Friday. Rev. Graham complimented The Union-Banner on its liberal allotment of space to the Tuberculosis Association in last week's issue. Mr. Graham is an authority on Tuberculosis relief work, having been in the past in charge of the Alabama Tuberculosis Association. To his splendid foresight and capacity for organization is due a great deal of the systematic management with which the 1920 campaign against tuberculosis in Alabama is being carried out so successfully.

National Republican—The Southern Democrat still votes the straight ticket and receives the reports of a Republican national victory with a thankful heart.

COM. ALLGOOD VISITS FARMING DISTRICTS

Planters In Several Counties Well Provided For, Commissioner States

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 27—Miles C. Allgood, comissioner of agriculture who for a week or more has been making a tour of the southern portion of Montgomery County, as well as the counties of Crenshaw and Blount, states many farmers asked his opinion as to when the downward tiend of cotton prices would end. To this query he says he replied that in his opinion, prices would cease to go down when the farmers stop selling cotton.

So far as living conditions are concerned, Commisisoner Allgood says the farmers in the territory which he recently visited, appear well provided for. Potatoes, syrup, corn, peas, beans and peanuts, he says are plentiful and there are a good many hogs, but there is at present, the commissioner states, no market for farm produce of any kind. Buyers of cotton seed and peanuts are out of the market and there is no demand for cotton, according to the commissioner.

Mr. Allgood says there is a great deal of moving going on, from county to town and from farm to farm.

It is his opinion that there will be a tremendous reduction of the customary cotton acreage in Alabama when the time for Spring planting arrives, and that at about the same time there will be a reaction in the present market for farm products, which will bring better prices. By that time however, he states, the greater part of the 1920 cotton crop will have passed out of the hands of the producer and into the hands of the speculator.

NOW, WHAT?

Germany is understood to have declared that she is no longer bound to yield her colonies in accordance with the peace treaty, on the ground that mandates for them were to be distributed by the league of nations, which was not done. This will be a sad blow to England, which got about four-fifths of them, parcelled out by the Big Four in Paris.

"Ziron Did Us Both Good," Writes Mr. Gentry, of Norene, Tenn.

IT is a well-known medical fact, that iron is a necessary constituent of the blood, and that blood lacking iron is the cause of many troubles that only iron will cure.

Ziron, a scientific compound of iron with other valuable ingredients, is the remedy to take when your blood needs more iron, and your system requires a tonic. Ziron is mild and harmless, does not stain the teeth. and is good for children as well as adults.

Mr. P. G. Gentry, of Norene, Tenn., writes: "Ziron Iron Tonic has made good in my family. I have used it to a very great advantage to myself and my 14-year-old boy. It did us both good. I think it is a good medicine for what it is recommended."

If you are pale, weak, tired, feel down and out, take Ziron. It will put iron into your blood, and should help build you up.

Get a bottle from your druggist today, and give ZIRON a fair trial. Sold by him under a money-back guarantee.

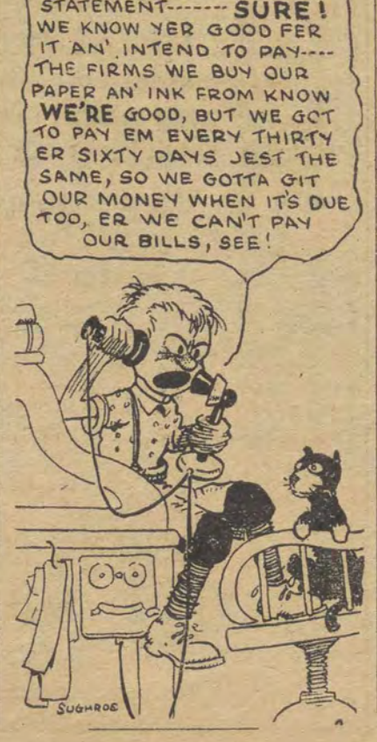
FIVE CHARGED WITH KILLING DRY AGENT

Pitched Battle Fought Between "Shiners" and Prohi Men at Colby Springs.

Birmingham, Ala., Dec. 7—Five warrants charging murder and violation of the prohibition laws will be sworn out by N. L. Pierce, state prohibition officer, in connection with the killing of Richard D. Griffin, a federal agent, near Colby Springs late last night by alleged moonshiners, while he was chasing an escaped prisoner.

Federal officers have been scouring the woods for miles around the spot where Griffin was killed, all day, and have collected enough evidence to warrant the issuance of warrants, according to Mr. Pierce.



Luther A. Whitley and Will Whitley, who were under arrest when the firing began, are in the Jefferson county jail here. No charges have been placed against them.

One of the prisoners attempted to make his escape. Griffin gave chase. Immediately a shot rang out from the darkness and Griffin fell to the ground. The shot struck him in the abdomen. Half a minute later a second shot was fired. This time the bullet struck the already mortally wounded man in the foot.

Forced to fight for their lives the other officers W. E. Eubanks, and Jack Horton, who were with Griffin, let the four other prisoners escape and ran to where Griffin lay upon the ground. None of the officers had much ammunition and after exchanging a few shots, their supply was nearly exhausted.

Realizing that it was out of the question to try and defend themselves against larger numbers, Horton left Eubanks with Griffin and started for the officers automobile to call to Birmingham for help. The moonshiners, firing their pistols, failed to hear the automobile and Horton was able to make a safe get-away. A few minutes later he was at a telephone and had informed Pierce of the fight. Reinforcements were rushed to the scene. Griffin died while he was being brought to Birmingham.

MICKIE SAYS

Alabama Religious and Educational Institute

A New Approach to An Old Task—Religious, Educational, Social.

What is the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute?

It is an organization representing certain well established Religious and Educational institutions. It emphasizes the fundamental things of the Gospel, upon which we may all agree, and seeks to serve in the name of our common Lord.

Whence came the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute?

It came out of the minds and hearts of men who, consecrated to God, and dedicated to the highest possible service to humanity, have spent much time in prayer and in the study of the word of God in its message of love, and its guarantee of power over all evil.

Who are its directors, and what institutions do they represent?

Lewis H. Keller, D. D., representing the Congregational Extension Board; Frank E. Jenkins, D. D., representing the Board of Trustees of Thorsby Institute at Thorsby, Alabama; Rev. Chas. L. Fisk, representing the Congregational Education Society; Rev. Chas. T. Rogers, representing the General Conference of Congregational Churches in Alabama; Rev. Elmer W. Butler, representing the United Protestant Church at Thorsby, Alabama.

How is the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute financed?

Primarily by the Congregational Extension Boards. It is our understanding, however, that communities, to which the Alabama Religious and Educaitnoal Institute shall apply itself directly in service, will be expected to contribute to its support, and that at the earliest possible date some way must be found to finance the work other than by the Congregational Extension Boards.

Is it a Denominational Agency for Sectarian Purposes?

Positively not. It is definitely religious and educaitnoal, but absolutely non-sectarian in its purposes and its activities. It will seek to serve all classes along all legitimate lines, for the development of the highest and best phases of community life. It would seek to make the Church or the School, or both, the center of the community activities, and the service will be given to the community, and under the auspices of the Church that is willing to strive for the biggest and best things. We positively will not spread denominational propaganda in a narrow, sectarian way.

What is its program?

The program of the Alabama Religious and Educational Institute, as written into its Constitution and By-Laws, and unanimously adopted by the Board of Directors, and now being carried out by its Superintendent, is divided into five sections as follows:

1. To help comunities, churches, schools, and other organizations to see and grasp the larger opportunities for service to all types and conditions of human life.

2. To encourage and develop friendly relations, social intercourse, and community pride among the people of given communities and to cause the communities to develop unity of purpose and action for the good of all.

3. To help the churches to reach that great number of people not now being reached by organized forces.

4. To assist churches, schools, fraternal organizations and other religious, educational, social and welfare agencies, in the making and working out of programs of community development.

5. To promote the expression of the true Christian spirit in all life-relations.

PERSONALS

A party of teachers and students of Thorsby Institute motored to Clanton last Friday night to attend the play from Columbiana. They all reported a good time and stated that it was well worth the trip, as the play was splendid.

On last Saturday night Miss Nell Werness entertained a number of guests at her home. An enjoyable evening was spent at rook and other games, after which delicious refreshments were served. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ivy Horn, W. M. Parnell, Naemi Turnquist, Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Howard and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Reagan.

Miss Lucile Adams spent Sunday here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Adams.

Mr. Clarence Graham of Anniston spent Saturday and Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Graham.

Mr. and Mrs. Evan Parrish of Clanton have just come to Thorsby to live. Mr. Parrish is employed as clerk for the L. & N. R. R. Co. We are glad to have these good people in our midst and we truly hope that they will find Thorsby an ideal place to live in. We welcome them to our city.

Mrs. C. H. Thomsen left Saturday morning for Memphis, Tenn., where she will visit for some time with her daughter, Mrs. Gouthe.

Miss Agnes Leary has just returned from Mobile, where she spent the entire summer. Her friends welcome her back home and will be glad to learn that she intends to stay.

Mrs. Hattie M. Gerald and daughters, Ruth and Mary Ella, spent the week-end in Birmingham.

Mrs. J. J. Lloyd of Stillwater, Minn., arrived in Thorsby last week and will perhaps spend the winter months. She is a former resident of our city, and she has a number of friends here who are glad to see her again.

On Sunday afternoon Augusta Parnell and Raymond Popwell surprised their many friends when they slipped off and got married. They were married about 3:30 P. M. at the home of Alfred Childress, Justice of Peace, who performed the ceremony in the presence of the groom's brother and sister-in-law and the bride's sister, Miss Mae Parnell and Nolia Robinson.

Their many frineds congratulate them and wish for them a happy married life.

PARENT-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION OF THORSBY

To the Parents of Thorsby:

As you know there was organized some weeks ago the Parent Teachers Association of Thorsby. The object of this organization, as you are doubtless aware, are numerous, and all leading directly towards the highest interest of all our children, and the proper development of our school facilities.

Unless we have suitable school facilities we cannot secure for our children the best training; without the best training, we have no grounds upon which to base hopes for the best advantages for our children. We cannot have the best facilities, and secure for our children the best advantages unless we, as the natural providers, and protectors of our children, think together and work together.

The Parent Teachers Association can and will prove to be a distinctive help to us all if we will only give to it our attention and sympathetic co-operation. In its meetings we are supposed to discuss the many problems confronting the parents and teachers of the community, and in so doing we shall come to understand and to love each other, and the school life of our children will mean more to us all in every way. If you do not attend the meetings and help with the work, you will miss much that is in store for you, and your children will necesarily suffer as a result of your own forgetfulness. We must have a community conscience, community program, and our children must come to know that we regard their interest as the first and the highest good. We cannot make them know that by simply telling them. We emust show them.

A special meeting of the Parent Teachers Association will be held at Bates Hall Friday Evening, December 10th, beginning at 7:30 sharp. Your presence will be a blessing to all, and if you should be absent, we shall all feel it keenly, but you will be the chief loser. We feel confident you will come. There will be business of vital importance to all, and you should have a part in it.

Yours for progress,
BERTHA LITTLETON,
C. M. WILLIAMS,
Committee.

Not Much to Ask.

The landlady bustled up to her new lodger as he came down to breakfast the first morning.

"Good morning sir," she wheezed.

"Good morning," said the lodger.

"I hope you've had a good night's rest," said the landlady.

"No," said the mild-mannered little man. "Your cat kept me awake."

"Oh," said the landlady, tossing her head, "I suppose you're going to ask me to have the poor thing killed."

"N-no, not exactly," said the gentle lodger. "But would you very much mind having it tuned?"

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured
by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. ENTERTAINMENT

The Queen Esther Class of the Sunday School of the United Protestant Church gave an entertainment at Bates Hall Saturday evening, December 4th, which was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The program follows:

Opening Chorus, Entire Class.
Piano Solo ....Your Eyes Told Me So.
Miss Fox
Tableau ..... The Three Rings.
Piano Solo .... The Song of the Lark.
Pauline Gray
Tableau .....
Protection of The Women and Children.
Playlet .....
.....Captain Ann of the Red Cross

The music was excellent throughout and the tableaux were very clever. "The Three Rings" represented the three wise men who came to worship Jesus on the night of His birth. "The Protection of the Women and Children" represented Columbia protecting the American Homes through the agencies of the army, navy, Red Cross and Christian Church.

The playlet was a light farce depicting some exciting adventures of a Red Cross Captain during the war. The acting of Miss Wood as "Captain Ann" and of Miss Music as the German Housemaid stood out preemintly among the excellent services rendered by the others of the class.

The playlet was under the direction of Miss Helen C. Jenkins, teacher of the class. The tableaux were directed by Mrs. Nottage and Mrs. Loveland.

Springfield Mo.—"My back was so weak I could hardly stand up, and I would have bearing-down pains and was not well at any time," says Mrs. D. V. Williams, wife of a well-known farmer on Route 6, this place. "I kept getting headaches and having to go to bed," continues Mrs. Williams describing the troubles from which she obtained relief through the use of Cardui. "My husband, having heard of Cardui, proposed getting it for me.
"I saw after taking some Cardui . . . that I was improving. The result was surprising. I felt like a different person.
"Later I suffered from weakness and weak back, and felt all run-down. I did not rest well at night, I was so nervous and cross. My husband said he would get me some Cardui, which he did. It strengthened me . . . My doctor said I got along fine. I was in good healthy condition. I cannot say too much for it."
Thousands of women have suffered as Mrs. Williams describes, until they found relief from the use of Cardui. Since it has helped so many, you should not hesitate to try Cardui if troubled with womanly ailments.

ANOTHER CATHOLIC JUDGE—TUMULTY.

Hon. Joseph Patrick Tumulty, who has for the past ten years been the right hand bower and Private Secretary to President Wilson, has been tendered the position of Judge of the United States Court of Customs Appeals by Mr. Wilson. Mr. Tumulty is, like the majority of the other appointees which Wilson has elevated to high positions, a high degree Knight of Columbus, and full fledged Roman Catholic.

While Wilson was Governor of New Jersey, Tumulty was his private Secretary, and during his two terms as President of the United States this same sentinel of the Pope has stood between the chief executive of the United States and the people of the country. His hand has ever been on the throttle of the public touch with the President, and the result has been Wilson, one of the most secluded and inaccessible Presidents this country has ever seen.

The new job which Mr. Tumulty has been offered is a life time position with a salary of $12,000 a year. In this position Mr. Tumulty would have time to work with the President along the literary lines which he plans to pursue after his term is out in the white house.

This appointment reveals the fact that President Wilson is as loyal to the Catholics as he goes out of office as he was when he came in. He has used every opportunity in the past eight years to put the reins of government in America in the hands of the Pope. Tumulty has been his private Secretary in order that nothing unfriendly to the Catholics might ever bother his Presidential dignity. All that sort of stuff was consigned to the waste basket under Tumulty's censorship.

Now that the usefulness of Mr. Tumulty at the White House is about over, Mr. Wilson wants to further serve the cause of the Catholics by putting him in a life-time government job at good pay, with plenty of spare time to use the rest of his days serving the interests of his only master, Pope Benedict XV.

FINEST LODGE TEMPLE IN THE WORLD.

The Union-Banner has received a copy of the Detroit News, of Nov. 26th, in which paper appears a great feature news story concerning the erection of what is to be the finest lodge temple in the world by the Masons of the city of Detroit.

The beginning of the temple was staged on Thanksgiving day when 20,000 Detroit Masons assembled and with appropriate ceremonies, broke ground for the stone building which is to cost $4,000,000. A silver spade inscribed with the names of Detroit Masons who lost their lives in the world war, was used to lift the first earth in the work of building in Detroit the finest temple on which Masons have labored since Solomon's first Masons built THE temple. Twenty thousand voices sang "America," as the work was begun.

The copy of The Detroit News, telling the story of the Temple, was sent to us by Mr. G. L. Crosby, now of Detroit, a former resident of Chilton County. He is one of Detroit's Masons who is interested in the great temple, is a member of Ashlar Lodge, No. 91, having attained the 32nd degree.

EDGAR LYNCH ARRESTED WHILE MAKING WHISKEY

Early last Monday morning while County Court was in session Sheriff Gore and Deputies Culp and Curlee went up to the Mars Hill community and located a wild cat still in full operation, being tended by a white man named Edgar Lynch.

The plant was just a quarter of a mile from Mars Hill church, and was only about 40 yards from the back door of the house in which Lynch lives.

The officers walked right up on the man and caught him in the act of making liquor. His still was a good copper outfit. He was brought to Clanton and placed in jail.

TAKES TWO FOR AN ISSUE

A prominent business man in Texas asks "Will the South never realize that the tariff question is strictly an economic one" and he intimates that the question is not political. He is only partly right. The issue is not only economic, but has been made political by the Democratic party. The usual and most successful policy of the United States is in the maintenance of a protective tariff. Protection is peculiarly an American policy. But the Democratic party has opposed that policy and in two instances since the Civil War has been able to overthrow the protective principles and commit the nation to free trade.

By their declaration in their platform every four years that a protective tariff is unsconstitutional, the Democrats force the tariff question into politics. There is nothing left for the Republicans to do, in support of their "America First" program, but to declare for the protective tariff, and thus the issue is made political. If the Democrats, either North or South,, desire to take the tariff question out of politics, all they have to do is cease declaring for free trade.

The Republican party has never been a party of surrender. It does not believe in surrendering nationality to a league of nations. It does not believe in surrendering our right to manage the Panama Canal in any way we see fit, consistent with our international undertakings. It does not believe in surrender of American shipping to foreign rivals. It does not believe in surrendering American markets to the cheap labor of Europe and Asia. Therefore, although national indepencence, the Panama Canal, the merchant marine, and the tariff, are not necessarily political questions, they become political whenever the Democratic party adopts a platform or pursues a policy that indicates an intention to surrender America's interests. The Republican party stands always to spring to the defense of American rights and American welfare.

Any question becomes political whenever one party takes one side of the question and the opposing party the other.

SOME PERTINENT POINTS

The tabulated vote by counties in the recent Presidential election for the State of Alabama shows some interesting points for the student of politics.

There were nine counties that gave majorities for the Republican Presidential candidates. Some four or five other counties elected Republican local officers and gave a majority for Cox for President.

Judge Reynolds, the Republican candidate for the long term in the U. S. Senate carried more counties than the total of those that Harding carried for President combined with those that went locally for Republicans and for Cox for President. The vote received by Reynolds was the highest on the Republican ticket, exceeding that of Harding by about 3 or 4 thousand.

The counties of Bullock and Wilcox together cast only four votes for Harding. Lowndes county alone gave a total of six Republican votes.

Jefferson county cast the largest vote for Harding rolling up a total of 7,124. Judge Reynolds received about 500 more votes in Jefferson county than the national ticket.

Walker county gave a small majority to Cox, while some of the local Republican candidates were elected, and Judge Reynolds ran ahead of Underwood in that county.

Chilton, Cleburne and Shelby counties of the Fourth Congressional District went Republican. Calhoun, Dallas and Talladega counties in the same District remained unshaken for the Democrats.

Republicans made great gains over in Marion county. Harding received 1865 and Cox 2461.

On the whole the gain of Republicans in the State in the four years from 1916 to 1920 was 51,796. The gain of the Democrats for the same period of time was 56,583.

TWO BOYS ARRESTED WITH WHISKEY IN POSSESSION

Last Sunday night Will Giles and Albert Thompson were celebrating out in the neighborhood of Pinedale Church, when the Sheriff and Deputy Curlee happened along and broke into their fun.

The boys were spreading joy in a Ford car which was taken in possession by the officers. There was about a pint of booze in the car. The sheriff says he thinks they had plenty more but it was in them.

Bean Brothers sale will close next Saturday with the drawing for the $25 prize to be given the lucky holder of the ticket. Be there and see if you are the winner.—Adv.

JUST SOME THOUGHTS

Mr. Editor:

How long do you suppose the tax payers of Alabama are going to stand for the increasing burdens put upon them by a legislature that boldly tells them, by implication at least, that they are too idiotic to know what they want, too ignorant to vote and too dishonest to be allowed to attend to their own business?

This seems to be the exact state of affairs now.

For instance: This imperialistic conclave of solons are upon record as having refused to allow the people an expression at the polls of their wishes on great social and political issues. They are also upon record as having absolutely ignored the overwhelmning expression of the wishes of the people upon other vital questions. They also imply by their legislation that every tax payer in Alabama would wilfully perjure himself for 30 cents.

No use, I judge, to elaborate these statements for I imagine almost every reader will be able to correctly place them, if not, the data can be furnished later.

Now, in arrogating to themselves all the wisdom, all the brains, all the integrity, all the sublime attributes of a paternalism that even surpasses the Prussian regime in its palmist days, they meet from time to time and give us great tomes of "laws" that, in absolute disregard of all the State and National Constituaional rights of the people, are epics of gall and egotism and great commentories upon the lengths of which an unbridled and unrebuked lust after money, power and jobs will carry a set of politicians who regard themselves in the light of being the Alpha and Omega of all things.

Then, such laws!

For instance, the State Constitution provides in each county for a Sheriff and other officers to enforce the law, collect the taxes, etc., and no more. There is no constitutional right on earth to twist $50,000 to $100,000 per year out of the depleted pockets of the tax payer to keep Conrad Austin and a few of his satellites in a soft job. Connie, you remember, has made a most glorious and successful failure at everything he has undertaken before. Such as former Chief of Police of Birmingham, head of a great (?) detective agency, kind of helper at the Jefferson County jail, etc., so he was signally qualified to head a State Law Enforcement Bureau, spoken into existence by our illustrous solons, as an additional burden and insult to the long suffering tax payers of Alabama.

Another glorious example of the imperialistic and paternal tendencies of these latter day Caesars is the Compulsory Education Law. That kind of Kaiserism, as we all know, was originally sired and brought forth under the dispotic Prussian rule in a land that only recently almost rent the earth in twain in an effort to paternally govern the world. We have seen its legitimate fruits, and a quarter of a million of our boys are dead today because we professed our abhorence to such a system. Still, a certain element of modern "high brows" hug this ghastly dream of the despot to their bosoms and rave and tear their hair if any one presumes to even suggest a weakness or a possible evil tendency in an arrangement that is wholly wrong, utterly unnecessary, and viciously strikes at the very foundations of the hom and fireside itself. It has a thousand faults and not one redeeming feature. But space forbids. The arguments can be given against this pernicious innovation almost ad infinitum.

Did you mention the "Dog Law?" Even the paternal synod itself found that wire a little too hot recently when they held their junket in Montgomery. In passing let me say that it is patent to every one that the dog law was only a bluff to fleece the innocent tax payer. Less than 15 per cent of the people of Alabama are interested in a half-hearted attempt to raise wool. Still the other 85 per cent has a dog tax fastened on them ostensibly to protect the wool grower. Oh! ye Gods and little fishes! How sublimely rediculous.

Then, the over burdened tax payer is being filched out of $4,000 per day and has been for several months to furnish an armed guard to the coal barons in the Alabama district in their fight against organized labor. I have no brief for the coal miners, but it is a palpable fact that under the guidance and management of Gov. Kilby and Col. Steiner the people of Alabama have paid out, perhaps, $200,000 to kill organized labor in that district, and by jingo, they have just about done it. As far as having sent the militia up there to "protect the peace and dignity of the State" is concerned, the records show that there never has been such a wave of crime there before as during the past two months. This is no reflection either on the noble young men who are being held there against their will NOT to ferret out and punish crime, but to guard the property of non-resident millionaires while they cut down wages, put in force onorous working conditions and crowd in a foreign element of ignorant bolshevik and anarchistic labor.

Pardon me, Mr. Editor, but this subject is fraught with so much imminent peril to the rights, freedom and prosperity of the people of Alabama that to be brief is impossible. There are hundreds of things that could be and should be said to arouse the people to their danger. Another and complete about face is necessary in State affairs unless we expect to see the star of prosperity sink for ages beneath the horizon of the future.

Can nothing be said to induce the people to "stop, look and listen?" Wake up and lets get back to bed rock. Clean up the slate of foolish facts and pernicious money grabbing schemes and elect the next State legislature from among the ranks of the farmers and safe and sane business men, and forever retire the professional politician to merited oblivion. This is the accepted time. Wake up NOW before it is everlastingly too late.

Yours for fewer laws and honest government.

OBSERVER.

PROGRAMS NEW and OLD

By Rev. J. M. Graham

In this, the good year of our Lord, when all good Americans are turning our thoughts towards the New England shores, and joining in fitting celebrations of the Three Hundredth Anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims, it is very much worth while to try to learn what it was that made the Pilgrims great. We are glad that so many are agreeing that it was the Bible that made them great, but if we would understand that, we must see how they interpreted the Bible and applied it to their lives, individually and collectively.

Social workers of today will admit that the Pilgrims had a program of social service that appears even today to be rather advanced. It was the belief of the Pilgrims that their citizenship began here, and led to heaven—they thought the laws of God for the Spirit world, were also operating in the earth, and that Christians, by living in the world, would make it a better place. Let the reader bear in mind that we are considering a program of religious and social service that was working three hundred years ago, and it is our privilege and profitable task to compare it with our present day program for the same kind of work.

The Pilgrims stood strongly for individual freedom in religious and in civic relations, but their chief concern was not for the individual but for the community as a whole. Religion to them was more than salvation for the individual, it stood ror the salvation of society. Religion was a public matter, and they saw no reason for unrighteousness in public office, nor would they listen to excuses for such. Religion gave them an ideal for social and civic action, and it commanded rigid obedience. The Kingdom of God was to include civic as well as religious activities, and it was the business of the church to establish that Kingdom on the earth. They believed with Calvin and Knox of long before, that a city or country should be taken for God in order that He might be its ruler. It was their interpretation of the Bible in its bearing upon their lives, individually and collectively, that brought down upon them the wrath of the King of England and his associates. The King accepted the theory of the Sovereignty of God, but when that theory was translated into action among his subjects, he trembled. He could not agree with the Puritans that a common man, with an open Bible, would be capable of saying who should be the ruler of the land.

As the Pilgrims thought things over while sailing along in the Mayflower, they drew up the immortal "Compact," and when they landed in America, they established an actual Commonwealth, based upon the provisions of their "Compact" and that in turn was an expression of their interpretation of the "Social Gospel" of the Bible.

We rejoice in the fact that today the "Community Church" is being very vigorously advocated by modern religious leaders. We are hearing today that the Church of Jesus Christ should be the "Community Center," and in it we should feel free to think and to talk of all legitimate interests of the community. There are those who do not accept the idea, but they need only turn to the history of the Pilgrim Fathers, and they will see those saintly souls believed the Church to be the center of community life—religious, social, economic and political, and they behaved themselves accordingly. They preached a virile doctrine, and men heard their message gladly. No human interest was too unworthy for the consideration of the people of the community, and they often remained after the regular service and talked over community problems. We are bearing in mind that those people had broken away from all that was dear in life to them in order to establish a Commonwealth in which there should be no interferences by king, priest, bishop, or other ruler. Theirs was a real democracy, and they found it in the Bible.

While the Pilgrims were intensely interested in the civic and political welfare of their people, they felt they must apply the principles of their religion to all social, economic and other problems confronting them, and they used the same principles in their international relations. Their individual consciences were made stronger by the social conscience, and then it was translated into law, and that law had its footings in religion as they understood it, and there was no thought of making the Church and the State one, as they had seen it before.

We are coming to see the necessity of the moral element in social work, and in the discussion and enactment of local and national legislation. We are learning, with some of the labor leaders, that the labor question is a moral issue, and the differences between capital and labor can never be adjusted on any other basis than that found in the Bible. This is to many a new idea, but it was the ruling belief of the Pilgrims three hundred years ago.

The best social workers long ago saw that the doctor and nurse were handicapped in their treatment of patients, because when they have told the patient what to do and what not to do, the question then came as to whether the patient had in him that character that would enable him to follow instructions. Both the social worker and the religious leader are essential to the best work of the doctor and the nurse.

Every question that arose among the Pilgrims was "discussed, disputed and cleared up by the word of God," for it must be "agreeable to the Holy Scriptures." The Bible was their guide in practical ethics and conduct. When we talk of "community development" we are talking about a Bible truth and doctrine, which may be properly called "New and Old." A study of the teachings of Jesus the Great Saviour of men and of nations, will reveal our duties in regard to the full life relations of the men and women about us. Religious, Social, Economic, Political—all for God and God in all.

CLANTON'S NEED OF A COMMERCIAL CLUB

By Rev. P. G. Carter.

Prompted by the challenge of the enterprising and progressive little town of Thorsby who are justly proud of their Chamber of Commerce something has been said in the columns of The Union-Banner cencerning the need of such an organization for the city of Clanton. The suggestion is both timely and practical. As a commercial center we are losing out on every hand for the lack of such an organization which does more to build up and increase the commercial interests of a community than any other kind of an institution. As one who has had some experience in organizing and successfully fostering such an organization may I suggest some of the benefits of a Chamber of Commerce for Clanton.

The coming of the Alabama Power Company in our midst opens the door not only for good lights but should make it possible to build an electric railroad connecting Clanton with Maplesville on the M. & O. Railroad.

Among the numerous benefits of such an enterprise would be a much better market for our cotton.

New enterprises could be encouraged to locate here. With all the electric power that we need, with plenty of sites to offer as inducements, with the central location of the city, and splendid railroad facilities there is no reason why many new enterprises of one kind and another should not be induced to locate here.

Our educational interests could also be fostered by the club. We now have a splendid High School, but it could be better, and by the erection of a good Boarding House, and the proper efforts being made, the present institution could soon become a fine Agricultural HighSchool thereby enabling Clanton to cater to its rural constituency in a way that will repay itself many times in the near future.

The time is very near also when a Junior High School will be an absolute necessity. The High School Building is now filled to its utmost capacity. Notwithstanding the new addition that has been added to the Public School in another year it also will be filled. Where then shall we put the rapidly increasing number of scholars between the grammar age and High School Period? Yet as a County Seat we ought not to fail to make sufficient provision for the scholastic needs of our county. Good schools as well as good churches help to build up a community. I have been informed on good authority that the great State School now located at Montevallo could have been located in Clanton according to the expressed wishes and desires of its promoters, if the citizens of Clanton had pulled together and worked to that end.

A Chamber of Commerce is also a great booster for good county roads, for obviously the better the roads leading to the county seat the greater by far the amount of business transacted. The roads of Chilton County are a standing disgrace to civilization and to progressive America of the Twentieth Century, and this in the face that probably no county of its size in the state has as many automobiles that pay as many taxes for good roads as are found in this county. Other counties improve their roads why not us? A Chamber of Commerce through its prestige brought to bear on the right authorities or by other methods adopted can do much to remedy this situation.

What is true of the condition of the roads is to some extent true of the condition of the city itself. We need sidewalks all over the city, which not only are beneficial to keep the pedestrians out of the mud but which create an appearance of regularity, beauty and progressiveness to the city.

A Chamber of Commerce would also help to encourage and provide better markets for the farmers produce. It could devise means for increasing the business of the merchants, such as Special Sales Days and other occasions. In addition to this how beneficial to have a recognized organization or representative body to consider and determine matters of a commercial or civic nature that frequently occur in the life of every community. Eeven though but few new industries were located as the result, its influence in bringing the merchants together with one purpose and aim to build up the community in a proper progressive enterprising manner would alone justify its existence.

The organization would consist of a Board of Directors, and the payment of a nominal fee of perhaps $1.50 per month would be sufficient in the beginning to pay a capable man for a part of his time as secretary of the club, and defray all necessary office expenses.

The writer knows from successful experience in the past that this can be done. Why not call a mass meeting of the merchants, business and professional men and do it?

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

By Ewell Robinson

The Music Class of the High School enjoyed candy making Thursday afternoon. They had the faculty as their guest. Quite a pleasant afternoon was enjoyed by all.

Mrs. G. L. Clark was a visitor to the school Thursday.

We were glad to have Miss Sallie Parrish, a former pupil, to visit us Thursday.

The Senior Class regrets that Miss Lillian Mims has retired from school.

Grover Gilliland of the Freshman Class is back in school after a severe illness with pneumonia.

Lee Ray was recently elected as Vice-President of the Freshman Class.

Now that the foot ball season is over we are planning for a good basket ball team. A very enthusiastic meeting was held Thursday afternoon. Balls and equipment will be ordered and practice will begin at once. Chilton has some good basket ball material and should put out a good team.

The Expression Department of the Shelby County High School presented "The Adventures of Grandpa" at the High School Auditorium last Friday evening. This was a splendid play and was rendered exceptionally well. They reflected much credit upon their school. Nothing bespeaks the intelligence of a community more than an entertainment of this sort. It is regretted that the attendance was so small.

Whereas, the Senior Class of the Chilton County High School has learned of the death of Mrs. G. N. Mims, mother of Lillian Mims, a member of the Senior Class, therefore be it resolved by the Senior Class that we extend to our fellow class mate our heart felt sympathy in her sad bereavement.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be recorded on the minutes of the Senior Class, and that a copy be sent to Miss Mims. Also a copy furnished the local paper.

Have You Your "Edison and Music?"

Get this fascinating book at once. It's free. The complete, romantic story of Edison's seven-year struggle to produce perfect realism in the phonograph.

Beautiful illustrations of the 17 period cabinets. A truly worth-while book.

Stop-See these Xmas phonographs

YOU never saw more exquisite cabinets.

The world has never produced any more exquisite cabinets.

These cabinets are descended out of the Golden Age of Furniture.

This was the age when Europe built its most luxurious palaces, created its greatest works of art, developed its finest types of craftsmanship.

Mr. Edison's designers went back to the furniture masterpieces of this period. They adapted 17 of them for the modern American home. They made every Edison Cabinet a period cabinet,—even the least expensive.

You must see these cabinets. Only then will you appreciate what wonderful richness and atmosphere one will add to your home.

Ask about our Xmas Budget Plan. It manages your money economically. It makes 1921 help pay; and that's good business.

A Word About Prices

In 1914, as you can ascertain through practically any investment banker, the Edison Laboratories were selling phonographs on a narrower margin of profit than the other manufacturers. Since 1914, the price of the New Edison has advanced less than 15% —and a portion of this is war tax. "Edison stood the gaff" to keep his favorite invention within the reach of everyone.

Almost Invalid for Years Dreco Brings Happiness

Stomach Trouble, Constipation, Pains In the Back and Limbs, Nervousness and Dizzy Spells made Life Miserable.

Now Declares That the Root and Herb Remedy Dreco Has Given Relief.

"My wife has practically been an invalid for thirty years," are the words of that well known and highly respected citizen Mr. W. J. Feyason, of 635 Locust Street, Gadsden, Ala.

"She kept going down hill al lthe time, losing strength until she became weak, pale and very nervous and excitable. She lost her appetite and what food she did eat didn't seem to nourish her nor give any strength. It often fermented and caused her stomach to fill up with gas. Her bowels were very constipated and she was forced to take some kind of medicine mose every night for them. Her breath became foul and she hardly knew what a good nights rest was like. Dizzy spells often struck her and she would almost go blind from them.

"I've spent lots of money buying medicine for her and for doctor bills but nothing ever gave more than temporary relief. I've always put a lot of faith in the old time root and herb medicines so when I read about Dreco, I went right away and got her a bottle. It seemed to go right to the bottom of her troubles and now she is like a different person, both in looks and feelings. Her color has returned, eyes cleared up, and I'ye neve seen anyone gain strength so fast. She gets arfound now like she used to when a young woman. Her appetite is huge and what's more, the food agrees with her, never has gas and hasn't had a dizzy spell since she started on Dreco. We surely recommend Dreco."

All drugists now sell Dreco and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Company.

Bean Brothers sale will close next Saturday with the drawing for the $25 prize to be given the lucky holder of the ticket. Be there and see if you are the winner.—Adv.

SHOULTS

Hr. and Mrs. Allen Seeley from Pittsfield, Mass., arrived Friday night at the home of the latters parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Walker. After spending several weeks with relatives and friends here they expect to make their future home in Montgomery. Mrs. Seeley is pleasantly remembered by friends as Miss Lettie Walker, and is hartily welcomed by all.

Mr. Howard Oden is now making preparations to rebuild his dwelling house that as burned a few days ago.

Miss Nora Wallace is spending a few weeks with relatives in Birmingham.

Mr. Hinton Lawrence from Selma was at home Sunday.

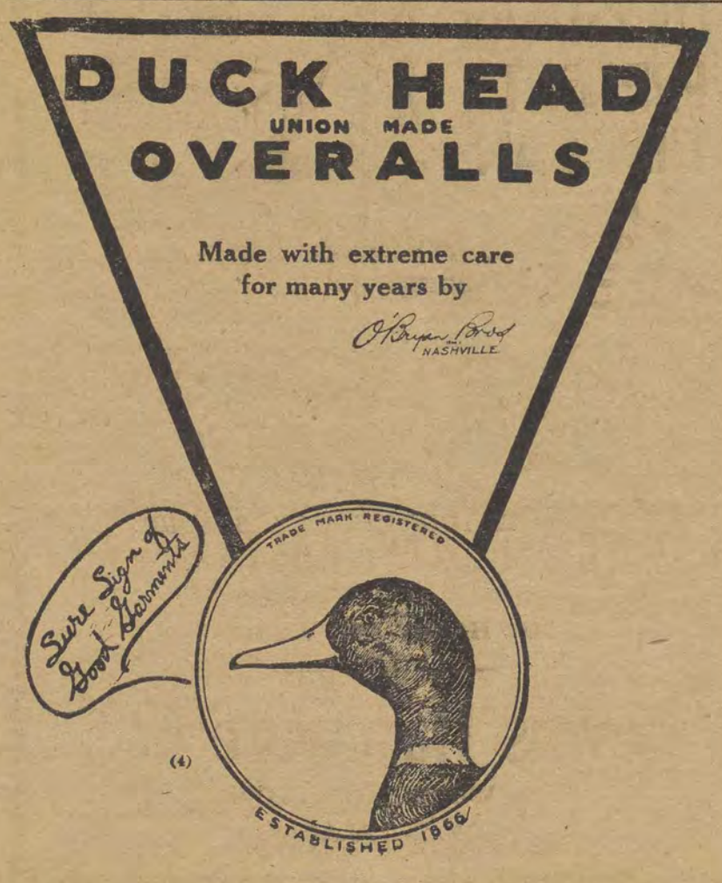
Mr. Emmett Lawrence has rented his farm and has moved to Lawley. We regret very much to see this family move away.

Mrs. Alice Rhodes from Selma has been spending a few days with relatives here.

IN MEMORY

On July 28, 1920 at the home of Rev. J. S. Kelley, God in His wisdom saw fit to take from our midst little Odell, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Kelley. Odell was born December 4, 1918. His suffering was great yet he bore it with patience wonderful to witness, and died without a struggle, conscious to the very last breath. In Jesus' arms he fell asleep to wake with God.

Dr. Eiland rendered skillful medical aid but all in vain. Relatives and friends did all in their power for the little sufferer, but God was ready for this jewel and gathered it home.



The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Joe Howell in Bethel Church, the remains being laid to rest in the Bethel cemetery.

We mourn his loss, but God knows best and we must submit to His will and wait in meekness of heart for Him to send the comforter to our broken hearts. Father, mother remember God doth all things well. Yes, little Odell is at perfect rest, safe with God never to suffer pain or sorrow, and no trouble shall ever roll across his peaceful breast. But perfect rest, joy and happiness is his forever more. At the great and final judgment day he will be standing arrayed in spotless white with crown and harp before the throne of God and our blessed Saviour and the Holy Ghost of Heaven. Yes, he will be standing among Holy angels singing praises to the Lamb that was slain. In that house not made with hands, he will dwell forever while endless ages roll.

GLENDALE

There will be a call meeting some time soon of the citizens of the community to consider the advisability of consolidating the schools.

Under the new compulsory law, which is a good one, the children must go, but it is too great a hardship in inclement weather. One reform calls for another and the consolidated school with its comfortable vehicles would appeal to the most stubborn opponent this week.

Miss Jimmie Franks of Winfield is visiting Mrs. Holly Franks.

The second recital by the pupils of Mrs. C. B. Norrell was given at the studio last Wednesday afternoon at 2:30. Those who took part were: Mr. Grover Gilliland, Miss Pansey Garrigen, Miss Jewel McDowell, Miss Gracie Mae Litzman, Miss Macie Adams, Mrs. J. F. Wright and Miss Rena Hawkins.

The solos were interspersed with duets which were very pleasing. The last number on the program was a song by Marjorie Mashal accompanied by her mother, Mrs. B. C. Marshal.

At 4 P. M. next Saturday Bean Bros. will give away the $25 prize closing their Big Saerfce Sale. You may hold the lucky tcket. Be there and see.—Adv.

Republicans Have Clean Field, Underwood Says

Democrats Not to Propose General Legislation in Present Session of Congress.

Washington, Nov. 27—"The Republicans are paddling the canoes and the Democrats are only passengers therefore, the Democrats will not propose any general legislation at the coming session," according to an authoritative statement made today by Senator Underwood, of Alabama, the minority leader, upon his return to the capital.

Inasmuch as Republican leaders already have announced that they will not undertake to consider any general legislative measures until the advent of the Harding administration, Senator Underwood's announcement makes it a certainty that the short session will be devoted exclusively to the passage of the supply bills and that consideration of all other proposed legislation will go over.

Senator Underwood made clear that the disposition of the minority will be to give the Republicans a clear field and permit them to fix the amounts of the appropriation bills at whatever figures they may see fit.

Regarding Treaty

So far as action on the treaty is concerned, Senator Underwood shares the opinion of Senator Hitchcock and other leading Democrats that the president is not likely to send that document back to the Senate. While Senator Underwood refuses to believe that the defeat of the Democrats was due solely to the league issue, he is of the opinion that President Wilson, himself, will realize the futility of submitting the treaty again to the Senate, where it inevitably would be pigeon-holed by the Foreign Relations Committee.

Although the Democratic minority in Congress has thus indicated its intention of holding off from attacks on the Republican program for the short session, this purpose does not apply to the extra session which will be called very shortly after Senator Harding takes office. When the session opens and legislative measures are proposed by the majority, the Democrats intend to "have something to say," according to Senator Underwood. Every item on the Republican program will be most carefully scrutinized and subjected to attack if in opposition to the principles upon which the leaders of the minority hope to rebuild their party.

Senator Underwood uttered a word of caution to the Republicans in this matter of precipitate action toward revision of the tariff. He pointed out that conditions in all the European markets have undergone marked changes since the Underwood-Simmons tariff law, which is now on the statute books, was written. Aribitrary changes in the rates now in force will not necessarily produce more revenue, Senator Underwood pointed out, because of the danger that the rates may be raised so high that importations will be cut off entirely and the result will be less instead of more revenue. The senator said:

"With the knowledge I now have of tariff conditions, I would be unwilling to undertake to change the rates without very thorough study of markets abroad. If we put a 30 per cent tax on shoes, for instance, no shoes would come in and then we would get no revenue. The tariff rates must be adjusted to the industrial and financial conditions in the countries from which the flow of imports come, and it will be very easy to so tinker with the tariff as to cut off many of the important sources of revenue now available."

Disagrees With Curtis.

Senator Underwood does not agree with Senator Curtis, Republican whip, who has advanced the proposal of raising the ad valorem taxes high enough to produce $1,000,000,000 annually from the customs. In the opinion of Senator Underwood, this plan is not practicable; he does not believe it will be possible to find a sufficient number of articles upon which the rates can be raised to produce anything like the figure named.

There is considerable agitation in parts of the South for tariff revision on staples produced in that section, Senator Underwood said. Louisiana wants a higher rate on sugar and Texas and other states would like protection for the cotton industries.

In these cases, as in the others mentioned, Senator Underwood said there is danger in putting the rates too high, thereby shutting off all imports on which the tariff is collected.

Smoot Plans Fight.

Senator Reed Smoot, of Utah, who is expected here next Tuesday, will launch a fight to have an embargo placed against all wool importations in order to give Western wool men a chance to adjust themselves to changed conditions due to the war.

It is understood also that the wheat growers of the Northwest will ask for an embargo against Canadian wheat, which has been underselling the home product in the American markets.

The filing of these requests probably will lead to a general movement to shut off imports on a great variety of articles in order to afford protection to the Americans interested in those particular industries.

The happiest Christmas is obtained by buying the best gifts. The best are at Upchurch's. A look will convince you. Prices right.—Adv.

THUMBS DOWN FOR FUTURE APPOINTMENTS.

Washington, Dec. 7—"The people want a clean sweep," declares the Republican Publicity Association, thru its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr., in the following statement:

"By a plurality of more than six millions—a plurality unprecedented in the history of the United States—the people of this country, at the November elections, voted for a change of administration. The people want a change more than they ever before wanted anything in American government. They want a clean sweep from top to bottom. They have expressed in the most emphatic manner possible their dissatisfaction not only with President Wilson, but with the type of men he has been accustomed to appoint to public service.

"In view of this expression in such definite terms direct from the people, is it not the duty of the United States Senate to refuse to confirm the appointment of those men who have recently or who may hereafter be nominated by the President for important official positions? Inexperience and incompetency seem to have been determining qualifications when President Wilson has made selections for important government positions. That there have been some exceptions to the rule does not alter the fact, and the country, therefore, looks with suspicion upon any appointment President Wilson may now make. Wastefulness and inefficiency if nothing worse, have characterized almost every department during the present administration and particularly during the past four years. Things have been going from bad to worse.

"Rejection of the recent appointments to the Shipping Board is certainly desirable. A number of vacancies on the Board have existed for many months without any move on the part of the President to fill the positions. After all this delay, no great injury can be done if the appointments he has made are permitted to be temporary, and terminated with the action of the Senate rejecting the appointments.

"In instances where nominations have been made the nominees will fill their positions until the Senate has acted. Public service will suffer during that period only as it has suffered in the past, through the lack of qualifications on the part of those selected by President Wilson to perform governmentai duties.

"By an overwhelming majority the people of the country expressed their confidence in Warren G. Harding as a chief executive for the nation. Mr. Harding will be responsible for the administration of government affairs for the next four years. In order that he may have power commensurate with his responsibilities and may have under him men of whose qualifications he is the judge, President Wilson's recent and future appointments should be rejected and the new President given an opportunity to surround himself with men of experience and ability who will aid him in carrying out the promises made by him when he was a candidate.

"Thus will the public interest best be served."

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

There was a good Sunday School attendance last Sunday there being 111 present. With a proper equipment we believe that we could soon have a Sunday School of at least 200, therefore in our future financial plans let us not forget to make provision for the new building which we expect to begin in the Spring.

The audiences on Sunday were not large but very appreciative, and the sermon on Jonah according to numerous expressions from those who heard it much enjoyed. The regular church attendant gets the most out of the services of the church. The casual attendant might happen to be present some Sunday when the preacher is not up to the usual mark, and be somewhat disappointed. The preachers are like all other folks. They have their off days for various reasons. The person who regularly attends the services therefore get his good sermons as well as his mediocre ones. Your presence at all of the services does more to build up the church and maintain its interest than all the money you may pay for its support. Good congregations draw the crowds and help to make visitors feel at home. Poor crowds create a chill both for the audience and the preacher. Every member of the church roll is responsible unless hindered by physical reasons by their attendance for the success of the church, and it takes the hearty cooperation of everyone to make it a great success.

Services will be held next Sunday as usual Morning and Evening. Sunday School at 10:00 A. M. Junior B. Y. P. U. at 3:00 P. M. Sunbeams at 2:00 P. M. and Seniors at 6:30 P. M.

We cordially invite every body to theses services. Come thou with us and we will do thee good. Remember the Sunday School Christmas Tree on Christmas Eve.

Mr. Jackson of the store of W. W. Jackson at Wadsworth, was in Clanton Wednesday evening to get The Baner Print Shop to print him some advertising matter for his big sale which is to start the 15th. Mr. Jackson said he had been to Montgomery and got prices on printing, but he preferred to trade with country fellows like himself, hence he came to see the Banner force. We appreciate such a spirit in the business men of our territory. Mr. Jackson's store is offering their customers some good prices on merchandise, and we hope they will get good results from their advertising.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

JERSEY SENATOR SAYS SAVE AMERICAN IDEALS

Unwilling to Join League Which Does Not Subscribe to Principles Underlying Our Government

Washington, December 13.—Senator J. S. Frelinghuysen, of New Jersey, who accompanied President Harding on his trip to Panama, continues to be irreconcilably against the league of nations in any form because opposed to the principles upon which the American government was founded. He says:

"I am for everything that really is for the upbuilding and betterment of this America in which we live. For that reason I am for the repeal of the Panama Canal toll act so that America may enable the ships of her new merchant marine to pass through the canal the people of this country built without payment of a toll to British commerce, for that is what the present law means. For the same reason I am opposed to the present league of nations covenant. Were we to enter it we would infringe those great principles upon which our government was founded and which are the bases of all our greatness and our inventive genuis. I am opposed to all monarchies and empires, and I cannot join with the Pecksniffs and Lickspittles who would make a monarchy appear more conserving of liberty than is free America. I do not want to see the vitality of the United States utilized to maintain the dominion of empires anywhere.

"We hold that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed. The people of Ireland, the people of India, the people of Korea, the people of the Philippines have an inherent right to be free. I do not desire to see the United States enter into any league with foreign powers which would even tend to with hold from them the eventual accomplishment of that right. We also consider it self-evident that church and state should be separated, each performing its function for the good of all when apart and both suffering when either seeks to control the other. We have enjoyed the blessings of this separation so long that we hardly give it a second thought. Yet this principle does not exist in the states which are members of the league now assembled at Geneva. We stated in the Declaration of Independence, we provided in our Constitution, we fought through four long and bloody years because we believed that all men are created equal in opportunity and under the law. Why should we minimize that principle by allegiance to a league which does not guarantee it? We hold that a Republican form of government, based upon equality of representation and universal suffrage of all men and women without restriction as to wealth, creed or color, based upon a system of checks and balances between the legislative, executive and judicial branches, so that no man or set of men may obtain and keep arbitrary power, is the best form of government in the world.

"The present league of nations does not even mention any of those principles. It sets forth in no glorious preamble to an immortal document that these God-given principles are for all men for all time. Yet our fathers died for these principles. They left the Old World and founded this nation in the New in order that these principles might be established and preserved. They held them dearer than peace, dearer than life without them, and so they fought and died for them. We have been told that the league will assure permanent peace, as though that in itself were to be sought for above every other good. I do not believe it will bring peace. I am of the opinion that it will do the opposite. But even if it were true, I should be as bitterly opposed to it unless it assured a peace which would perpetuate everywhere the ideals upon which America was founded."

HARDING PLEDGES HIS GOOD WILL TO SENATE

CONGRESS TO COME INTO ITS OWN

Washington, Dec. 13,—"Mr. Harding's speech to the United States Senate on December 6th was an assurance to Congress and to the people that the election to the Presidency of one who has served in the National Legislature was a wise proceeding," declares the Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr.

"The keynote of the President-designate's short address is to be found in his declaration:

" 'When my responsibilities begin in the executive capacity I shall be as mindful of the Senate's responsibilities as I have been jealous of them as a member, but I mean at the same time to be just as insistent about the responsibilities of the executive. Our governmental good fortune does not lie in any surrender at either end of the avenue, but in the co-ordination and co-operation which becomes the two in a great and truly representative popular government.'

"No intimation of a 'Senate oligarchy' is to be found in such a clear-cut statement, while, on the other hand the address breathes the determination to do away with the dictatorship under which this country for eight years has been laboring. 'I like the freedom, the association, the patriotic sense of responsibility which abides here,' asserted the speaker. 'I am conscious of the great place which Congress holds under our Constitution, and particularly sensible to the obligations of the Senate,' and he followed this with the expression of 'the wish of a colleague for the confidence and co-operation of the members of this body in the four years which begin next March 4th.'

"Something of a similar attitude of mind was indicated by the Democratic party when in its platform of 1912, on which the present chief executive was elected, it was declared:

" 'We believe in the preservation and maintenance in their full strength and integrity of the three co-ordinate branches of the Federal Government—the executive, the legislative, and the judicial—each keeping within its own bounds and not encroaching upon the just powers of either of the others.'

"But within a very short time after his inauguration, Mr. Wilson had reduced the Democratic Congress to such pitiful subservience that it has been rightly named a 'rubber stamp Congress,' and whatever his majority might say of him in the cloak-rooms, they jumped at the crack of his lash. The consequences of his despotism were visited on the nation. Ours became a one-man government. There was little Congressional co-operation with the executive, but much sullen assent to his commands, a great deal of shifting of responsibility to his shouldres, which meant laws miserably framed or accepted as worded by an Administration whose acquaintance with the nation's needs were derived from books or lacking altogether. Hence the legislative mess in which the country finds itself today.

"Nor did Mr. Harding neglect the Opposition: 'I am sure that the necessity of wise solution will inspire us to work to gether, to take common counsel, to be tolerant of one another and give the best which is in all of us to attain the ends which become our Republic at home and will maintain its high place among the nations of the earth.' Admitting that there could not always be agreement, he hoped to find common ground in the spirit of service, or, as Tennyson puts it: 'But for some true result of good, all parties work together.'

"The President-designate's remarks were an earnest of better understandings between the two branches of government. It is safe to predict that Mr. Harding's administration will go far toward vindicating the belief that men trained in the National Legislature are best equipped for the responsibilities of Chief Executive."

PANAMA CANAL NOT MAKING A PTOFIT NOW

Washington, Dec. 13.—Much is heard in the papers of the 'profits' of the Panama Canal," says the Republican Publicity Association, through its President, Hon. Jonathan Bourne, Jr. "In the last fiscal year it is stated that tolls collected exceeded expenses by $2,387,599. That is all very well, but it does not represent profit in any sense of the word. In every business establishment the first consideration is to earn enough money to pay interest on the investment, and the next is to put money into an amortization fund or else write off a certain amount for depreciation each year. After those items are cared for then it is time to think of profits, deducting, of course, the cost of operation. In reporting on the Canal no account whatever is taken of interest or amortization. If they were considered, the so-called fixed charges would be many times the receipts from tolls.

"The Canal was not built, however, as a money making institution, but rather as a better means of defense of the two coasts of the United States and as an aid to American commerce and to that of the world. It is succussful in those respects. In fact, it is not nconceivable that in the future the Canal may enable the rapid concentration of our fleet at a threatened point on one coast or the other and save the nation from disaster. Viewed in that light the Panama Canal venture is a big ecnomic success. It is a mistake to lead the people to believe that a few million dollars on one side or the other of the ledger in the matter of tolls and operation costs amounts to anything. They should be led to look at the project in the light in which it was conceived, and in its relation to our economic welfare and national safety."

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

The threatening elements of the weather did not dampen the ardour of the Sunday School last Sunday as 113 pupils were present. Also quite a good congregation in the morning to hear the practical sermon on The Making of Man. Owing to the rain at night just a little handful of folks were present, but a very pleasant hour was spent in the company of the Apostle Paul.

The regular services will be held next Sunday. The morning subject will be "The Joy of Religion."

If you are feeling sorry and sad
And want to feel happy and glad;
Come to hear this sermon on Sunday
It will help to cure Blues Monday.

The morning topic will be helpful, practical and humorous. A full church attendance will make each one present feel better. A good way to begin Christmas week. The morning service will be followed by a brief church conference as usual on the third Sunday, and the service will be so arranged as not to keep the congregation much longer if any after the regular time for closing.

The subject for the night service will be "The Ancient and Modern Judas, or hot shot from the shoulder against "Can't and Hypocrisy."

The more popular service is at night, as what is generally known as the Popular Crowd are present at night. We would like to make this the service for the masses. Though the building is not at all elegant you can, by your presence, help to furnish it and make it look better inside if not outside. We need you, we want you, the doors are wide open, the hand of welcome is extended.

The Christmas tree entertainment will be held on Friday, December 24. We are going to make every effort to get Santa Claus to stop at this church on his way to the North.

The regular Ladies Aid meets on next Monday. Appropriate Christmas services will be observed on Sunday, December 26th.

P. G. CARTER,
Pastor.

IN MEMORY

The death angel visited the home of A. J. Gray on Sept. 26th, 1920, and carried his soul to that home beyond the skies.

Mr. Gray was born March 28th. 1860, and died Sept. 26th, 1920, being nearly 61 years old at time of his death.

He left behind to mourn his loss a wife and seven children and a host of relatives and friends. Weep not dear friends and relatives for he has paid the debt that we must pay sooner or later. He has gone to dwell with Him above who has said, Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest. Oh! that sweet rest in Christ Jesus that we all desire. We should all prepare for we know not when we may be called to go. We know not when we may be called to face that awful bar of judgment where no man can answer for another, but for himself alone. His will shall be done and not ours. Let us try to live in the way that God has commanded us to live, that we may meet our dear loved ones that have gone before us. There is a time coming when we must say "Farewell" and as our Redeemer saw fit to take our dear one from us we should prepare to meet him in that better world that shall never end, where sin and sorrow comes no more.

Dear friends and relatives you have my heart felt wishes. May the blessings of our blessed Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ rest and abide with you now and forever more, is my prayer.

Written by his son-in-law by request.

A. R. SCOTT.

WILL WORK STREETS

The officials of the town of Clanton promise us some improved streets as soon as the weather opens up in the spring so the work can be pushed forward.

In this connection the Town has bought a Fordson Tractor with which to pull the grading machines.

We hope the effort will meet with success and result in better streets for Clanton.

MISS WILLIAMS WORK-FOR GOLD STAR COUNTY

On Dec. 2, we received a letter from our State Secertary saying they were very much in need of money to help meet their plans, and unless the counties responded to their call this great work would be hindered. We are glad to say that Chilton is climbing, but we are far from the top yet, and we are asked by the state that each Sunday School give as much as one dollar per class. We know that even now we havent a school in Chilton county that couldn't give that much. And we are trying so hard to get at least $50.00 before Christmas, and we urge every school that can possibly do so to send us just what they feel like they can give. The Thorsby Congregational school pledged $10.00, on Dec. 2, I received a check for $17.50, a special contribution of $7.50. Walnut Creek pledged $5.00 and paid $8.60, making it another "over-the-top" school. If a few more of our schools would contribute as liberal as these two we wouldn't have any trouble getting the $96.25 that is yet due.

We are trying so hard to make Chilton County a Gold Star County before the State Convention which will be held in Sheffield in April, and our allottment is one of the points we must reach to make it. When we reach the standard we won't have so many people reported out of Sunday school, but we will know how many are in Sunday school, and every one in Chilton will be glad to know we are doing something in this great work.

DELLA WILLIAMS,
Sec. and Treas.

PERSONALS

Mrs. M. J. Soberg is visiting in Birmingham with her daughter, Mrs. Walter Morgan.

Edwin Howard, who is now in the Naval Service, was at home for a few days, visiting with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Howard.

Mrs. John Johnson and daughter, Beatrice, motored to Clanton Saturday and spent the day shopping.

Mrs. Anna S. Villadsen has returned from Birmingham where she has been visiting with relatives.

Mrs. James E. Biggs is spending a few days in Birmingham this week doing her Xmas. shopping.

The Bazaar which was held Saturday, proved a big success. All the articles were disposed of also all the refreshments, so that quite a neat sum was realized, which will benefit Thorsby Institute.

On Saturday night a group of friends gave a surprise party for Edwin Howard, who is at home on a furlough. An enjoyable time was reported by all who attended this interesting event.

The Lutheran Ladies Aid Society was entertained last week by Mrs. G. Berlin at her home. The usual business program was carried on, after which delightful refreshments were served. Victrola music was enjoyed during the afternoon.

The many friends of Miss Agnes Gerald will be pleased to learn that she intends to spend the holidays in Thorsby. Miss Gerald is a student at Piedmont College, Ga. She has also been studying voice and piano for some time and she will be heard in several numbers at the concert which is to be given at the Lutheran Church New Year's Eve.

Remember Christmas is soon here and the merchants are all lined up with full lines of holiday goods. Buy at home, and you not only help your merchant, but you will also help your community.

On next Monday evening, December 20th, the open forum meeting of the Chamber of Commerce will be held. It is hoped that all members and prospective members be in attendance at this meeting as matters for the welfare of the town will be taken up. Committees on the various activities of the chamber have been organized, and it is hoped that many benefits will result from their activities.

We understand that Mr. W. H. Goodgame is to add another feature to his planing mill in the erection of a dry kiln. Lumber that has gone through the kiln, is said to be worth considerable more. The work on the new mill is progrossing steadily, and it will be in operation before the year is up.

People on trains as well as those who pass on the highway will soon have their attention called to a large sign to be erected in town alongside the highway which reads: "For all information ask Thorsby Chamber of Commerce."

The purpose of the sign is to let people know that we have a Chamber of Commerce, which will give to people any and all information, that they may wish concerning this place and locality. It is but the beginning of an extensive plan of advertising to be launched.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

There will be services at the Baptist Church next Sunday morning and evening. The sermon will be delivered by the Pastor, Rev. W. P. Lowery. The B. Y. P. U will hold its meeting at the usual hour.

The next meeting of the Ladies Guild will be held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Goddard.

The Luther League of the Lutheran Church wishes to announce that on New Year's Eve. they will give a musical concert at the church. This concert will consist of vocal duets and solos, instrumental and quartetts. Selections will also be rendered by our orchestra which you all know is always good. An unusual treat is promised to all who attend this concert. Admission will be 15 and 25c. After the concert coffee and cake will be served at the Hardware store while waiting for the New Year.

Miss Marjorie Fox, teacher of music at Thorsby Institute, announces that on next Friday night, December 17th, the pupils of the music department will give a recital at Bates Hall. All are cordially invited to attend.

On Saturday night, December 18th, the two sides of the Helen Kellar Literary Society will hold their contest. This program, which consists of musical selections, readings, debates, etc., always proves very interesting, so you can't afford to miss Saturday night at Bates Hall.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Catarrhal Deafness that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Medicine. Circulars free. All Druggists, 75c.

We would like to suggest that the stock holders in the local phone system, will at their annual meeting, look into the matter of getting the lines in better shape. There is no reason why we should not have better phone service in and out of town, so that we can easily get Mr. Farmer, when we want him, and both hear and be heard by him. It will be advantageous for both the merchant and farmer that good service be maintained.

666 is a prescription for Colds, Fever and LaGrippe. It's the most speedy remedy we know.

"Well, Old Man, How Are You?"

If Your Blood Is Rich and Red You Say, "Fine."

ENTHUSIASM IS RED-BLOODED

Try Pepto-Mangan if You Feel Weak and Look Pale

Sometimes you are almost down and out. You know you are not really sick, but you have a petered-out feeling. You eat little. You drag along. In the morning you look at your face in the mirror. You feel years older when you see how pale and haggard you are.

It is your blood. It needs red corpuscles. Instead of poking along half sick, why don't you try taking Pepto-Mangan, the blood tonic? It has just the ingredients weak blood needs. With red blood your energy and enthusiasm return. You eat better. You tackle and achieve.

Pepto-Mangan is widely and heartily endorsed by physicians. It is effective and easy to take. It is sold in both liquid and tablet form. The medicinal properties are identical.

Sold at any drug store. But be sure to get the genuine Pepto-Mangan—"Gude's." Ask for it by the name and be sure the full name, "Gude's Pepto-Mangan," is on the package.—Advertisement.

Out of town shoppers railroad fare refunded making purchases of $50.00 or more within radius of 25 miles.—Elmore's, Clanton, Ala.

At some time after midnight Saturday night the store of Harper and Billingsley was broken into and several articles of wearing apparel and food were taken. From the nature of the goods taken it appeared to be done by some boys who were traveling incognito on a passing freight and as the train stopped at the nearby switch, they thought it time to change clothes and eat lunch. They proceeded to break the front door glass and unlatch the lock. After taking some coats, pants, shirts and overalls, also some articles of food they stopped in the park where they effected the change of rainment.

In their hurry to catch the train as it left they left some of their old clothes which they had discarded. It is reported that they had been seen leaving Calera in the early hours Sunday morning, but further clues of their whereabouts have not been received.

666 will break a Cold, Fever and Grippe quicker than anything we know, preventing pneumonia.

CARDUI HELPED REGAIN STRENGTH

Alabama Lady Was Sick For Three Years, Suffering Pain, Nervous and Depressed—Read Her Own Story of Recovery.

Paint Rock, Ala.—Mrs. C. M. Stegall, of near here, recently related the following interesting account of her recovery: "I was in a weakened condition. I was sick three years in bed, suffering a great deal of pain, weak, nervous, depressed. I was so weak, I couldn't walk across the floor; just had to lay and my little ones do the work. I was almost dead. I tried every thing I heard of, and a number of doctors. Still I didn't get any relief. I couldn't eat, and slept poorly. I believe if I hadn't heard of and taken Cardui I would have died. I bought six bottles, after a neighbor told me what it did for her.

"I began to eat and sleep, began to gain my strength and am now well and strong. I haven't had any trouble since . . . I sure can testify to the good that Cardui did me. I don't think there is a better tonic made and I believe it saved my life."

For over 40 years, thousands of women have used Cardui successfully, in the treatment of many womanly ailments.

If you suffer as these women did, take Cardui. It may help you, too.

GIVE US BETTER SERVICE

The stockholders of the Peoples Telephone Company will have a meeting in Clanton next Monday. It will be the annual meeting for the purpose of electing officers for the next year and employing some one to operate the exchange in Clanton.

It is to be hoped that some plan will be devised for the next year that will give us better local telephone service. For the past few months especially, and practically all the past year the service has been very bad indeed. In fact unless it can be improved it is not worth having. We would get along just as well and probably better without any telephone at all.

We don't know who, if anybody, is to blame for this poor service. But we do know that the telephone system can be made serviceable, and it should be done without delay. Here's hoping that somebody will present the meeting next Monday with a formula that will put the telephones back to a useful basis.

WATCHING DIPPING VATS

The men who were deputized last spring to watch the dipipng vats when the dynamite process was in action are getting considerably riled because the county has not paid them for their services. They are of the opinion that they ought to be paid for their services and we agree with them exactly.

But then there is the question of the legality of the county's right to issue them warrants for this service. The Commissioners Court, we feel sure, wants to see these men paid for their services, and would be glad to issue them warrants for same, if they only knew it was legal to do so.

A few of those men who were employed to watch vats have asked that all who rendered such service meet the Commissioners Court here on January 4th to see if some adjustment of the matter can be reached. Judge Reynolds also invites these men to come before the Court in regard to the matter.

We hope it can be adjusted without further friction, so that the men who watched vats will be paid for the service, and the county officers in turn stand in the clear in paying them out of the county funds.

PRINTERS INK PAYS

The merchants who have used the most printers ink in their business during the past four months are the least hurt by the slump in prices. They have sacrificed much money on their stock by selling it below cost. But the people who trade at their stores have got the benefit of the loss of the merchant.

Those merchants who took the first chance to reduce their goods and were liberal in advertising their reductions to the public, have met a ready response from the buyers. The result is that those merchants are now more nearly down to the level of markets, where all merchants must eventually come. Those fellows who are holding on and taking their losses reluctantly are treading on thin air with no wind to drive their sails.

XMAS GREETINGS FROM POPE

Pope Benedict XV head of the Roman Catholic Church of the world and reputed vice-gerent of Christ on earth, has sent his Xmas greetings to that great body of Catholics and Knights of Columbus in America. He especially thanks and praises his devotees in America for the splendid efforts they have put forth in the past year to make America Catholic.

We may not be surprised in a few years to see the Catholics celebrating the complete capture of America and the overthrow of our system of free government. That is what they are planning for, and if the liberty-loving free-born sons and daughters of our land don't rise up and halt the procession they will accomplish their crafty designs.

THE SERPENT HE WARMED

Reports, apparently inspired from force, are being circulated to the effect that bolshevik influences are trying to depose President Gompers of the American Federation of Labor. Now it is apparent what a grave mistake Mr. Gompers made in not fighting the McNamaras, the Mooneys, the striking Boston policemen, the Foster steel strikers, and the coal strikers whom the President and the Attorney General denounced as criminal, and various other disturbing elements in the Federation.

REPUBLICANS IN THE SOUTH

With the "Solid" South broken, and the greatest wave of Republcan sentiment all over this country that there has ever been, the day of opportunity for the Republican party in the South has dawned. If present existing conditions in politics do not furnish the permanent foundation for Republican strength in the South on an equal with Democratic strength, neither the present generation nor the succeeding one will ever see Republicanism established in Dixie.

There were many people in the South who fought in the Confederate armies, still believing in the preservation of the Union and at heart were Republicans from principle. But reconstruction days under radical Republican administation made of those men bitter enemies of Republicanism because it was sought to put the white people of the South under the domination of the negro. One class of people in the South were anti-Republican before secession; another class became anti-Republican because of the Civil War; a third class became anti-Republican because of reconstruction. These three classes composed all the people in the South, and hence the new era after the Civil War found nothing but Democrats here.

Various conditions and causes of course have driven men away from the Democratic party in the last few years. Other conditions and causes have naturally attracted them to the Republican party. The net result of these workings is found in the fact that in the last four years Tennessee and Oklahoma gained enough Republican votes to land those states in the Republican column on Nov. 2. During the same four year period Alabama gained over fifty thousand Republican votes.

Now returning to the question of the negro, we might say in all truth that the South is white, whether Democratic or Republican. National Republican party leaders must recognize that Republicans in the South are going to be as insistent for white supremacy down here as their Democratic neighbors are. And upon this very important phase of the question must be builded the future of the Republican party in the South if it is going to have any future here.

The great growth of Republican favor in the South has come about because the white people here who are of Republican sentiment have come to believe that this country and the Republican leaders are not going ever to try to place the negro in the South on on equal and superior to the white man. This confidence in the broad vision and common sense of the National Republican leaders caused thousands of white people in the South to vote the Republican ticket this year. This confidence must not be betrayed by party leaders. If it is, then it will be taps for Republicanism in the South.

If the Republican leaders at Washington will demonstrate to us that the negro is going to be kept in his place in Republican Tennessee and Republican Oklahoma, the same as he would be in Democratic Tennessee and Democratic Oklahoma, it will mean the acknowledgment of other states of the South to the rightness they already know exists in Republican economic and government principles.

The negro question in the South is and should be the same,whether the state or the United States is Democratic or Republican. The negroes have got no business running things in Tennessee or Oklahoma just because those states are now Republicon. If Mr. Negro wants to sit beside white people in railroad trains let him go north of the Mason and Dixon line where he does not smell offensive to Democratic nor Republicans. If those states want to regard the negro thus, let them do it. The Souh, neither Republicans nor Democrats, take that kind of a view of him.

The negro is not a party problem in the North. That is, they are not all in one party, nor the special favorites of one party. Of course both parties up there try to get their votes.

The negro must not be fastened upon the Republican party in the South. He must not be fastened upon any party anywhere.

The way of Republicanism is open in the South. Show us that the Republican leaders of the North are willing to let the Souh alone in its negro problem, just as the Democratic leaders let it alone, and more states will be Republican. But if we are to be forced to kneel to the negro again, even those in the South who voted the Republican ticket this year will very promptly take backtrack.

If the Republican party fools them this time, it will be good night for Republicanism in Dixie for a mighty long time.

Just after No. 3 ran Wednesday night, we were surprised to see an an old friend back in Clanton in the person of Jim Lowe. Jim has for soveral months been working in Akron, Ohio, and he returns looking fine and dandy.

BENSON AWAKES

Evidence calling for criminal prosecutions in about a dozen cases have been submitted to the Department of Justice by Chairman Benson of the Shipping Board. The chairman is careful to explain that the cases are in no sense an outgrowth of the investigation being carried out by the Congressional Committee. The public, however, is apt to suspect a pretty close connection between the two.

THE EDITOR

Being an editor is a busy business. When grammatical or typographical errors appear the editor is to blame. When an advertisement is omitted the editor is to blame. When twenty little carrier boys miss one or two patrons, the editor is to blame. When any one connected with the newspaper makes any sort of mistake, the editor is to blame. When the policy of the newspaper runs contrary to yours, the editor is to blame. When an item of news is overlooked or necessarily omitted for lack of space, the editor is to blame. When a bill is wrong, the editor is to blame. You may not believe it, but God Almighty never put a man on earth that could make as many mistakes as an editor in one single day. —"Twinkles" in Tuscaloosa News.

NOTICE

Editor Union-Banner,

The Commissioners Court has been trying to get the Attorney General and Govenor to give an order for them to pay for watching the dipping vats last spring. The Attorney General says if the Govenor will give the order the Commissioners Court can legally pass the claims.

We have not been able up to this time to get the order, and it may take a suit to determine the legality of the claims.

The Commissioners Court will be in session January 4th, 1921, and would be glad for all that are interested in getting their pay for watching the vats to meet them at 10 o'clock A.M.

Respectfully,
L. H. REYNOLDS,
Judge of Probate.

A LETTER FROM MR. LEONARD MARTIN

Talladega, Ala., Dec. 10, 1920.

To the Editor of The Union-Banner and to my friends of Chilton County:

I kindly ask for a small space in your paper to say to my friends that it being only fifteen days until Christ's birthday, no doubt many of my friends will recall to memory the ways and means by which I used to celebrate that day. I am glad indeed to inform you of the fact that being superintendent of the Sunday School at the Second Baptist Church in Talladega, we are arranging for a Christman tree for the children at this church and also arranging a program to suit this occasion. I would indeed be glad to know if all of my former associates of Chilton County would spend this one Christmas, as well as many others, in a different way from the way we used to spend it. It is a great pleasure to me to state to you most emphatically that I have now been entirely free from the whiskey habit for over two years and that I have been, according to my judgment, a christian worker for the past fifteen months. Am truly glad to say that I feel like I am still growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth each day. I would not have you believe or feel like in the least that I am writing this for any one to think that I am praising my self—be it far from that. I am writing this hoping this will be some benefit to some of my friends who might be led astray as I once have been. I yet realize the fact that we are none free from sin because "there is none good, no not one." But, thanks be to God, that he has left a way for our escape. Had it not have been for this we would have all been lost. I am praising God for his mighty works among men because he has used other men instrumentally in his hands to save my soul from enternal damnation, woe and misery. Since he has used other men for the saving of my soul, likewise I am trying to be instrumental in his hands for the saving of others.

I hope some time in the future I may have the opportunity to take the pulpit again in Chilton County to talk to my friends in person along this line. God says in his word that whosoever believeth on him shall not perish but have eternal life, therefore let us all believe on him and lean on his everlasting arm.

Yours as a Christian worker and a true friend to the people of Chilton County..

L. P. MARTIN,
Talladega, Ala., Box 32.

Mr. Jimmie Dykes of Route 2, was in Clanton Wednesday. While here he came in and paid up his subscription to the Banner.

GOODBYE, AND GET OUT!

The people not only want to say goodbye to Mr. Wilson on March 4th, but to every Wilson appointee to a position of trust as well. They signify that desire in the huge protest against Wilsonism on November 2nd. It is entirely unlikely, therefore, that the Senate will confirm the appointments now pending before it. Rather will the appointees be permitted to go out of office automatically when Congress comes to an end on the 4th of March. By so doing President Harding will have a free rein for his own policies without being hampered by a lot of Wilson holdovers.

CAPITOL CHAT

A VALUABLE ADDITION

Washington, Dec. 15.—Honorable Samuel S. Arentz of Nevada who will be a Member of the next Congress brings to his legislative duties a very broad practical experience. After technical training in an educational institution in Chicago he worked as a machinist draftsman, as a surveyor, assayor, mucker miner and timberman. He worked in the copper mines of Lake Superior, the gold and copper mines of Montana, the Black Hills of South Dakota, and in mining districts in Idaho, Utah and Arizona. He was Superintendent of the Nevada Douglas Copper Company, Chief Engineer of the Nevada Copper Belt Railroad, and Superintendent of construction of the Salt Lake and Utah Railroad Company. He has also served as consulting engineer for the United States Bureau of Mines and in a similar capacity in the operations of his own mining properties in Nevada, Utah and California. During the war he was Captain of Engineers in the United States Army. Notwithstanding all these extensive business interests he lives on a ranch in Smith Valley, Lyon County, Nevada. His election to Congress signalizes his first venture into politics, and he has the distinction of having won Nevada's Congressional seat for the Republican party.

TAPS FOR TUMULTY

It is estimated at the Capitol that there is little likelihood of the Senate confirming any of the President's appointments made since the adjournment of the last session on June 5th. The refusal to confirm will probably extend to Mr. Tumulty should he be appointed to the chief justiceship of the Court of Customs Appeals, as it is rumored he will be. With him on the court it would consist three Democrats and two Republicans, a condition that does not apeal to a Republican Congress on the eve of passing a new Republican protective tariff bill, the final interpretation of which would rest with the court. It is understood that opposition to Mr. Tumulty would come not only from Republican Senators but from many Democrats who are outspoken critics of Wilsonism. There are already too many Catholics holding fat jobs.

OPENING COVENANTS

One of the justices of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia (a Wilson appointee, by the way) recently ruled that information contained in the draft records of the War Department should be opened to the court. The ruling arose from civil proceedings in which a soldier's wife sought to obtain certain information given by her husband in his questionnaire. It is understood that the Adjutant General will appeal from the ruling of the court on the ground that the draft records are confidential. The final outcome of the case is of interest to every man who registered under the selective service law. If the information is divulged in one case, there is nothing to prevent similar publication in all cases where the precedent may be cited.

FORERUNNER OF PROTECTIVEV TARIFF

An import duty of 35 cents a bushel on wheat is proposed in a bill prepared by Congressman J. N. Tincher, of Kansas. The measure is designed for the protection of American wheat products from competition from Canada, Australia, and other countries. The bill wil be referred to the Ways and Means Committee of the House, who will consider it in connection with other measures that will be presented for the increase of various schedules in the Democratic tariff law now on the statute books.

HEAVY RAIN—LEAKING ROOFS.

Clanton has been enjoying an epidemic of leaking roofs the past few days. It started with the heavy rain of Sunday night, continued on through Monday, and up to this writing the rain still falls and the houses still leak.

Pat Murphy says his house top acted like a sieve on Sunday night. Monday Tom Taylor and Jesse Baker said their store roof was pouring water on them like a funnell.

But as the rain comes down Hosea Downs smiles right on and says cover your house with red cedar shingles and you can smile too when it rains.

Don't ask Hosea if his house is covered with red cedar. It may be for all we know, but very likely the reason he says use them is because he sells them.

PRUNING KNIFE READY

The estimate by the Wilson administration of the cost of carrying on the work of the executive departments in Washington for the next year is $136,000,000 more than the amount appropriated by Congress for the same work for the present year. It is a foregone conclusion, however, that Congress will scrutinize the estimates as closely as it did those for this year, and will make as drastic cuts in the amounts actually appropriated.

CHILTON COUNTY ABSTRACT CO.

M. D. FOSHEE, MANAGER.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

Abstracts of Title Promptly Prepared at Reasonable Charges.

You know it means something when Elmore's make reduction from their already low one price cash system.

ONLY THAT, AND NOTHING MORE

State Department officials are reported to have declared that the American mediator in Armenia "would have all the influence and prestige of the United States government behind him in his negotiations." If the report is true, the Department is being sadly mislead. The time has passed when the President or anybody appointed solely by him can go to Europe backed by the prestige of the United States Government. It takes something more than autocratic designation from the White House to create such an agency. The delegate to Armenia will represent the President and him alone. He will take with him the prestige that enshrouds Mr. Wilson at the present time, which, it may be remarked in passing, is practically nil.

Will H. Hayes, National Chairman of the Republican Party, is an Elder in the Presbyterian Church. Upon a recent visit to Marion, Ohio, he and Mr. Harding worshipped together at a Presbyterian church in that city.

Leave the house to be cleaned up later next Tuesday morning and be on time at the opening of Elmore's Pre-January clearance sale.

PLIGHT OF EUROPE'S CHILDREN STAGGERS

3,500,000 Facing Starvation Can Only Be Saved by America's Response to Joint Appeal.

It is utterly impossible for one who has not actually seen the misery of the early Autumn in Europe to visualize what the children of the Eastern and Central portions of the continent face this winter. To say that 3,500,000 children have no alternative to starvation or death from disease except American aid, is startling, but independent observers by the score and careful scientific surveys of the economic and crop conditions overseas brand the figure as conservative.

In Poland, for instance, where 1,308,000 youngsters last year subsisted almost entirely on the one free American meal a day that they received, conditions as winter closes down, are worse than ever before. The Bolshevik invasion stripped large portions of the country of all grain. Professor E. D. Durand, Food Advisor to the Polish government, after an exhaustive survey, has reported that only forty per cent is available of the food necessary to carry the population through the winter.

In the city of Vienna tests conducted in the American Relief Administration food kitchens showed that 52 per cent of the children between the ages of 6 and 14 were "seriously under-nourished." Thirty-three per cent were markedly under-nourished, 11 per cent were slightly subnormal and only 4 per cent approached the state of a normal American child. The American Relief Administration is feeding 300,000 Austrian children every day now, and there is no chance of dimunition of need before nex harvest.

The spectacle of the medical needs of Europe's children is equally appalling. Estimates reaching the American Red Cross as to needs for medical service in the destitute areas this winter include: Old Austria-Hungary, 750,000; new Poland, 1,500,000; Czecho-Slovakia, 200,000; Serbia, 150,000, and Roumania, 100,000. In the fiscal year of 1919-20 the Red Cross has reached with the veritable gift of life 1,500,000 children in the affected areas. Tuberculosis is prevalent to a terrific degree. Five children out of seven in the city of Warsaw, for instance, have been found to be tubercular. Typhus is widespread; rickets, the right hand of under-nourishment is almost universal, and cholera lifts its grim head constantly in one place and another.

The European Relief Council, comprising the American Relief Administration, the American Red Cross, the American Friends' Service Committee (Quakers), the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A., seeks $33,000,000 with which to meet the situation. It has estimated that at least $23,000,000 must be had for food and $10,000,000 for medical service to avert absolute disaster among the threatened children. Checks may be sent to your local committee or to Franklin K. Lane, treasurer European Relief Council, 42 Broadway, New York, or to the Child Feeding Fund, Literary Digest, New York City.

Worth Saving.

The features of this girl portray the finest type of Polish childhood that now lies engulfed in hunger and disease and all their attendant miseries. Relief already administered by America has preserved her beauty and freshness, albeit her eyes betray the suffering she has seen, but literally millions in her own and adjacent countries still have no one to look to but America as another winter of horror closes in upon them. To the end that their prayer may not go unanswered eight leading American relief organizations have banded together in a joint appeal in behalf of Europe's suffering children. They are the American Relief Administration, the American Red Cross, the American Friends' Relief Committee (Quakers), the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee, the Federal Churches of Christ in America, the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

THE LEAGUE FUNCTIONING

"The League of Nations is functioning," triumphantly chirp the battered remnant of Wilson organs, recovering consciousness after the blow dealt by the referendum and referring to the assembly at Geneva.

Functioning? So its—after a fashioning.

In the olden times the great fair at Donnybrook used to function, wonderfully, And so at Geneva, controversially speaking, the welkin rings with the thwack of the shillalah and invitations to tread on the tail of me coat.

At last Saturday's session the proceedings were specially enlivened by Delegate LaFontaine of Belgium and Delegate Rowell of Canada.

The Belgian gentleman sharply brought the deliberations down from the region of lovely resolutions in political astronomy for the ending of all wars, to the region of brass tacks by declaring it is "high time to tell the peoples (what they know already) that the time for disarmament is not yet come," and pointing out that several league nations are already walking round with chips on their shoulders, and that moreover even while the doves are supposed to be cooing and billing at Geneva, "a million Armenians are starving, while there are forey-one states with their troops and fleets at Constantinople." and doing nothing for the simple reason that their respective governments are as suspicious as cats of the ulterior purposes of each other.

So far from being chucked out by the sergeant at arms, the inharmonious Belgian was "roundly applauded" by delegates with a sense for facts.

Also up rose Delegate Rowell of Canada and fluttered the dovecote by acidly remarking:

The league must not bind itself to the fact that it is regarded with hostility in the United States.

It should be said too that across the Atlantic we have a diffenent viewpoint from that expressed here by the other members. Canada can not accept intrusion into her domestic affairs. She won't have her raw materials pooled by outsiders.

Same here, Mr. Rowell, same here!

And also beyond the shadow of a doubt in Australia which is openly and admittedly sick and tired of being dragged by the scuff of the neck into political cockpit of Europe to be bled white and taxed poor in wars for whose animus and origin she is no more responsible than the people in Mars.

Mr. Wilson's league of nations, as conceived by him, is so obviously and visibly disintegrating and is so evidently tending to resolve itself into something else, neither so utopian nor so self-cantradictory as an arrangement for permanent peace by armed compulsion, that it is morally certain the wisdom of the American electorate will be vendicated by the course of the assembly at Geneva.

Meanwhile, God speed the assembly as regards its benevolent intentions for the promotion of peace.

ATTENDING TO CHICKENS AND GARDEN

"My neighbors are surprised to see me looking so well, for they thought I would not live to see summer. I had such pain around my heart as to cause me to faint. I knew it came from bloating and from pressure of gas in my stomach. A friend in St. Louis told me to use Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and I now feel better than in all my life. I am doing my ownu work, attending to my chickens and my garden and have cleaned house." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded.—Adv.

STAGGERED ABOUT LIKE A DRUNK MAN

Was Dizzy, Nervous, Back was Lame, Stomach Full of Gas and Bowels Constipated. Gets unusual Results by Taking Dreco.

Dreco does its curative work in a simple, straight forward way. It wastes little time getting all its energies to work, feeding the tired, worn-out nervous tract, filling the arteries with rich, new blood, and building up the body for its fight against disease. Read what Mr. T. B. Menefee of 114 South Cedar Street, Mobile, Ala., says:

"For some time I have suffered with nervous pains in my back and limbs, especially the joints. It struck me first in the hips, then the knees got painful; then the shoulders and elbows. My back gave me a great deal of trouble, especially when I got up in the morning, and also when I would make a quick move or bend. I was also troubled with constipation, headaches, nervousness, so I did not sleep well, and my apetite was about all gone. I was attracted by the statements I read in the papers about what Dreco had done for so many other people, and decided to try it, with the result that by the time I had finished one-half of the first bottle, my pains had left and the stiffness was wearing away. I can now jump right out of bed without the slightest pain at all; can stoop about and climb stairs without any trouble. The constipation is entirely gone. I never have a headache and I have an enormous appetite.

"I feel perfectly well now but am going to keep it up until I take another bottle just to "Make sure."

All druggists now sell Dreco and it is being especially introduced in Clanton by Upchurch Drug Company.

GLENDALE

The much needed consolidated school continues to bring forth expressions of approbation where ever it is understood that the children will be provided with comfortable vehicles in which to ride.

Together with holding cotton for a higher price a wave of cross tie cutting is sweeping the country.

The marriage of Miss Lena Scarbrough to Mr. J. A. Forbes was quietly solemnized at the home of her father, Mr. R. E. Scarbrough last Friday evening at 7:30.

The home was tastefully adorned in Xmas. evergreens and chrysanthemums. Only a few relatives and friends were present and the ceremony was performed by Rev. W. H. Wilson.

The bride wore a becoming suit of mid-night blue with brown trimmings and accessories to match.

After a few days spent with relatives they will leave for their home in Wetumpka where Mr. Forbes is a prosperous farmer.

The bride has a sweet sunny disposition and she will be missed by a host of friends who regret that she will not continue to reside at Glendale.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Hand spent the week-end with Mr. Robert Hand, who has recently bought a home at Clanton.

Scissors sharpeners, furniture polishers and insurance agents are beginning to infest the neighborhood. Surely the farmer is not the only one that is experiencing a change.

Ladies if you want to purchase real up to date wearables for your self and children you can't afford to stay away from Elmore's Pre-January Clearance Sale.

Worn Down, Out of Heart

Georgia Lady, Worn-out and Tired, Tells How She Was Helped by Ziron Iron Tonic.

THE personal experience of Mrs. Nannie Phillips, of Powder Springs, Ga., is printed below in her own words:

"I was in a worn-out condition. My stomach was out of order. I didn't sleep well. I was tired all the time. I couldn't half eat, and didn't rest well at night.

"I would get out of heart and blue. I would feel like I was going to be down in bed. Yet I kept dragging around.

"We heard of Ziron, and from what I read, I was sure it wouldn't hurt me, if it didn't help me. But after taking it, I found it really helped me, and I sent back for more. I ate better, felt much stronger. I am sure Ziron is a splendid tonic."

Many people, who are worn down and disheartened, due to stomach disorders and nervous ills, find relief by toning up their blood with Ziron Iron Tonic.

Tell your druggist you want to try Ziron on our money-back guarantee.

U. S. Investigated Wilson Covenant

LEAGUE BLINDLY SIGNED UP BY LESS DISCERNING NATIONS.

Washington, Dec. 21—"It appears from the proceedings at Geneva that the United States, of all nations, was the only one to investigate closely the effect of the league of nations upon its welfare, should it become a member," declares the Republican Publicity Association today. "The glittering generalities of the Wilson covenant blinded less discerning nations to its dangers, and in their eagerness to turn anythig that held hopes for world peace they rushed to its support. But the Geneva discussions have revealed to all the participants what one observer terms the astonishing vagueness and obscurity of the covenant. Even Mr. Balfour of the British delegation and M. Viviani of France are unable to interpret its provisions.

"As the members have discovered statements and omissions in the covenant prejudicial to their own interests they have sought the adoption of amendments, only to find that every amendment must receive the unanimous approval of the nine nations forming the league council and, in addition, the approval of a majority of the nations composing the assembly. In short, it is practically impossible to alter the original language of the undertaking, a fact early emphasized by the debates in our own Senate. Realizing the hopelessness of revising the covenant to meet the widely divergent views of the forty or more member nations, the committee appointed to consider the various amendments proposed reported against them all. Thereupon cabled instructions from their home government, withdrew from further participation in the proceedings.

"Another disconcerting fact that appears to have just dawned upon the lesser members of the assembly is that the covenant bestows control of the league council in perpetuity upon the Big Five which dominated the peace conference at Paris. Quite naturally the smaller countries do not take kindly to the domination thru all future time of the executive body of the league by the very nations that wrote the covenant. And, of course, it is quite impossible to alter that relation through amendment, is the consent of each member of the council is necessary, which in this case would never be granted.

"The notorious Article 10 of the covenant, about which revolved most of the fight on the league in this country, has received similar denunciation at Geneva. The fact that the article was framed and inserted at the personal insistence of Mr. Wilson appears not to lessen the big storm against it. Members have boldly asserted that they did not care to guarantee the integrity of all other members, and Canada introduced a resolution to eliminate the objectionable language. But that amendment, like all others, was rejected, and the obligation for mutual defense among the 40-odd members still remains a thorn in the side of each of them.

"The people of the United States have renewed reason for congratulation that theirs is a republic in fact as well as in name. The assumption of obligations such as those contained in the league covenant was a question for their decision and not for the determination of authorative leaders for them. Their representatives in the Senate saved them from the pitfalls into which the individual in the White House would have plunged the nation, and the people themselves by popular vote, condemned the covenant. Had the citizens of other countries been given equal opportunity for investigation and action upon the league it is probable that the Geneva meeting would never have assembled."

KAHN ON THE JAP QUESTION

Washington, Dec. 21—Everybody should read the address to the House of Hon. Julius Kahn, of California, delivered December 9th, on the "Japanese Problem from a historical View Point." Mr. Kahn calls attention to the fact that in closing our doors to Japanese laborers we simply follow in the footsteps of Japan herself. That "it is a well-known fact that no Chinese or Korean laborer is allowed to enter any Japanese territory, for the reason that the laborers of China and Korea work for smaller wage than the Japanese laborers. . . . Japan herself, is doing to the laborers of China and Korea what she claims is racial hate or prejudice when done by us to Japanese laborers." It is not racial hatred which is behind this movement, says Mr. Kahn, it is due to a purely economic objection, and he calls attention to the fact that no objection has ever been made to the admission into this country of Japanese professional men, financiers, religious teachers, bona fide merchants, students, or travelers.

With respect to the State law forbidding Japanese to acquire land in California, Mr. Kahn points out that Japan herself does not allow an alien to own an inch of land in Japan; that while a law had been enacted by the Imperial Diet to remove these restrictions, it could not go into effect until promulgated by the Emperor, and though the law was adopted in 1910, nothing has been done in 11 years to make it effective. Mr. Kahn's address is to be published as a separate document.

THIS IS AN UNUSUALLY MERRY XMAS. TIDE, BECAUSE IT MARKS THE TERMINATION OF AN UNUSUALLY HAPPY AND PROSPEROUS YEAR.

WE ARE GRATEFUL TO YOU WHO HAVE BEEN INSTRUMENTAL IN ADDING TO OUR YEAR'S PROSPERITY.

WE ARE GRATEFUL FOR EACH OPPORTUNITY WE HAVE HAD AND MAY HAVE TO HELP ADD TO YOURS.

DILLINGHAM'S IMMIGRATION BILL

Senator William P. Dillingham of Vermont is the author of a bill to restrict all immigration into this country to not more than five per cent per year of the total aliens of any one nationality now in the United States. The Senator estimates that the passage of his bill would fix a maximum of about 37,000 for immigrants from northwestern Europe, and fron southern and eastern Europe Turkey and Asia of about 256,000. Mr. Dillingham has given many years of study to the immigration problem. He was chairman of the Immigration Commission of some years ago, which collected many volumes of valuable testimony on the question. For many years he was chairman of the Senate Immigration Committee. The measure recently introduced by the Senator is the culmination of a long study of the problem.

WILSON MISMANAGEMENT

Much unnecessary loss to the taxpayers was caused by the long delay of President Wilson in appointing the new Shipping Board, according to Senator Wesley Jones of Washington, Chairman of the Commerce Committee of the Senate. The merchant marine act provides that government owned vessels cannot be sold to aliens except after thorough consideration by the Board. While the vacancies existed the Board was unable to function, and for a long period of time the government was compelled to bear the expense of the upkeep on scores of useless ships that could readily have been sold. "A vast sum has been spent on such vessels, declares Senator Jones, "and, in addition, there has been a material loss due to depreciation and deterioration."

REPUBLICANS AGREE UPON APPROPRIATION.

Leaders Will Stand For $100,000,000 Highway Measure For State Aid Works.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21—Republican leaders of the House have agreed upon an appropriation of $100,000,000 for state road aid, it became known today at an executive session of the roads comittee. It has not been decided, however whether to make this amount available for work during the coming fiscal year or for that year and the year following.

A bill introduced by Representative McArthur, Republican, of Oregon, now before the roads committee would make $400,000,000 of federal funds available during the next four years, but it developed that the Republican steering committee has decided that in the interests of economy the appropriation should be limited to $100,000,000 and should not cover more than a two-year period.

OFFICERS TAKE WARNING

The filing of impeachment proceedings in the Supreme Court of Alabama against the Sheriff of Lauderdale County, and the action of the Executive Department against some other County Sheriffs for alleged neglect of their duty in law enforcement might be taken as a hint by other law enforcement officers to get busy and save themselves from arraingment on like charges.

It is evident that Governor Kilby expects the county officials of the state who have the enforcement of the laws in their hands to see that those laws are enforced.

Boston Transcript—It is estimated that Uncle Sam will need $4,653,856,759.00 for living expenses next year, but there are signs that he will manage to worry along on a sum considerably less.

TELEPHONE MEETING POSTPONED AGAIN

The meeting of the directors of the Peoples Telephone Co., which was to be held at the court house in Clanton on last Monday, was postponed because there was not a quorum present, and no business could be transacted.

Another meeting is called for Monday, January 3, 1921, to be at the court house at 10 o'clock, a.m. Every telephone line that is connected with the Clanton central is urged to elect someone to represent their line in the meeting on January 3, and see that the representative is on hand at the proper time and place.

There is no use to deplore the poor service that we are getting out of our rural telephone system, and then when the time comes to hold the business meeting nobody come. That is the reason we have got in such a bad fix with the telephones. So many of the phone holders have lost interest in the proposition and expect somebody else to look after the business. Unless we are all going to come together and devise some plan to pull the thing out of the hole, we shall continue to be without telephone service.

The organization has never been any too well perfected. And now, if what interest there has been in the past is to be lost, we had as well throw our phones out at the back door, and go after a fellow when we need him. There is no use trying to call him with the phones we have.

We urge all the phone lines to send their representative to the meeting on January 3.

IN MEMORY

Buell Smith, the son of Mr. Levert and Mrs. Rebekah Smith, departed this life on last Wednesday morning, December 15th, and he was laid to rest in the Mt. Nebo Cemetery Friday morning. Rev. Gipson conducted the funeral services.

Buell had just entered manhood, when he was called away from earth. He leaves a father and mother, three brothers and one sister. The bereaved family have the sympathy of the entire community.

HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

(Ewell Robinson)

In the initial game of the basket ball season Thorsby Institute defeated the High School quintet by the close score of 15 to 14. The game was hard fought and intensely interesting from beginning to end.

Rev. P. G. Carter conducted our devotional exercises one day last week, and gave us a very interesting talk on a self-made man.

A member of the Department of Education spent a day with us a few days ago. He expressed himself as being very much pleased with the progress being made by the students and spoke very commendably of the enthusiasm with which the student body entered upon their work.

A good many of former high school students have been visiting us this week, among them are Messrs. Cecil Smith, Vincent Gragg, and Misses Wariene Spigener, Margaret Hester and Mary Upchurch.

A joint program of the Lanierian and Tutwiler Societies was held in the auditorium last Friday. Exceptionally interesting programs were rendered. The Societies have become the center of interest in school and we are all looking forward to the meetings after the holidays.

The teachers were agreeably surprised by the members of their classes Friday when each were presented with presents. To Mr. Alverson the Seniors gave a pair of cuff links. To Mr. Clark the Freshmen gave a gold knife and chain. To Miss Rogers the Sophomores gave a box of Stationery. To Miss Wesley the Junnors gave a beautiful umbrella.

School closed Tuesday, Dec. 21st, for the Christmas holidays. Work will be resumed Monday, Jan. 3rd.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

The Baptist Sunday School of Jemison will have a Christmas Tree on Friday night, Dec. 24th, to which everybody is cordially invited. The program of exercises will be held at the Baptist Church, beginning at six thirty o'clock. The children will render a program appropriate for the occasion.

LARSON-FORSMAN.

Mrs. Marie Forsman of Thorsby announces the marriage of her daughter, Anna, to Mr. August Larson, on December 21st, 1920. Miss Forsman is a daughter of the late Mr. C. L. Forsmamn. Due to the recent bereavement of the family a very quiet wedding was held at the bride's home. Mr. and Mrs. Larson will reside on the Forsman place in Thorsby.

CHILD DEAD

"PHONEY" MONEY PLOT IN THE SOUTH UNCOVERED.

Chattanooga Banks Receive Flock of Raised Notes; Efforts Directed at the South.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Dec. 21—What is believed to be a scheme to flood the Southern states with "phoney" money was unearthed here today when the local banks were flooded with raised bills turned in by merchants making deposits, the figures "10" and "20" being pasted over Federal Reserve notes of the denominations of $1 and $2.

Bankers stated that $10 and $20 bills had evidently been secured in large quantities and numbers clipped from one corner and pasted on the $1 and $2 bills. A quantity of this mutilated currency has been secured by local banks, some of them being made to appear as if the missing numbers had been burned off.

The work of the counterfeiters is not noticeable unless close scrutiny is made, the "20" and "10" being pasted so neatly and closely on the $1 and $2 bills as to harmonize with the other engrossing.

SPECIAL MUSIC SUNDAY AT CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

Next Sunday being Christmas morning, interesting services will be held at this church, and some special music rendered by the choir, including a specially arranged quartet.

The subject for the morning sermon will be "A Happy Christmas Morn." It is hoped that there will be a large attendance of the membership and friends present at this service.

A Sunday School Christmas Tree will be observed on Friday night, with an interesting program by the children. Santa Claus will also be present to dispense his gifts of good cheer to all the children present. The offering for the tree will be made on Sunday morning.

There will be no service next Sunday night at this church, owing to the welcome service that will be tendered to Dr. Pierson, the incoming Pastor of the Methodist Church, as successor to Dr. Maye. We trust all the Baptists of the community will join in this union service and help to make it a royal and hearty welcome. Co-operation and brotherly love will help to win Clanton for Christ and the church.

We cordially invite everybody to our services. The Sunbeam bands and B. Y. P. U. Bands will meet as usual next Sunday.

Each person attending the Christmas tree entertainment on Friday night is asked to bring an offering for the orphan's home, and thus encourage not only the spirit of receiving but also the spirit of giving.

Impeachment Case Lauderdale Sheriff

Governor Thos. E. Kilby has directed Attorney General J. Q. Smith to institute immediately, impeachment proceedings, against George W. Mitchell, as Sheriff of Lauderdale County, Alabama. Instructions to this effect are contained in a letter transmitted from the Chief Executive to the Attorney General Monday.

The proceedings the Governor directs are to be based on charges of perjury, willful neglect of duty, corruption in office and on such grounds as the evidence said to have been transmitted with the letter may justify.

The letter of instruction from Gov. Kilby to Attorney General Smith is as follows:

"Pursuant to the statutes in such cases made and provided, you are hereby directed to immediately institute impeachment proceedings against George W. Mitchell as Sheriff of Lauderdale County, Alabama, on the following charges:

1. The commission of a crime involving moral turpitude while in office, viz: the crime of perjury.
2. Willful neglect of duty.
3. Corruption in office.
4. On such ground as the evidence herewith transmitted to you in your opinion justifies.

It is understood that actual impeachment proceedings will be filed in the Supreme Court of Alabama, on Tuesday by Judge Horace C. Wilkinson, special counsel for the State. Thereafter in the regular course of procedure, Sheriff Mitchell will be tried on the charges brought before the state's highest legal tribunal, the date for the hearing to be fixed by the Court.

Mitchell is the second Alabama Sheriff against whom action has been taken by the State Executive Department in the last 48 hours. On Saturday Judge Wilkinson went to Wetumpka where after a conference with Circuit Judge B. K. McMorris, a special term of the Circuit Court was called, and a special grand jury ordered to convene to investigate alleged complaints against Sheriff John Strength, of Elmore County. In case the evidence warrants it, charges will be filed in the Supreme Court for the removal of the Sheriff, but if the evidence does not warrant such action he will be exonerated.

The special session of the Elmore County Circuit Court opened Tuesday morning, and the special grand jury will convene at the same time.

ALL SHOT TO PIECES

The league of nations assembly is considering means for carrying into effect that provision of the covenant which prescribes economic blockade as the penalty to be enforced against offending countries. But even in that matter, referred to by friends of the league as the most potent weapon in the covenant for the preservation of peace, views of the delegates differ to such an extent that concerted action is practically impossible. It is understood by the public that the assembly by its action merely interpreted Art. 16 of the covenant, which prescribes that any member of the league resorting to war shall be subjected "to the severance of all trade and financial relations, the prohibition of intercourse between their nations and the nations" of any other state, as well as the prevention of "all financial, commercial, or personal intercourse" between its citizens and those of the rest of the world.

The accepted meaning of that article has been that it contemplated concerted action by the league as a whole against an offending nation, but amendments inserted by the Swiss delegate to the assembly changing the report of the committee provide that individual states shall decide whether there shall be an economic blockade or not. Of course individual states could blockade another before a league of nations was ever dreamed of. The whole object of the league was to create an invincible power through unity of action of its members, and with that gone, as apparently it is by the report just adopted the league becomes a meaningless thing.

FUNERAL OF GORDON S. JONES

The remains of Mr. Gordon Jones, who died on Friday night at the age of 45 caused from a blow on the head given by Robert Teel, were buried on Monday, December 20th in the cemetery of the Isabella Methodist Church of which he was a member from his boyhood. The funeral service was conducted by the Rev. P. G. Carter, Baptist Minister of Clanton, in the presence of a large number of friends and sympathizers.

Mr. Jones was a quiet, unassuming kind of a man, and well liked by all who knew him. He leaves behind an aged father, a widow and one son. He was taken unexpectedly in the prime of life while enjoying the best of health. He was known as a good husband, a kind father and a good provider. The sympathy of Clanton is extended to all who mourn after him.

3,500,000 CHILDREN FACING STARVATION

Vast Relief Effort Launched by Eight Leading American Organizations to Avert Tragedy.

The most spontaneous as well as the largest consolidation of effort in the history of American relief and charitable organizations has grown out of the disaster which threatens 3,500,000 European children this winter. To the headquarters of every agency that dispenses American mercy overseas has come one steady cry for months past; the children, most helpless and blameless sufferers in the track of war, will perish by the thousands before next harvest unless America saves them!

When Dr. Livingston Farrand, chairman of the Central Committee of the American Red Cross, returned from a recent trip abroad, his report throbbed with the need of the children. From the feeding-stations of the American Relief Administration throughout eastern and central Europe came letters, cables, pleas of every sort. The Protestant churches sent investigators into after-war conditions and every report breathed the impending tragedy of starving and diseased children. Protestant, Catholic and Jewish, the child life of Europe is threatened with heartrending misery.

The European Relief Council, with Herbert Hoover as chairman and the whole power of American charitable thought and effort behind it, has been formed. It consists of Edgar Rickard, representing the American Relief Administration; Dr. Livingston Farrand, representing the American Red Cross; Felix Warburg, representing the Jewish Joint Distribution Committee; Wilbur K. Thomas, representing the American Friends' Service Committee; James A. Flaherty, representing the Knights of Columbus; Dr. C. V. Hibbard, representing the Young Men's Christian Association; Miss Sarah S. Lyon, representing the Young Women's Christian Association; Dr. Arthur Brown, representing the Federal Council of Churches.

It is the purpose of the Council to raise $33,000,000, in an appeal centering at the Christmas holidays, to the end that the situation regarding child life may be met. In every town and community of the nation, it is hoped, local committees, representing all the co-operating agencies will be formed to secure the vitally necessary funds. Of the amount sought, $23,000,000 will be used for basic food. For every one of these American dollars the local governments and communities aided will furnish two dollars, in the form of transportation, labor, guards, clerical help, cash contributions and such food supplies as are locally obtainable. No children receive the free food except after medical tests showing them to be seriously under-nourished. The remaining $10,000,000 of the fund is just as urgently needed for medical service to the children.

The European Relief Council will do much more than effect economies in the raising of the childsaving fund. It will, with the inspecting forces of eight great agencies, keep a constant eye on the administration of America's merciful gift, in order that there shall be no wastage and no tendency toward pauperization.

RICKETS DID THIS.

Before this five-year-old Vienna girl was operated upon in the American Convalescent Home her leg was even more horribly deformed from rickets and she was in constant instead of intermittent pain. Now at least her leg is straight again, and by degrees she is relearning to walk. Rickets is the aftermath of under-nutrition, and it is to cut down the harrowing prevalence of such disease as this among the children of Europe that eight American relief organizations are making a joint appeal under the name of the European Relief Council for funds to succor the millions that face a winter of horror. They are the American Relief Administration, the American Red Cross, the American Friends' Service Committee (Quakers), the Jewish Joint Distribution committee, the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, the Knights of Columbus, the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A.

Tells How Ziron Iron Tonic Helped His Daughter After Operation for Appendicitis.

AFTER any serious illness, the first thing you notice when you begin to get around is your lack of strength and energy—a tired, weak feeling.

The sooner you get your strength back the better. The thing to do is to eat plenty of good, nourishing food, get all the fresh air you can, exercise conservatively, and take Ziron Iron Tonic three times a day.

Your doctor will tell you this is sound advice, and urge you to follow it.

Read this letter from Mr. J. B. Kelly, vice-president of the First National Bank, Graceville, Fla.: "My daughter had been in bad health since last April. She was operated on for appendicitis. She has been taking Ziron for two weeks. Her appetite is better than it has been. Her nerves are better, and she says she feels better . . . I know that Ziron is good for weak and feeble people."

Ziron is a scientific, reconstructive tonic, prepared from valuable strength-building ingredients, for weak people with thin blood. Druggists sell Ziron on a money-back guarantee. Try it.

OSMOND MIDDLETON HERE

Hon. J. Osmond Middleton of Mobile stopped off in Clanton Tuesday on his return home from Washington, D. C. He will spend a few days of this week with friends in Clanton, probably leaving here Friday for his home in the Gulf City.

Mr. Middleton is the same old fellow that he has ever been, with that ever-present warmness in his heart for the people of Chilton County. He says he has been all over Alabama and a part of Mississippi, and has not found a single country town that anything like comes up with Clanton, and not a county that can come within forty miles of Chilton.

He is well pleased with his law practice in Mobile, and his future there is indeed promising. His many Chilton County friends wish him much success and happiness.

When he left he expressed the hope that once again in his life he might be able to attend one more all day singing in Chilton County.

GOOD WORK BEING DONE ON CLANTON STREETS

At last we are able to point with pride to the working of the streets of Clanton, and hereby take pleasure in commending the present administration for breaking the ice and showing the public that it is not impossible after all to make streets out of the mud holes of our little city.

On Monday Mr. Guy Higgins very kindly took the editor of The Union-Banner in his car, and together we proceeded to explore the city, looking over the work that has been done, and as for the two of us we are mighty well pleased with what has been done. We believe there are likewise a great many other citizens who are glad too.

As was mentioned in these columns last week, the Town has purchased a Fordson Tractor and some scrapes with which to work the streets, and they are working them at top speed. First and Second Avenues South have been worked from First Street to Sixth Street, First Street has been worked from the City Limits on the Lock 12 Road past the County High School to Third Avenue South. Seventh Street has been worked from Fourth Avenue North to Third Avenue South. At this writing the work is in progress on Fourth Avenue N., from Seventh Street westward, and on Sixth Street from the court house to Fifth Avenue North.

In the course of our little tour of the town and discussion of what is being done, Mr. Higgins remarked that Clanton is getting to be a town of which we can be proud, adding further that "we have already the very best lighting system to be had anywhere, our water works and sewer system is exceptionally good, and now that our streets are being put in good shape, we can hope for added improvement in the side walks of the town, all of which will ultimately make for us one of the very best small cities in the state."

We certainly hope that our town officials will have good luck with their move towards street improvement. We know they will have the best wishes and heartiest co-operation of the citizenship. Our people have waited a long time for street improvements, and though the patience of some of us must have been nearly exhausted before the signs appeared, we are now doubly encouraged by the evidences we have seen in the past few days.

We think it wise that the present officials have gone right into the work with a push. If they had hesitated in beginning, we would have fallen into further procrastination, and the final result would have been that at the end of their terms everybody would have been cussing them for doing nothing, and the only cry would have been anything to get rid of those do-nothings that have been in there for the past two years.

We hope some day to see a set of councilmen and a Mayor of Clanton that can be re-elected when their terms are out, on the strength of what they have done while in office. And we had just as soon it be the present outfit as any we could mention.

Let everybody help these officials Tell them that you are with them in their fight for better streets and a better town. Let them know that we appreciate their efforts. Talk them as a bunch that believes in doing something, and then help them do it. It is as much our business to do it as it is theirs. Then do your part.

WELCOME DR. PIERSON

The Union-Banner extends to Dr. Pierson, the incoming Pastor of the Clanton Methodist Church, a cordial welcome to our town and county. We hope his service in this community will be pleasant to himself and result in a full measure of fruit for the cause which he represents.

The columns of our paper have ever been open for the use of our churches and pastors to use in any way they see fit in advancing the cause of Christ. We hope Dr. Pierson will feel free to call on us at any and all times, and we assure him and his church now that it will be only the greatest of pleasure to us to serve.

We trust that the future may hold out a spirit of co-operation between the denominations of Clanton that will result in a more united effort among all the people to advance the cause of religious devotion and the practice of righteousness in our city.

NOTICE

All the persons who watched dipping vats in Chilton county during the time when the vats were being blown up are requested to meet at Clanton on Tuesday, Jan. 4th, to go before the Commissioners Court in the interest of securing pay for the men who were deputized by the Sheriff for such guard duty.

THORSBY NEWS

Christmas Party

Mrs. Nottage, the preceptress at the Boys Dormitory, assisted by Miss Ellsworth, gave a Christmas Party to the dormitory boys Monday evening, the 20th, in the living room of the dormitory.

This being a party for boys, the usual order of things was reversed and refreshments were served first. Afterward the fellows performed various stunts, such as "clog" dances and humorous recitations.

The room was beautifully decorated with Christmas greens, and a miniature Christmas tree stood in the middle of the room, trimmed with candles and the usual ornaments.

The party was in the nature of a surprise, but was enjoyed by all of those present.

Thorsby Chamber of Commerce had an open forum meeting last Monday night when matters concerning publicity were taken up. Mr. Holt of Montgomery, a publicity man, was present and gave some splendid ideas on publicity work. Also Mr. Paul, representing the Redpath Chautauqua Circuit was present with the view of interesting the citizens here for a Chautauqua this coming year.

Mr. Chas. Carlson from Colby, Wis., is a visitor here, with the view of locating. We hope that he can find a suitable place and soon become one of us.

Leave your subscription or renewals for The Union-Banner for the coming year at The Bank of Thorsby.

Tender Hearted.

" You know," said the fat plumber, "I hate to kill any living creature, but I just had to kill a rat the other day."

"How was that?" the thin carpenter encouraged.

"To save it from dying from chagrin."

"I don't getcha."

"This rat had been spending all its time for a week or so digging thru one of our cellar walls."

"Uh huh—"

"And I just couldn't bear to think of it finishing the job and thinking it had reached the open air, and then finding it had just tunneled into another room."—Youngstown Telegram.

WOMAN THINKS SHE IS PRIVILEGED TO TALK

"If anyone ever had a miserable stomach, I surely had. It was growing worse too, all the time. Had severe pains and attacks every ten days or two weeks, and had to call a doctor who could relieve me only for a short time. Two years ago last February I took a treatment of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and I have not had a spell of pain or misery since. My friends just wonder that I am looking so well. I feel I am privileged to talk about it." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflamation which causes practically all the stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. MICKIE SAYS

ECONOMIC CROP YIELDS NECESSARY

CHEAPEST YIELDS ARE THE LARGEST YIELDS PER ACRE, SAYS SOUTHERN AGRICULTURAL AUTHORITY

It Take a Greater Amount of Crop Returns to Cover Production Cost Now; Therefore High Yields Per Acre Are Necessary if the Farmer Is to Obtain Profits

J. N. HARPER

Director J. N. Harper of the Southern Soil Improvement Committee, a widely known agricultural authority, speaking of the situation brought about by the low price of crops, recently said that deflation of prices had hurt the farmer more than any other class, and that on this account the farmer is entitled to every consideration within reason.

At such a time as this when the farmer is facing the problem of which crops to grow, and how much he can venture to spend in their production, Mr. Harper says, that he, as a farmer himself, knows that it is the most difficult situation of the kind he has ever confronted.

This is the way this agricultural authority figures out the proposition of profitable crop production in 1921:

"Grow enough food and feed crops to supply as far as possible the needs of the family, the tenants and livestock. Then pick out the kind of cash crops that seem to offer the best prospects.

"Cotton will always be one of the best cash crops that a Southern farmer can grow. No cotton farmer can afford to throw cotton aside altogether.

"But cotton should not be the only cash crop. It would only be another case of carrying all the eggs in one basket. It is better to go to market with more than one crop. Among these other crops are peanuts, legume hays, tobacco, sweet potatoes, sugar cane, sorghum, rice and perhaps other crops. In addition there should be a gradual adding, as means will allow, of more livestock, beginning with hogs preferably and taking on other animals as soon as possible.

"In facing the problem of profitable crop production for the year 1921, two facts must be considered. (1) Crop prices are low, (2) Crop producing expenses have not fallen correspondingly.

"The farmer must remember that when crop prices are low, it takes more of the crops to cover the production cost. This narrows the margin of profits. Therefore, if a farmer does not look well to keeping up his acre yields, there will be no margin left above the cost of production.

"Always, the most expensive yields are the low yields and the most remunerative are the high yields. If there are losses to be sustained, as was the case in 1920, the farmer who grew the greatest yields per acre lost least.

"A safe and sane policy that needs especial emphasis for 1921, is: 'Guard your profits with high acre yields.' This involves good preparation of the seed bed, the use of high producing seed, liberal fertilization and thorough cultivation. A neglect to employ any one of these to the proper extent may mean that the farmer will find himself poorer at the end of the season than at the beginning.

"Labor is the greatest item of cost in producing a crop yield. It must be used to the extent of thorough cultivation. Fertilizers are next in the list of cost items. Since high yields per acre are so essential in times of low prices of crops, and since fertilizers increase acre yields more than anything else, they cannot be reduced in 1921. In fact, it may be that they will have to be depended upon more than ever, to make acre yields that will be profitable.

"An investment in good seed is one of the best that a farmer can make at any time.

"In a word, this is a time for farm efficiency, faith and courage. These virtues exercised, the farmer will emerge from the post-war struggle victoriously."

CALCIUM ARSENATE TREATMENT

An idea of the benefit gained by application of the calcium arsenate treatment developed and recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture against the cotton-boll weevil is found in the experience of a large planter at Tallulah, La. With the exception of certain test plats, this man's entire acreage was dusted with calcium arsenate, the cost being $9.20 an acre. He obtained an average yield of 1,215 pounds of seed cotton to the acre on the land surrounding the test plats, while these unpoisoned test plats averaged only 300 pounds, or about 25 per cent of the yield on the poisoned cotton. Thus his net profit from poisoning on these areas on sales made before declining prices of cotton was about $120 an acre.

The Ideal Family Gift

Why Not COMBINE Your Christmas Giving In ONE Wonderful Present?

In other years Father and each of the children, as well as other members of the family, have given Mother individual Christmas presents. These gifts, especially the children's, have probably been small presents, very likely of perishable nature. While Mother has prized them all, she has had no big, lasting, handsome token of her family's love and esteem. This Christmas let all the family combine to give Mother one, big, splendid present that will last a lifetime—

EDISON'S NEW DIAMOND AMBEROLA

Think of Mother's surprise and delight to find a handsome, new Amberola Phonograph in the parlor on Christmas morning, with a card saying, "To Mother, from Dad and the children!" Or perhaps Mother and the children will put their gift-money together to surprise Father in this practical, sensible way!

Just a little from every member of the family will bring an Amberola Phonograph into your home on Christmas morning, because as a result of Mr. Edison's expressed wish we can offer you this ideal Family Gift on the easiest possible terms!

Remember—you're not giving an ordinary phonograph—but Edison's New Diamond Amberola, the greatest phonograph value in the world! The Amberola has proved its marked superiority over "talking machines" and ordinary phonographs in numerous public tests. It's a gift worthy of Mother or Father, who deserve the best. And a gift the whole family will enjoy for years and years!

You haven't a minute to lose. Come at once, before our Christmas stock of Amberolas is exhausted. Select your Amberola and Amberol Records and we'll deliver them to your home before Christmas day. As to terms—you'll be surprised how easy we'll make it for you to give Mother or Father this wonderful Christmas present.

GORDEN S. JONES DEAD; ROBERT A. TEEL IN JAIL

Gordon S. Jones, business man of Clanton, died at an infirmary in the City of Montgomery about ten o'clock last Friday night, as a result of a blow delivered upon his head by Robert Teel in a little difficulty between the two men which occurred Friday afternoon.

Teel and Jones were both engaged in buying cross-ties in Clanton, and the trouble between them is said to have started about some timber on the railroad yards where ties were being unloaded.

In the fight that followed their dispute, Teel is said to have hit Jones over the head with a stick. Jones went to the Clanton Infirmary where an examination proved that an operation was necessary. Dr. Hayes accompanied him to Montgomery on No. 3 Friday evening. Upon arriving at the infirmary Jones died before the operation was performed.

Teel was arrested and placed in jail in Clanton as soon as the authorities here were notified that Jones was dead.

There will be a preliminary trial of the case before Judge Reynolds in the County Court to-day (Thursday).

IN MEMORY

On December 9, 1920, at the home of Mr. Green Mims God in his wisdom saw fit to take from him his dear wife, Mrs. Fannie Mims. Her suffering was great, yet she bore it with patience, being conscious to the last breath.

She leaves a husband, four children, a mother, two sisters, nine brothers, and a host of friends.

Dr. Hayes rendered skillful medical aid, but all was in vain. Relatives and friends did all they could in their power for the sufferer, but God was ready for this Jewel and gathered it home.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Till Deason in Shiloh Church the remains being laid to rest in the cemetery at that place.

People With Thin Weak Blood Have A Hard Time of It. They Should Take Pepto-Mangan.

Look at the facts of your health. So much depends on having red blood. If you stand up in front of your work with half-starved blood in your system you are standing in your own way. You are blocking your own progress.

Thin blood makes you dull. It makes you pale. You take no enjoyment out of your work. It is only half as good as it should be.

You can remedy that condition so easily. Begin taking that fine tonic, Pepto-Mangan, todoy and keep it up for a while. Your blood will become nourished. Pepto-Mangan makes red blood corpuscles. Yaou will get energy and strong power of resistance. Instead of standing in your own way you will push yourself ahead because of greater vitality.

But be sure you get the genuine Pepto-Mangan. It is put up in both liquid and tablet form. Ask for the "Gude's" and be sure that the name is on the package. The tablets or the liquid have the same medicinal value. —Advertisement.

BAKER SUDDENLY MILITANT

"Congress be damned" is evidently the spirit in which Secretary of War Baker proceeds as he recruits the regular army to numbers far in excess of the maximum for which appropriations were made. Chairman Kahn, of the House Military Committee is quoted as asserting that appropriations were based on a maximum of 180,000 men with an understanding that this would be sufficient, but now he has information that the number has been increased to 210,000, with an increased expense which will call for a corresponding deficiency appropriation.

Whether the United States shall be called upon to pay a few hundred thousand dollars of needless expense is a matter of no small importance in these days when public funds are hard to get and when Liberty Bonds are a drug at the market. It is a matter of concern to the taxpayers of the country if the burdens of the government are needlessly increased. But the difference in public expenditures is the least of the reasons for complaint in this connection.

The Constitution expressly vests Congress with sole power to raise and support armies and the Secretary of War is bound not only by the letter but by the spirit of the constitution to follow the directions of Congress. Possibly the Secretary of War can find a technical defense for his own course, but he cannot justify at the bar of public opinion the recruiting of an army in excess of that for which Congress made appropriations.

The overthrow of government by law and the establishment of government by men has been the effort of the Wilson Administration for the past seven years. That policy was rebuked by the people of the country at the election in 1918 and again at the election in 1920. Evidently autocrats never learn. "After us the deluge," has always been their cry.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. CHRISTMAS PROGRAM AT THE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

An entertainment, entitled "Following the Star," was rendered by the Sunday School on Sunday night, at the Congregational Church. The program was divided into three parts, the first part dealing with "The first Christmas," was opened by a story for the children, beautifully told by Mrs. Norton. She pictured in a simple manner the Birth of Christ in the manger, and how she shepherds and magi found him by following the star. The story was succeeded by songs and recitations about the "First Christmas," given by the tiny tots of the primary and junior departments. The second part, named "Christmas and the Pilgrim Spirit," was presented by the boys and girls of the adult classes. It showed how the Pilgrims, inspired by their love for Christ and the Star, followed the gleam to America, thus founding our nation. Part three, "Christmas and the Nation," pictured the nations awakened by the spirit of missions, also following the gleam of the Star.

The Christmas spirit was well represented by Miss Birdie Hall, the spirit of Pilgrims by Walton Brackin, the spirit of missions by Miss Mae Ward, and the spirit of Faith by Dora Brackin. The different nations were represented by Wilbur Peterson, Jerome Wilson, Arthur McCrory, Euna Hughes, Margaret Butler and Dorothy Rogers.

The parts and the music were well rendered, making the service both enjoyable and impressive.

MUSIC RECITAL

Miss Marjorie Fox presented voice and piano pupils in the Christmas recital of Thorsby Institute Friday, December 17. The younger pupils played with correctness and accuracy, and the more advanced with keen appreciation and considerable technique. Miss Fox's beautiful voice was heard to advantage in the song selected, and the audience greatly enjoyed the evening.

PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Legg and little daughter spent Saturday and Sunday in Birmingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Vesker Martin and children are in Thorsby visiting their parents.

Miss Leona Goodgame had as her house guest last week Miss Jewel Davis of Clanton, Ala.

Mrs. E. R. Piper, Mrs. S. C. Wood and Carrie Billingsley motored to Clanton Saturday to do some Christmas shopping.

Mrs. James E. Biggs returned Saturday night from Birmingham, where she spent last week doing her Xmas. shopping.

Mr. Harry Peterson of Prattville, Ala., spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl C. Peterson.

The recital which was given by the music department of Thorsby Institute Friday night, under the direction of Miss Fox, was a splendid success. The vocal selection rendered by Miss Fox displayed her wonderful ability and was greatly enjoyed by lovers of classical music. We were sorry to note that there were quite a number present, who couldn't appreciate good music. We do want to say to these people that they could at least behave themselves at such occasions and show some respect for the performer and those who do want to enjoy something good.

Miss Naemi Turnquist and Mrs. J. E. Biggs were visitors in Clanton Tuesday.

The many friends of Mr. Edwin Soberg will be glad to learn that he is coming to Thorsby to spend the holidays.

Tired

"I was weak and run-down," relates Mrs. Eula Burnett, of Dalton, Ga. "I was thin and just felt tired, all the time. I didn't rest well. I wasn't ever hungry. I knew, by this, I needed a tonic, and as there is none better than—

CARDUI
The Woman's Tonic

. . . I began using Cardui," continues Mrs. Burnett. "After my first bottle, I slept better and ate better. I took four bottles. Now I'm well, feel just fine, eat and sleep, my skin is clear and I have gained and sure feel that Cardui is the best tonic ever made."

Thousands of other women have found Cardui just as Mrs. Burnett did. It should help you.

CAPITOL CHAT

FROM CASE TO CONGRESS

Washington, Dec. 28—(Special correspondence.) Congressman-elect, Robert S. Maloney, of the Seventh Massachusetts District, succeeded in defeating a Democrat who has held the place for the past eight years. Mr. Maloney is a native of Lawrence, where he has demonstrated the esteem in which he is held by fellow-townsmen by five successive elections to the City government, and eight years as Commissioner of Public Health and Charities. By trade Mr. Maloney is a typesetter, a fact which he used to advantage in his campaign by coupling it with a reference to Senator Harding's proficiency as a practical printer. The new Congressman has the honor of representing the District in which is located the home of Senator Lodge, Republican leader of the Senate. The sort of Republicanism which Mr. Maloney champions is indicated by his campaign slogans: "Down with the party of profiteering! Up with the banner of protection! No Wilson League of nations! America first!"

ON GUARD.

President Wilson has purchased a magnificent home in one of the exclusive residential sections of the national capital for his occupancy after he leaves the White House on March 4th. By so doing he breaks another precedent, as never before has a retiring president continued to live in Washington. It has been suggested that as a matter of good taste, Mr. Wilson should have retired to his former home at Princeton, N. J., rather than remain in the midst of the activities of a party seeking to reconstruct the government after the effects of his eight years of rule. Whether his home will be the headquarters of Democratic opposition remains to be seen, but that Mr. Wilson intends to take a lively interest in the national affairs of the future is indicated by his selection of Washington as his headquarters.

MOSES STOPS A GAP.

An amendment has been proposed by Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshirie to the resolution passed by the House repealing emergency war legislatioin that, if adopted, will prevent deserters from the army from obtaining refuge in its provisions. It reads as follows: "Provided however, That nothing herein contained shall be construed as effective to terminate the military status of any person now in desertion from the military or naval service of the United States, nor to terminate the liability to prosecution and punishment under the selective service law of any person who failed to comply with the provisions of said act." It is reported that slackers and deserters are being treated with great leniency by War Department officials and Mr. Moses is determined that the policies of the Secretary of War shall receive no encouragement from Congress.

A D. C. DELEGATE.

Congressman Frederiik N. Zihlman of Maryland is the author of a bill proposing to give the citizens of the District of Columbia the right to elect a delegate to the House of Representatives, commissioners to direct the City government, a public utilities commission, a board of education. In spite of the fact that 7 states, having a smaller population than the District of Columbia, are permitted to elect two Senators and at least one representative each, the 437,571 citizens of the District are denied any representation in either House of Congress and any voice in the selection of even their local officials. Mr. Zihlman is of the opinion that taxation without representation should be abolished at the national capital as it was in other parts of the country almost a hundred and fifty years ago.

WILSON'S EXPENSE SLIP.

President Wilson's expenses while negotiating the treaty of Versailles, which included the covenant of the league of nations, were $1,651,191, according to the President's final statement submitted to the Senate. Of this sum the larger part was spent at the headquarters of the peace mission in the Hotel Crillon in Paris.

The report shows that the mission became so large that additional quarters were provided at other Paris hotels. The hire and laundry of linen alone at the several hostelries costing $64,969.

When the American mission left the Hotel Crillon the account showed $125,000 was paid the owners of the hotel for damages and breakage.

Some of the other larger items were: Travel and subsistence, $28,442; subsistence, $193,629; wages and employes at Hotel Crillon, $131,507; rents, $176,853; food, hotel and kitchen supplies, $283,560. Purchase of automobiles amounted to $14,602 and confidential expenses of presidential party, $17,534.

Salaries of members of the mission cost the government $200,871. Col. E. M. House and Henry White, members of the mission who were not officials of the government, received salaries of $1,000 a month. Most members of the mission received a per diem allowance of $4 for subsistence, but there was a special allowance of $25 a day for this purpose to Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of labor.

CONGRESS IS FACING KNOTTY PROBLEMS

TAXATION, TARIFF AND FOREIGN TRADE FUNDAMENTAL QUESTIONS TO BE DECIDED.

Washington, Dec. 28—The dawn of the new year will find Congress still wrestling with the fundamental problems confronting the country—taxation, the tariff, and foreign trade—with little prospect of a satisfactory solution being found for either before March 4th, it was predicted today.

In the judgment of Republican and Democratic leaders alike, all three of these problems will rise to vex the Harding administration and the new congress as much as the difficult question of foreign relations.

It is conceded by both sides that the omnibus tariff bill passed by the House recently will not pass the Senate unless it is amended materially. A number of commodities inserted in it by a majority of the House will be stripped from it in the Senate. Although its supporters claim to have enough votes to jamb it through the chamber, even they admit it is in grave peril from threatened amendments and debate.

Beyond the emergency tariff policy it involves, Senate leaders declare, lies the more important one of maintaining the country's trade balance on an even keel, embracing as it does, the far reaching subject of exchange.

Barriers Already too High.

Senators opposed to it, like Hitchcock, Democrat, of Nebraska, declare it is impossible to construct even a temporary tariff barrier to shut out exports to this country, if American producers are to find an outlet for exports to foreign countries.

International trade, they contend, unless conducted on terms of barter is also so hampered under existing exchange conditions that there now exist economic barriers sufficiently impracticable without the situation being made worse by the erection of tariff barriers.

It is an open secret in Congress that one of the first tasks the Harding administration will have to bend to is the solution of the exchange problem. Another vital question involving foreign trade and the merchant marine, is that of a complete and official restoration of trade relations between this country and Russia and between this country and the central powers. This of course involves the replacement of this country on an adequate peace basis, it is pointed out.

There is a well-founded report to the effect that Great Britain will suggest to President-elect Harding, as soon as he enters the White House, that he summon a world economic conference, to be held at Washington for the purpose of devising machinery for the movement of international trade and readjustment of exchange rates.

IN MEMORY

On Sunday, Dec. 19th, the death angel plucked another flower of God's creation, Mrs. Mae Bell Caton, and carried her soul home to heaven. She had been in the hospital about three months, and all hopes for her recovery were in vain. She was married on April 26, 1920. She leaves a father, mother, brother, other relatives and a host of friends to weep for her. The remains were buried in New Salem Cemetery.

THANKS

I want to thank all the people of Clanton who have been so kind to lend a helping hand and show the inmates of the County Poor House a good time this Christmas. My heartfelt thanks go out to you all, and may God bless you.—R. A. Miller.

WINTER GRAIN TAKING THE PLACE OF COTTON

IF AREAS ARE NOT KILLED BY WINTER, FLEECY ACREAGE IS CUT ALREADY.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 28—The low price of cotton has stimulated the planting of winter grains, the monthly business review of the Sixth District Federal Reserve Bank, just made public, states.

"If the areas are not winter killed, it appears as if the next year's cotton acreage is already reduced," said the review.

"The movement headed by Southern bankers, to effect a reduction of at least one-third in the acreage to be planted to cotton next year will be more than successful, it is felt," the statement said.

Industry and general business was reported holding its own as compared with conditions a month ago.

"The usual holiday buying has stimulated retail trade to some extent and bargain sales continue to be the order of the day, and retailers are widely advertising prices reduced from 20 per cent to as much as 50 per cent in some instances. Retail clothiers state they are now in position to buy considerably under the figures of two or three months ago, and are making strong efforts to rid themselves of stocks even at a loss."

Department store stocks were reported smaller at the end of November than a month ago.

"Compilation of figures contained in reports from wholesale firms thruout the Sixth Federal Reserve District show decreases in sales in a large majority of instances," the statement continued.

"In the wholesale dry goods trade an increase of 9.1 per cent in volume of sales during November over October was shown in Atlanta, decreases in all other cities bring the district average to a decrease of 9.5 per cent.

"Both wholesalers and retailers, however, are buying very cautiously and only in necessary quantities."

The wholesale hardware business in Jacksonville showed improvement, while other cities showed a decrease, the review stated.

"Practically all of the cotton crop has been harvested, but reports show that little is being sold, the farmers in a large number of instances, declining to sell at the low prices prevailing." said the review, commenting on agricultural conditions.

A considerable amount of cotton is being held on the farms, while the warehouses are said to be full.

"Farmers give evidence of much discouragement because of the low prices of farm products and the continued high cost of many things the farmer must buy."

The low price of cotton seems to have stimulated the planting of winter grains, the review stated, "and if the areas are not winter-killed it appears as if the next year's cotton acreage is already reduced."

The prolonged cold spell in Louisiana during November caused an estimated loss of about17,000 tons of sugar, due partly to the lateness of the grinding season, the review said.

A noticeable improvement in the demand for Southern pine was mentioned by the review.

THE FIRST AND SECOND MONDAYS IN DECEMBER.

Washington, Dec. 28—(Special correspondence.) Congressman Clifton N. McArthur of Oregon, is the author of two proposed amendments to the Constitution, recently introduced in the House of Representatives. Both aim to reduce the time which now elapses between the election of the President, Senators and Representatives in Congress and the date upon which they take their oath of office and enter upon the discharge of their duties. As the Constitution and laws now provide, the President assumes control of the executive branch of the government on March 4th, four months after the people have elected him chief executive. Senators and Congressmen are compelled to wait until the first Monday in December of the following year, a delay of thirteen months, before they are able to participate in national legislation, unless the President in the meantime, sees fit to call a special session of Congress.

"No other civilized country," declares Mr. McArthur, "tolerates the grotesque conditions which surround the election and inauguration of the President of the United States and the election and qualification of Representatives and Senators." As objections to our present system, he charges that often legislative and executive authority are permitted to remain in the hands of political parties and individuals who have been discredited at the most recent elections. The period of depression and uncertainty between the election and the time when the victorious party assumes control of national affairs should be prevented. As an instance of the harm which may come to the country as a result of these long delays, Mr. McArthur cites the vacillating policy of President Buchannan following Lincoln's first election. "Had Lincoln been able to take his seat in December following his election," he asserts, "the Civil War might have been averted."

The first of Congressman McArthur's amendments fixes the first Tuesday after the first Monday in November as election day, and provides that the terms of service of the Senators and Representatives shall begin on the first Monday in December of the same year, instead of on March the 4th of the following year. It automatically abolishes the short session of Congress, and makes impossible any legislation by so-called "lame ducks" or political parties repudiated at the polls.

"I am prompted to introduce these amendments," stated Congressman McArthur, "only because of my wish to bring about progressive and economical administration and legislatioin. I am not at all sanguine that they will be considered at the present session, but I am introducing them for the purpose of focusing public attention on what I consider very important questions, and trust that the resulting discussions will produce results later on."

TELEPHONE MEETING MONDAY, JAN. 3.

The meeting of the directors of the Peoples Telephone Co., which was to be held at the court house in Clanton on last Monday, was postponed because there was not a quorum present, and no business could be transacted.

Another meeting is called for Monday, January 3, 1921, to be at the court house at 10 o'clock, a.m. Every telephone line that is connected with the Clanton central is urged to elect someone to represent their line in the meeting on January 3, and see that the representative is on hand at the proper time and place.

Thre is no use to deplore the poor service that we are getting out of our rural telephone system, and then when the time comes to hold the business meeting nobody come. That is the reason we have got in such a bad fix with the telephones. So many of the phone holders have lost interest in the proposition and expect somebody else to look after the business. Unless we are all going to come together and devise some plan to pull the thing out of the hole, we shall continue to be without telephone service.

The organization has never been any too well perfected. And now, if what interest there has been in the past is to be lost, we had as well throw our phones out at the back door, and go after a fellow when we need him. There is no use trying to call him with the phones we have.

We urge all the phone lines to send their representative to the meeting on January 3.

UNCLE JOE CANNON HAS THE LONGEST RECORD OF SERVICE

Veteran Has Been A Member of the House of Representatives For 43 Years, 9 Months and 24 Days.

Washington, Dec. 28—"Uncle Joe" Cannon tied the long distance Congressional record today. And he did not even pause, but kept right on to set up a new mark for ambitious statesmen to shoot at.

To-day when "Uncle Joe" swung his 84 years onto the floor of the House he had served in Congress 43 years, 9 months and 24 days. Justice S. Merrill of Vermont, had served that long when he died, and that has been the record for years.

Tomorrow "Uncle Joe" will have beaten that record and the House is planning a celebration. There'll be speeches and "Uncle Joe" will reply. Then if events proceed as usual, "Uncle Joe" becoming Representative Cannon, will step over to the appropriations committee room and try to find out why ambitious department heads are asking for so much money. Or perhaps he'll take his place on the floor and bob up on the weak flank of some legislative proposition that doesn't appeal to him.

Any Congressman will tell you that Representative Cannon does either of these things mighty effectively. For example: About two years ago the Republicans decided they would repeal the tax on soft drinks, candies, etc. Representative Cannon decided they wouldn't. He made a speech or two about it. They didn't.

OLD SOLDIERS HAVE MERRY CHRISTMAS AT OLD HOME

The old Civil War veterans at the Old Soldiers Home at Mt. Creek are praising a celebration which was held there Christmas, which was declared to pass all previous celebrations held at the Home. A huge Christmas tree was obtained and loaded with presents for the old soldiers by the women of the Home and members of the various U. D. C. chapters over the State.

NEW COUNTY COMMISSIONERS WILL TAKE OFFICE JAN. 11TH.

The terms of office of J. Wiley Littlejohn and Charley T. Walker, as County Commissioners of Chilton County will begin on January 11th, 1921. The oath of office will be administered by the Judge of Probate. There will be no session of the Commissioners Court on that day. The new officers named above will succeed the present Commissioners A. P. Vinson and W. T. Herrod.

There will be a session of the Commissioners Court on January 4th, at which the newly elected and incoming Commissioners, Littlejohn and Walker will be invited to sit.

MAY PAVE SIDEWALKS

We have heard it said from unofficial sources that the Town Council of Clanton is contemplating the paving of some sidewalks from the business section of town, extending out to the Grammar School on the west side, and to the County High School on the east side. Whether or not the town officials are considering this step right now, it is a bit of improvement which ought to be made.

Students of those schools going to and fro need good paved sidewalks to walk upon instead of having to wade the mud for a long way as is now the case in winter. Then too there are many times when we common ordinary folks who are not school students (and who do not own an automobile) would like to go to the schools on special occasions at least. Sidewalks would be a great convenience in our case too.

Then aside from the above reasons, Clanton, the city that she is, should just naturally have more paved sidewalks in the residence sections than we have. We hope to see the Town Council start something that will produce more sidewalks.

TWO CABINET MEMBERS

David Lawrence, special correspondent of The Birmingham News, has announced in his Washington reports, the definite selection by President-elect Harding of two members of his cabinet, namely: Henry C. Wallace of Des Moines, Iowa, for Secretary of Agriculture, and Chas. E. Hughes, of New York, for Secretary of State.

Mr. Wallace is a Progressive Republican, a former follower of Teddy and successful editor and publisher of "Wallace's Farmer." He is a member of the United Presbyterian Church and a Mason.

The selection of Mr. Hughes for Secretary of State will create confidence everywhere that the foreign policy of the United States is in the hands of a man of extraordinary capacity and fairness. Mr. Hughes is known throughout the world as a distinguished jurist. He made a brilliant record as Governor of the State of New York, distinguished himself on the Supreme Court bench, and came within only a few electoral votes of being elected President of the United States in 1916.

"SUBSCRIBER'S THOUGHTS."

At this critical period of business adjustment in our country, when everything and everybody seems to be searching for that hallowed place of yesteryear called "normalcy," there is much (but not enough) time being given to thought concerning the great many and widely varying conditions that have been, and are now, bearing upon the life and existence of our population. It would seem to us that the burden of the load is resting too heavily upon some and not heavy enough upon others as we traverse our precarious journey on our way back to "normalcy." Indeed there are many people who have been reduced even to actual want and suffering right here in the United States, and it is now vital that the unjust causes that have combined to deprive some of our people of the necessities of life should be ferreted out and corrected quickly.

One class of people should not be more favored than another. We are all supposed to stand upon the same level in the eyes of our faithful and protecting Uncle. We have all been loyal to him in the same degree and fought his battles side by side. Then who has the power to overstep the bounds of the whole category of our organization and hand out the good things to a few and turn others away with a mere pittance, or else nothing at all?

We are publishing this week an interesting article from one of our subscribers who has studied the situation and read much of the newspaper and magazine reports concerning our business transition and economic dilemma. This article presents many facts and figures that come from authoritative statistics, and they will startle those who are not accustomed to thinking along these lines.

Now, of course many will read the things which "Subscriber" has said and pass them by as idle and vague. They are not idle, neither are they vague. Minds that regard them as such are simply careless of the drift of the times. Such carelessness is the greatest evil that confronts our country. If the people of the United States were more thoughtful of their interests and more exacting upon the tremendous organizations that get by under the assumed names of "business" and "commerce," many of the grotesque fallacies that are being perpetrated upon the country would be reduced to naught, and those organizations readily turned into agencies of service, rather than continuing as gigantic blood-sucking profiteering machines.

Many columns could be written on the subjects which "Subscriber" introduces throughout his discourse. His reference to the recruiting of the army and navy to back up the organization called "commerce" in the United States and upon the ocean, is particularly striking. He says that the recruiting of the army in November was something like 17,000. A more recent figure that comes to our attention, appearing in Henry Ford's "Dearbon Independent," places the enlistments into the regular army for the month of November, 1920 at 24,308, and adds the comemnt that this is the largest peace time enlistment for one month in our history.

Whether or not "Subscriber" is correct in his suggestion that this army is being recruited to guard the traveling salesmen of our commercial interests, we are not prepared to state. But one thing sure, it does not look much like a program of disarmament for Uncle Sam when he is putting the khaki on our boys at the rate of twenty-four thousand in one regular ordinary month. Maybe our War Department is going to be prepared to take the land of "normalcy" by conquest when we find where it is.

It may not be possible for you to agree with "Subscriber" in everything he says. Some will accuse him of having socialistic ideas, and very probably others will not use terms as mild as socialistic to express their opinion of it. But that does not matter. Those are his ideas and thoughts deduced from the statistics which he quotes. If others will take those facts and figures and begin to think it matters not whether they think just like "Subscriber" or not. The main thing is to think. Study the inclinations of the signs of the times and ponder over the drift of incidents.

If the millions of people in the United States who have not been observant and alert will arouse and begin to put two and two together they will right away be able to see that it makes four. When people begin to think for themselves and act for themselves we will much sooner get a remedy by which to free the country from the merciless slavery of profiteering commercial organizations backed up by the power of a reinforced army and navy.

THE CAUSE OF WAR AND OTHER PLAGUES

We learn that there are fifty thousand active cases of tuberculosis in Alabama, and one million cases in the United States. 300,000 infants die before reaching one year of age in the United States every year. More than 1,000 miners are killed in this country each year for lack of ventilation in the mines. Ignorance or neglect (or both) is admittedly the chief reason for all of these things. Statistics inform us that there are more convicts in penitentiaries than teachers in the schools of the United States.

It cost 5 billion (50 thousand million) dollars for government expense the past year. 93 cents out of every dollar of this was for interest money on past wars, or in preparation for future wars; while only one cent out of each dollar went for educational purposes. At present six battle ships are being built larger than any heretofore known and 15 to 20 thousand boys are enlisted into the army—and still more in the navy—every month. Factories are closing and robberies and murder are epidemic in the cities. While farmers cannot sell products at cost of production. Now if you don't like these things stop tinkering with consequences and consider causes.

All of them are due principally to the manner in which goods are produced and disposed of. Before the war during "normalcy" millions of men and their wives and children labored in fields and factories, the combined product of their work often failing to provide life's essentials, an abundance of proper food, clothing, shelter and education. In this county, with 30,000 inhabitants, are only two high schools, one of them largely supported by outside contributions. According to reports, much of this comes from Boston or that vicinity. (But this bread cast upon the waters, returns to them well buttered.)

What is the South doing for Boston and vicinity? An article in the American Magazine for December, 1920, states that, when a boy, William Whitman went to Boston with four dollars of borrowed money in his pocket as his total worldly wealth. He is now head of a company that manufactures cloth, which company owns mills from Lawrence, Mass., to Calhoun Falls, S. C. These mills make use of 170 acres of floor space, all acquired as profits from growers of cotton and wool during the lifetime of one man who is still the vigorous active head of the company. Last year the company paid 23 million dollars in taxes to the government. This representing 5 percent of the profits would show a profit of 460 million dollars for one year. This is merely the profit of the manufacturer, and only of one company. Under the present plan of production and marketing, many other expenses are added to the cost. Dealers' and and drayage to mill; and again to the jobber, wholesaler and retailer. This explains why a 15 cent pound of cotton is transformed into $2 to $5 worth of cloth or $5 to $10 worth of shirts; and why 25 cents worth of hides becomes 7 to 15 dollars worth of shoes or harness or lines; and $2 worth of wool becomes a $65 suit of clothes; and 2 cents worth of oats or corn rice or wheat becomes 25 cents worth of breakfast food. Now the vast majority of the population are either farmers, factory workers, clerks or laborers. It is utterly impossible to buy back the finished products which their combined efforts have produced with the small share of the selling price which they receive, and the rest of the population cannot possibly consume it. Hence the absolute necessity for a foreign market for the so-called surplus. Every modern nation is in the same desperate need of a foreign market in order to make the machine go; and generally a number of them has an eagle eye on the same customer. Therefore the army of traveling sales men must be backed by an army and navy with guns, warships, etc. So that in addition to having their labor and its products fed into an impossible contraption called commerce, which only goes by fits and starts (the fits called panics, the starts named prosperity) producers must bear the ever increasing burdens of militarism. It has bankrupted Europe, and is creating a monstrosity in this country that will destroy us unless its methods are modified. Its fruits are poverty, ignorance, disease and crime for many on the one hand and monstrous fortunes (a crime) of hundreds of millions or even billions for a few on the other. Let not the small business man think his position secure. Heretofore 95 per cent have been missing on the final count. And this nation is young yet, and has had marvelous stores of natural wealth to draw upon.

Co-operation properly applied, is the only logical remedy. It eliminates unnecessary handling and extortionate profits between producer and consumer. With the machinery for jacking up prices between producer and consumer cut out the home market can absorb the product and no foreign market is required. Two-thirds of the cotton crop has been going to Europe for years, and what have we got to show for it? Impoverished lands, many merchants and farmers are in financial distress and thousands of farmers are in actual want. Now, these former buyers in Europe are bankrupt. But intelligent co-operation will give us a better market at home than we have ever possessed.

The California raisin and citrus fruit growers, poultrymen, truckers, and other producers saved themselves from extirmination by organization and co-operative marketing. Florida growers are also making a great success, having their own box factories, fertilizer factories, and their own salesmen and purchasing agents in the large cities. But oranges are a finished product when they leave the farm, requiring no factory manipulation; and the demand is capable of absorbing the product in this country at satisfactory prices.

Cotton growers cannot expect profitable customers for two-thirds of their crop in Europe where it has been sold in the past, when the people are bankrupt and cannot possibly pay present obligations. Therefore, we must provide a home market or go broke. Farmers must build and own their own factories. By owning the factories they would own the finished product, which they could sell at a price that would pay liberally for production, and yet low enough to induce people to buy freely and thus consume the product near home.

Other industries besides cotton factories could in time be established, such as dairying with a co-operative creamery, sheep growing and a woolen mill. Then clothing and shoe factories, and factories to manufacture wagons and all kinds of farm machinery. A home market could thus be provided, in time, for everything that could be produced in the county. Other counties could do the same. Employ experts to direct the work under the supervision of a board of managers. Those who could not pay in money for a share in the industry could do so with work. It is high time to declare independence from the profiteering machine that fakes so much and gives so little.

The profits which have been going to the Whitman Company and other cotton factory owners, and to the dealers speculators and railroads getting the cotton to them; and to the railroads for getting the cloth or the clothing back to the consumers, if divided equitably (not equally) between the growers, factory workers and actually necessary selling or distributing agencies, who would mostly live and work near each other, would be sufficient to furnish abundance of nourishing food, clothing and sanitary houses for all, as well as training and education for all. Such goods as could most easily or naturally be produced in one locality, could readily be exchanged (when necessary) for something of equal value from some other part of this or some other country, without passing through the hands of an almost endless chain of hold-up men, politely referred to as middlemen.

The people could, and would, buy and consume all surplus products of fields and factories; and the crop of profiteers would naturally disappear, as would their inevitable fruits of poverty and their consequences, such as tuberculosis, pellagra, etc., etc. also the bloody butcheries called war.

An authority on nutrition says: "The use of liberal amounts of milk, eggs and leafy vegetables in the diet is necessary to induce good nutrition." A medical authority (Anders) says: "In attempting to remove the tubercular tendency the physician must place chief reliance upon the most favorable environment attainable. The value of a change of residence from the city to the country (or the seaside or mountains in selected cases) cannot be overestimated. It often renders the predisposed person immune. Milk and raw eggs are excellent and should be used freely." If these means prevent tuberculosis in those having a tendency to it, by adding necessary vegetables and fruit to these, no one would have the disease. The plan suggested would give the financial means and facilities for providing all of them as well as instruction in hygiene and prevent the crowding of human beings like sardines into certain parts of large cities as is done now; and incidentally remove the tendency or actual causes of many other diseases.

Uncontrolled greed is essentially the underlying cause of all these things, including war. There should be enough altruism and manhood developed by 2,000 years of teaching the principles of the Christian religion to put a stop to these things by removing their causes.

Make the world safe for everybody, and not alone for the profiteers and their friends and supporters who help them to "cut the melon" from which they take all the good red meat, and leave only the rind for those who produce the melon.

GLENDALE

This has truly been a gala week. Plenty of visiting and a good time generally. Several have been heard to remark that they have never before had such a good time with so little money to spend.

Mr. and Mrs. Holly Franks are being congratulated upon the arrival of a baby girl at their home, whom they have named Mamie Mae.

Quite a number of young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Norrell Christmas evening for an old time celebration. Holly, mistletoe and Japanese lanterns formed the attractive decorations. Frappe was served from a beautifully appointed table by Mrs. A. F. Taylor of Montgomery. The handsome silver service which was used was the gift of the Southside Baptist Church of Montgomery to Mrs. Norrell, who for five years was the faithful organist. A lively contest was on throughout the evening at the conclusion of which the prize, a box of divinity candy, was awarded to Miss Lou Ella McDowell and Mr. Mitchell DeVaughn. The booby, a couple of nuts, was awarded to Mr. German Sandlin and Miss Lera Miller.

Dizzy—Wrecked His Automobile

"Two years ago my stomach trouble got so bad that I was almost constantly filled with gas. This made me very dizzy at times. Last Fall I was almost overcome by one of those dizzy spells while driving my car, and ran into a telephone pole, badly wrecking the car. A friend recommended Mayr's Wonderful Remedy for my trouble. Since taking the first dose I have constantly improved, and feel better now than ever in my life." It is a simple harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all of stomach, liver and intestinal ailments, including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. For sale by Alred Drug Co., Clanton, and Druggists everywhere.

An Appeal to the American People

THREE and one-half million children in Eastern and Central Europe have no alternative to disaster between now and next harvest except American aid. For months these most helpless sufferers in the track of war have been admitted to American feeding-stations only if tragically undernourished, and have received American medical aid only if desperately threatened by death from disease.

One 5 cent hot American meal today has saved a thousand lives.

Winter is closing down. The money of many nations is valueless outside their own boundaries. Economic and crop conditions make famine, with its terrible train of diseases, a certain visitor until next harvest. Inevitably the helpless children will suffer most. No child can grow to health and sanity on the pitiful makeshifts for food with which millions of European adults must content themselves this winter. It is obvious that the remedy can come only from outside.

America saved 6,000,000 European children winter before last. Normal recuperation cut the need nearly in half last year, but unusual conditions have resulted in scant shrinkage of child destitution during the twelvemonth just past. The response of America must now decide whether 3,500,000 of these charges, in acute distress, shall begin to be turned away in January from more than 17,000 asylums, hospitals, clinics and feeding-stations dependent on American support. There would be no tragedy in history so sweeping or so destructive of those who can deserve no evil.

The undersigned organizations, working among every race and creed, many engaged also in other forms of relief, agree unanimously that the plight of these helpless children should have complete priority in overseas charity until the situation is met. This is an issue without politics and without religious lines. There can be no danger of pauperization, for the $23,000,000 for child food, and the $10,000,000 for medical service that we seek, will relieve only the critical cases. The medical supplies, of course, must be an unqualified gift, but for every American dollar used in child-feeding, the governments and communities aided furnish two dollars in the form of transportation, rent, labor, clerical help, cash contributions and such food supplies as are locally obtainable.

America has not failed in the past in great heartedness. She has never had a more poignant call than this. Contributions should be turned over to the local committees which are now being formed for this national collection, or sent to Franklin K. Lane, Treasurer, Guaranty Trust Co., New York City.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure catarrhal deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever. Many cases of deafness are caused by catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. Hall's Catarrh Medicine acts thru the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system.

Mr. and Mrs. James E. Biggs left Sunday night for Peterman, Ala., where they will spend the week with relatives of Mr. Biggs.

Don't forget the concert on new year's eve at the Lutheran Church.

On Monday night the annual Xmas festival was rendered by the Lutheran Sunday School. The church was beautifully decorated and a lovely Christmas tree was enjoyed. A long program was fully enjoyed by a large audience. After the program, bags which contained apples, oranges, nuts and candy were distributed to all the children present.

On Christmas day a number of relatives enjoyed a big Christmas dinner at the home of Mrs. J. A. M. Bosworth.

Misses Agnes and Ruth Gerald of Thorsby are spending a few days in Clanton visiting Mrs. P. W. Horn and Mrs. L. F. Gerald.

SOUR STOMACH INDIGESTION

Thedford's Black-Draught Highly Recommended by a Tennessee Grocer for Troubles Resulting from Torpid Liver.

East Nashville, Tenn.— The efficiency of Thedford's Black-Draught, the genuine, herb, liver medicine, is vouched for by Mr. W. N. Parsons, a grocer of this city. "It is without doubt the best liver medicine, and I don't believe I could get along without it. I take it for sour stomach, headache, bad liver, indigestion, and all other troubles that are the result of a torpid liver.

"I have known and used it for years, and can and do highly recommend it to every one. I won't go to bed without it in the house. It will do all it claims to do. I can't say enough for it."

Many other men and women throughout the country have found Black-Draught just as Mr Parsons describes —valuable in regulating the liver to its normal functions, and in cleansing the bowels of impurities.

Thedford's Black-Draught liver medicine is the original and only genuine. Accept no imitations or substitutes. Always ask for Thedford's. E 68

WAGON LOADS OF NEED LIKE THIS IN POLAND are a commonplace sight on hundreds of roads in Europe. More than 1,308,000 Polish children received free American meals every day during the height of last winter. This winter the situation will undoubtedly be worse, as it will be in Austria and other portions left economically dazed by war. To prevent the greatest tragedy to children that the world has ever known eight great American organizations, under the name of the European Relief Council, are seeking $33,000,000 for food and medical assistance.

30,000 YOUNGSTERS VICTIMS OF RICKETS

Of all diseases that are taking a deadly toll among the children of Vienna as the result of under-feeding rickets is proving the most serious and widespread menace. Not less than 30,000 children are suffering from this painful affliction, according to official estimates.

To rescue these through providing proper food, clothing and medical attention that otherwise they cannot obtain the European Relief Council, composed of eight leading American relief agencies, is making a joint appeal for $33,000,000 for the relief of 3,500,000 destitute and suffering European children.

1,500,000 POLISH CHILDREN SICK.

One million five hundred thousand children in Poland today need medical attention. Their condition has been caused by hunger and want. To save them the European Relief Council is appealing to the people of the United States for $33,000,000 to carry on relief work in stricken Europe.

PLIGHT OF REFUGEE CHILDREN TERRIBLE

One hundred thousand Russian refugees in Poland are absolutely destitute, according to official estimates. The majority of them are women and children. The condition of the latter particularly is pitiful and they will be among the beneficiaries from the $33,000,000 fund being raised by the European Relief Council, composed of eight leading American relief agencies for a joint appeal in behalf of the millions of little Europeans who can look only to America for the food, clothing and medical care that will make it possible for them to survive the winter.

CONTRIBUTIONS EXEMPT FROM TAXATION.

Contributions to the collection of the European Relief Council for the European children's relief fund are exempt from taxation and may be deducted from income tax returns, according to a ruling that has been made by the office of Internal Revenue in Washington.

FAVORS PROTECTION OF THE COTTON SEED MEN

Senator Tom Heflin Will Vote For Protection of Peanuts and Cotton Seed

Senator J. Thos. Heflin is in favor of all legislation that will afford protection to peanut and cotton seed producers in Alabama. He has so advised M. C. Algood, commissioner of agriculture, who ever since the emergency tariff bill was first proposed, has exerted every effort to have cottonseed and peanuts included in the provisions of this measure.

Senator Heflin is only one of the entire Alabama delegation in congress which has been appealed to by farmers in this state, asking that they use their influence and good offices to secure the passage of the emergency tariff act. The bill has already passed the house of representatives, but it is feared it may meet defeat in the senate unless every interest involved rallies to its support.

Commissioner of Agriculture, Allgood, himself is heartily in favor of the proposed emergency tariff bill, and urges that the question of its passage be made a matter of paramount consideration. He states in his opinion the adoption of this measure is a question of national importance, a question that is necessarily economic rather than political. "The farmer can no more afford to compete with foreign products, produced by cheap labor than can the manufacturer," Mr. Algood says.

CLANTON BAPTIST CHURCH

Most of the congregation spent Christmas Sunday at home last Sunday morning, but we trust they will be at the service next Sunday, that being the first Sunday of the new year. The subject for the morning service will be "The Joy of Religion." The spirit of this sermon will help you to enter upon the new year with a bright optimistic outlook and cure the blues if you have any. Christianity is a joyous religion to those who have enough of it to make them happy. Unfortunately some have just enough of it to keep them always miserable. When we do our duty toward God and man as Christians we enjoy life much better.

At the close of the morning service the ordinance of the Lord's Supper will be observed. We trust all the membership as far as possible will be present.

The Sunbeams, Junior and Senior B. Y. P. U. bands will meet as usual.

Visitors cordially invited to our services.

In view of the weather being so bad last Sunday night, and the impossibility of holding services, the service at our church will not be held on next Sunday night so that all the members can attend the night service at the Methodist Church and extend a hearty welcome to the incoming pastor.

Real Work.

Old Hilton had strong ideas on many things, and never hesitated to voice them. One day he was accosted by a healthy looking individual, who begged for a copper to buy food.

Hilton eyed the man sternly.

"Why do you waste your time in begging?" he said coldly. "You had ought to be working."

The suppliant drew himself erect.

"Have you ever begged?" he demanded in return.

"Of course not!" snapped old Hilton angrily.

"Then you don't know what work it is!" the beggar retorted.—London Tit-Bits.

ROBT. TEEL OUT ON BOND

The preliminary trial of Robert A. Teel, charged with the killing of G. S. Jones, was held in the County Court before Judye Reynolds on last Thursday. Teel was given bond in the sum of $2,500, which he made at once.

More than a dozen witnesses were examined as to their knowledge of incidents connected with the fight between Teel and Jones, which resulted in the death of the latter. The defendant was represented by Attorneys Curry and Reynolds of Clanton. The prosecution was in charge of County Solicitor, Walker, and Attorney, F. Lloyd Tate of Montgomery.

Dr. Will S. Wilson, dentist, of Fairfield, was in Clanton during the holidays, visiting friends and relatives.

It is not safe to buy land or to lend money and accept land as security without first investigating the title of the land. Often there are unpaid mortgages, judgments, or other liens affecting the title, which an abstract would set out. Therefore, when buying land or lending money thereon, it is important that an abstract of title be furnished. A few dollars spent for an abstract is cheaper than going ahead and having a law suit a little later on.

He worked on the Banner for several years as a typesetter, and was Editor and manager of The Union-Banner while the present owners were in the army during the recent war.

Clyde J. Davis, former newspeper man of Clanton but now hailing from Greenville, S. C., spent the holidays here with his mother, Mrs. Jennie Davis. C. J. says he often recollects the days he spent at the case on the old Banner and Press in Clanton, but he finds his work with Bradstreet's far more pleasant and renumerative. He expects soon to be transferred to the Montgomery office of his company.

Dr. Calvin Wilson of Montevallo was a visitor to Clanton Tuesday.

Billion to be Saved By the Republican Leaders

REFUSE EXECUTIVE REQUESTS WHICH WOULD LEAD TO A DEFICIT IN TREASURY NEXT YEAR.

(By Snell Smith.)

Washington, Dec. 29—Representative Frank W. Mondell, majority leader of the House, has sounded the death knell of high government expenditures.

He has announced in the House that he and the Republican party are in favor of tax reductions, but that these must be preceded by further cutting down of expenditures.

"Our people," he says, "have borne with extraordinary patience and patriotism a tax burden which has paid a much larger proportion of our war costs out of current revenues than has been paid by any other people engaged in the world war. While the war lasted, and during the succeeding period in which we were meeting our war obligations, there was comparatively little criticism or complaint of even the most burdensome, inequitable and hampering of war taxes. But with the passage of two full years since the signing of the armistice the demand for relief from the federal taxes which vex, annoy and inequitably burden the individual and which seriously interfere in the normal flow of business and the development of industry, has become well nigh universal. There is no appeal before Congress more general and more imperative than this.

Expenditures Must be Cut.

"No considerable or satisfactory relief from tax burdens can be afforded, however, until we shall have laid the foundations of such relief by a very considerable reduction in government expenditures. Fortunately the Republican Congress has in the last eighteen months made real and substantial progress in this direction. The total net ordinary expenditures of the government decreased from $18,514,000,000 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, to $6,403,000,000 in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920.

Surplus Was Made Sure

"This Congress in its first session, reduced the appropriations carried by the eight regular supply bills for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, which had failed of passage in the former Congress in the sum of approximately $940,000,000 below what those bills carried when last considered by the former Congress, and $1,685,000,000 less than the administration estimates for the same services. This enormous reduction in appropriations below the estimates of the departments and the sums carried by the appropriation bills as they failed in the Sixty-fifth Congress had the effect of transforming an anticipated deficit into a surplus of $291,000,000 of ordinary receipts over ordinary net disbursements for the year ending June 30 last.

Last Year Big Saving Made

"In the second session of this Congress the total of appropriations carried by the regular supply bills was $1,474,000,000 below the administration estimates, and this stupendous saving bids fair to accomplish even more satisfactory results in government finances for the current fiscal year.

"The Secretary of the Treasury estimates our total receipts for the present fiscal year at $5,799,758,375 and our expenditures at $4,851,298,931, an excess of receipts over expenditures of $948,459,444. This sum would be available for reduction of our total indebtedness.

"The situation thus presented will under the circumstances be a very satisfactory one were we assured of a progressive reduction of federal expenditures such as we have been able to accomplish in the last eighteen months. Unfortunately, however, the estimates presented to us by the executive departments, through the Secretary of the Treasury, not only do not propose or contemplate a further reduction in government expenditures, but an increase of over a billion dollars. The total of the regular estimates for the thirteen appropriation bills are $1,098,535,805 in excess of the current appropriations for the same services. I leave it to others to properly characterize these etsimates. My wonder grows as I examine these collossal estimates after having read in his annual report the appeal of the Secretary of the Treasury, who submitted them, for the practice of rigid economy in government expenditures, and the President's reminder in his recent message of the need of economy. Such inconsistencies are measureless and unfathomable.

"The people are looking to this Congress for relief. We shall not disappoint them."

Relief for Maternity Ills.

While Congress, in the pursuit of this economy record has eliminated all "pork barrel" legislation for internal improvements, such as public buildings and rivers and harbors, it is not neglecting opportunities for the furtherance of progressive social welfare legislation. This is indicated by the passage through the Senate of the bill to promote maternal and infant hygiene by the establishment of agencies in the Childrens Bureau for co-operation with the states in the distribution of information. The immediate direction of the work is to rest with the states, and the work is to be carried out in such manner as may be mutually agreed upon by the federal and state authorities.

The information will be distributed through bulletins, public health nurses, consultation centers, lectures and other suitable methods. Whenever necessary, and especially in remote areas, medical and nursing care for mothers and infants may be provided, insofar as suitable funds may permit.

States Aided to Do the Work

A federal board of maternal and infant hygiene, composed of the Secretary of Labor as chairman, the chief of the Childrens Bureau as executive officer, the Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, and the Commissioner of Education is created to represent the federal government in co-operating with state agencies. Any state may co-operate by the legislature authorizing a state board of maternal and infant hygiene or a child welfare or a child hygiene division of the state board of health to represent the state. Acceptance of the plan by the federal board qualifies the state to receive $10,000 from the United States Treasury to aid in enacting its details and also to receive a share of an additional federal appropriation conditioned upon ilke appropriation by the state itself.

Here are the reasons for the bill's enactment. It developed at the hearings that 23,000 mothers in the United States died from causes incident to child-birth and that 250,000 infants less than one year old perished during the same year.

New Field of Rescue Work.

It was made clear that lack of instruction and care not only led to such deaths, but reduced vitality and permanently impaired the health of many thousands of those who survived. In March, 1920, the Metropolitan Life Insurance Compeny issued a statistical bulletin, in which it was stated that even at this late date more women between the ages of 15 and 45 die from causes incident to child bearing than from any other cause except tuberculosis; that this condition has begun to interest those concerned with the conservation of human life; and that, as a result, a hitherto undeveloped field of public health work has been opened up.

Republicans May Rejoice

Republicans ought to rejoice at the control by them of so many of the legislatures of the states of the Union. The completion of the census of 1920 makes it mandatory upon Congress that there be a reapportionment of the representatives in the House. With 170 majority, the majority party will have no difficulty in putting through its program. The Republican caucus has approved an increase in the total number. This will be from the 435 at present to 483 to be voted for in the Congressional election of 1922. The present ratio is one representative to every 211,000 people in the country, except in states which have population less than that number. The future ratio will be one for every 258,979 people. Under this ratio California will receive five new members and New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan and Ohio will receive four additional members each. Other than these the new members would be: Alabama, 1; Arkansas, 1; Delaware, 1; Georgia, 1; Illinois, 3; Massachusetts, 2; Maryland, 1;Minnesota 1; New Jersey, 2; New Mexico, 1; North Carolina, 2; Oklahoma, 1; Oregon, 1; South Carolina, 1; Tennessee, 1; Texas, 3; Virginia, 1; Washington, 1; West Virginia, 1; and Wisconsin, 1. The importance of the State legislatures lies in the fact that they will make the boundaries of the new districts, "gerrymander" them is the term which expresses the device of rearranging them so that the party will suffer no harm in voting power at the subsequent election. The last apportionment found the Republican party in sore straits as the result of the split in is ranks. This time the Democrats will be in an even worse condition.

Fess Elated Over Kept Promises.

Representative Simeon D. Fess of Ohio, Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, relates in pride the record of the Republican House in keeping its campaign promises. After mentioning the one-year limitation of immigration, he says:

"Another platform pledge, the repeal of the war laws, was also taken up at once, considered and passed in record time. Throughout the campaign the people were told that the cost of government must be reduced from a war to a peace basis. This could not be accomplished while war laws, under which war agencies were created, persisted. To years after the war virtually ended these laws remained through the grace af a presidential pocket veto of the measure to repeal them.

"This session, in obedience to the pledge to the country the House has brought the repeal act on the floor and passed it.

"Another retrenchment act in obedience to a platform pledge was the reorganization of the departments of the government to eliminate duplication, insure higher efficiency of service, and reduce the cost to an economic basis. This measure was considered and passed in record time.

No Anti-Government Aid.

"Thus far the program of readjustment is promising:

"Steps to guard the government against foreign anti-government propaganda.

"The repeal of the war laws by which numerous war agencies are dismantled and a saving of unnecessary expense to the government.

"The first steps to reorganization of the departments in the interest of economy.

"In addition, the appropriations Committee are pruning the estimates of bureaus to the bone, and warning all department chiefs and bureau heads against unlawful creation of deficiencies.

"In addition the Ways and Means Committee has conducted hearings upon which remedial tariff legislation is promised in protection of the American producer.

"This committee is also taking the steps to formulate some relief from a war burdensome tax system.

"Both houses have taken steps looking to some relief of the agriculturist from the injuries of war legislation.

"Thus far the last three weeks of the last session of the 66th Congress augur well for the country."

Is Kahn a Lemon?

Julius Kahn, of California, who was an actor before he became a member of Congress, played one of his roles in a conference of farmer members discussing the tariff bill, and as a result one of California's products got protection in the bill reported later.

The conference was called to consider whether the bill tentatively agreed to was as far reaching as the farmers desired. Representative Miller demanded protection on salmon and was accorded it. Representative Graham of Illinois, expressed a desire to have frozen beef protected and got it.

Miss U. L. Jones of Birmingham is visiting relatives here.

Gained Ten Pounds

Before Taking ZIRON, Alabama Man Was Weak, Nervous, Had No Appetite, But is Now Strong.

EVERY man and woman, who is in a run-down, weak condition, with bad complexion and poor appetite, due to lack of iron in their blood, should find Ziron helpful and strength-building.

It is a scientific, reconstructive tonic, composed of ingredients recommended by leading medical authorities.

Describing his experience with Ziron, Mr. George W. S. Lanier writes from Jones, Ala.: "Sometime back, I was in a terrible condition. I was weak and nervous, and had a tired feeling all the time. My skin was muddy. I had no appetite, and at morning I didn't feel like getting up. I was reading of Ziron and decided I would try it . . .

"Will say that Ziron is a good medicine. I have gained ten pounds in four months. Am strong and have a good appetite."

Ziron is a mild iron tonic, good for young and old. It helps to restore the system, when run-down by overwork, under-nourishment, caused by stomach or bowel disorders, or as a result of some weakening illness.

Get Ziron from your druggist. He sells it on a money-back guarantee

SCOTT PLEASED WITH RESULT SINCE SMOKE OF BATTLE IS CLEARED AWAY.

Irondale, Ala., Dec. 28, 1920.
Editor Union-Banner:

Here I come for another space in your good old paper. I want the boys all to know that I am still living yet but I had to wait till the atmosphere cleared away to rise up over the recent election, for we broke all records, especially in the South. I want to say that we had more than a landslide for the Republican party everywhere. In the place of having three majority in the House next time, we will have 151, and 22 majority in the Senate. And it didn't take ten days this time to tell who was elected.

I want to say that the Democratic party is sick unto death and they have no hopes of reviving in the next half a century. I was up in Tennesee last month, and you Alabama boys ought to hear those people up there talking Republicanism. They are the proudest people over the victory that I ever saw. They were discussing who would be cabinet members and who would be federal officers in their state. In all of my rounds I did not hear a Democratic conversation. They seem to be all dead up there.

Let us keep our eyes on Tennessee during the next four years.

Brother Republicans, I say that we need a change in Alabama also and if we will go to work and show the people why we need a change in Alabama from the Democratic rule we can get it two years from now. But the first thing the Republican party needs is some daily papers in the state as you know all the daily papers in the state now are against the Republican party. I hope we will soon have a daily paper started up in the interest of the Republican party in Alabama, for I see the need of it, and I hope others will se it also. I wish to hear from someone else on the proposition.

Wishing The Union-Banner and all its readers much success and happiness during the new year, I am the same as ever, J. N. SCOTT.

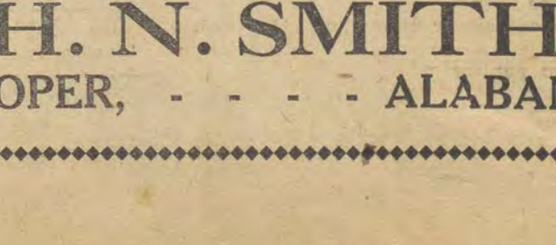
A Strong Race.

Just before the election Jones was canvassing his neighbors in his own campaign interests. Entering the Brown's yard he was about to ring the bell when a large and ferocious bulldog suddenly made appearance, and Jones made a correspondingly sudden retreat.

From a window a voice shouted:

"Hey there, what are you running for?"

And back over his shoulder Jones flung the reply:



"County dog catcher."
